

The Week in Erasure

Vol. 1

Monday 14 September – Sunday 20 September 2026

1398 things stopped existing on Wikipedia this week.

On Wikipedia, a link to a page that does not exist turns red. Every title in red here no longer exists.

This is one week of erasure, in the order it happened: the pages argued over, and the pages erased without a word. Everything is set at the same size.

The threads connect the words the debates repeated most, from each appearance to the next.

MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER

23:58 Gloss (character). Nominated: I propose merging to New Guardians because it has a lack of notable sources. redirect: (as in don't merge), essentially per nom. the article has no secondary sources, so adding too much info on gloss would just veer into fancruft territory Merge: per nominator's rationale. Some content can be salvaged. Merge: Per nom; same rationale as my comment at Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Catseye (character). In solidarity, (?) Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances. Verdict: to New Guardians. Merged into another page.

23:46 Quarto railway station. Nominated: Per WP:NTRAINSTATION train stations are not inherently notable. The research I did turned up only passing mentions and WP:RUNOFTHEMILL coverage such as timetables and announcements of work getting done. Verdict: to Circumflegrea railway. This non-controversial nomination with limited discussion has been closed as a 'soft' redirect, similar to a WP:BLAR. See WP:SOFTBLAR for caveats. Merged into another page.

04:12 Eckhard Gerdes. Nominated: I nominated this article for deletion because its subject does not seem to be notable enough to have his own Wikipedia article. Additionally, strange word choices and unfamiliar formatting made me suspicious of its authorship. These suspicions were proved accurate when I went digging and found that many of this page's early edits were made by a now-deleted user named "Egerdes," leading me to believe that this page received a concerning amount of contributions from its own subject. Delete: autobiographies are disfavored because they almost always have original content. The evidence is that the creator is named , who only edits this article and a few others every year or two. However, it's much worse now, because our critics, including powerful men from Boca Chica to Palm Beach, want to use any excuse (such as a conflict of interests) to take away our charitable status, which would cripple us financially. Verdict: Merged into another page.

MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER

23:29 Bobst Boy. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Bobst Library because the subject's significance is pretty much only the 2003–04 Bobst Library incident, and looking through the sources, the New York Times article is essentially just a short blurb about this particular incident, not a particularly extensive article about this incident. The other sources also aren't very long too to establish NOTABILITY. Merge: more an interesting trivia about the library. Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances. WP:BLP1E clearly applies. Merge: with Bobst Library per WP:BLP1E, WP:BASIC, and WP:ROUTINE. The sources don't demonstrate significant coverage. Verdict: to Bobst Library. Merged into another page.

23:28 Zandile Dabula. Nominated: No evidence of this anti-migrant activist receiving sufficient in-depth coverage to meet WP:GNG. All sources are either trivial mentions or just repeating her own words (1, 2). Also AI-generated. Delete: everyone should know that we are not a soapbox and we are not Grokpedia. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:19 4Kaya Films. Nominated: No evidence of notability for this film production company. All sources are passing mentions. This would probably be the best source, and even then it provides virtually no direct coverage. Redirect: to Welcome to Maula Prison, the only notable film (out of two) the company has produced. Delete: Usual mix of dodgy references with no real coverage to support a redirect. Unknown really. Probably the core reason for a redirect, thinking about it. Verdict: to Welcome to Maula Prison per WP:ATD. Merged into another page.

23:11 Jackie Kantambe. Nominated: No evidence of meeting WP:GNG or WP:CREATIVE. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. The MASO award does not by itself create notability, and the current sources are weak. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

22:19 Hypothetical zeolite. Nominated: I propose draftifying because this article, not only being not up to the requirements of encyclopedic tone, seemed to refer to a topic that might not meet the article notability requirements. Although there are four papers that it cited, they seem to be entirely primary. Even if it were notable, the article has yet to show such aspects. Indeed, due to the vast range of substances describable via computation, if this article were to be justified to exist, then so would a rather large number of niche computational studies. I would be glad to hear any arguments for or against such a take. Keep: I corrected one source, then checked the citation numbers for the others which in GS are 221, 245, 2498, 280. Those are fairly hefty, so I don't agree with draftification as I do not know exactly what that would achieve at this stage. At most merge to another article. If decision is to merge...: suggest creating a new section in the article Mineral for related concepts. A key decision is whether to bind the content to 'hypothetical' or the more restrictive 'theoretical'; in other words, should the new section be "hypothetical minerals" or "theoretical minerals" or even "proposed minerals not yet described". --User:Ceyockey () Keep: The page was created in 2010, so draftification is not appropriate. The title of the page has enough hits in Google Scholar, such as Toward a Database of Hypothetical Zeolite Structures, so it is notable. If merging, then to Zeolite. Verdict: to Zeolite. All participants agree on merging (as first or second choice). Existing Zeolite article appears best immediate target. Merged into another page.

22:16 Princess Sara bint Faisal. Nominated: Fails WP:SIGCOV. This is a private figure about whom we have nothing to say because sources say nothing (and have nothing to say). Redirect: to the mention on her father's page, i.e. , as an ATD; no sign of meeting WP:GNG or WP:NBIO. Redirect: I have the same comment for all four nominations here; put all family members on one page Redirect: to Prince Faisal bin Hussein#Personal life per WP:ATD; lack of significant coverage to show WP:BASIC or WP:GNG. I will also !vote on the other noms. Verdict: to Prince Faisal bin Hussein#Personal life. Merged into another page.

22:15 Princess Ayah bint Faisal. Nominated: Fails WP:SIGCOV. This is a private figure about whom we have nothing to say&m-dash;except genealogical data. Keep: We do have more than genealogical data. As the article already says, . Redirect: to the mention on her father's page, i.e. , as an ATD; being appointed to the board of various notable organisations does not in itself confer notability, and there doesn't seem to be any WP:SIGCOV beyond WP:TRIVIALMENTIONS. Redirect: Redirect as suggested above, no need to keep a separate page for each family member Redirect: to Prince Faisal bin Hussein#Personal life per WP:ATD; lack of significant coverage to show WP:BASIC or WP:GNG. I will also !vote on the other noms. Verdict: to Prince Faisal bin Hussein#Personal life. Merged into another page.

22:15 Princess Aisha bint Faisal. Nominated: Fails WP:SIGCOV.

This is a private figure about whom we have nothing to say because sources say nothing (and have nothing to say). Keep: not merely a private figure. In addition to SIGCOV from profiles and engagement and wedding coverage, I found the following: Redirect: to the mention on her father's page, i.e. , as an ATD; no sign of any WP:SIGCOV other than WP:GOSSIP and WP:TRIVIALMENTIONS. Redirect: It doesn't make much sense for each family member to have their own page. If there are only a couple of notable things, that could be added to that page itself Redirect: to Prince Faisal bin Hussein#Personal life per WP:ATD; lack of significant coverage to show WP:BASIC or WP:GNG. I will also !vote on the other noms. Verdict: to Prince Faisal bin Hussein#Personal life. Merged into another page.

22:14 Prince Omar bin Faisal. Nominated: Fails WP:SIGCOV.

This is a private figure about whom we have nothing to say because sources say nothing (and have nothing to say). Redirect: to the mention on his father's page, i.e. , as an ATD; no sign of meeting WP:GNG or WP:NBIO. Redirect: No point in having each family member have their separate page, all should be redirected as suggested above. Same for the three discussions above Redirect: to Prince Faisal bin Hussein#Personal life per WP:ATD; lack of significant coverage to show WP:BASIC or WP:GNG. I will also !vote on the other noms. Verdict: to Prince Faisal bin Hussein#Personal life. Merged into another page.

00:00 London County Council (Loans) Act 1955. Nominated: I propose draftifying because I can't find many sources/etc on this topic and the article lacks them right now. I can't find many sources, but I tried to look on places like jstor, etc. It seems to break WP:GNG The article seems to have a lot of WP:OR, because there's a lot of content that seems like it mimics the Third Schedule of the law (<https://www.legislation.gov.uk/ukla/Eliz2/4-5/26/> pdfs/ukla_19550026_en.pdf). Provisional redirect without prejudice to London County Council: which was the original target of this redirect that was later expanded into an article. There is some coverage of this local and personal Act in Google Books (which is about borrowing provisions in the London County Council (Money) Bill 1953 and their precursors etc. There is enough coverage for an article on the whole history of the preceding and subsequent legislation, and the system of loans and borrowing (and expenditure and finances) generally, perhaps at London County Council loans. Draftification is not appropriate: A perfectly valid redirect should not be moved from the mainspace to the draftspace. (It is also obvious that draftification would not result in improvements.) Redirect: as suggested, and as reasonable in these circumstances. Verdict: to London County Council. Merged into another page.

00:00 Glasgow Airport Link. Nominated: I propose merging both of these to Glasgow Airport#Bus (possibly selectively) because these former airport bus services do not appear to pass WP:GNG. Alternatively, Glasgow Flyer could be merged to Arriva Scotland West as its former operator. Merge: this feels like a suitable section in Glasgow Airport. It's a major infrastructure works proposal that never took off, and is strongly linked to the proposed merge destination. Delete: There's nothing to merge. Any major airport will have coach services like this. This one's been defunct for close to 20 years. A more suitable target would be Fairline Coaches, which has since merged with West Coast Motors. Delete: both. Defunct bus services would definitely not be encyclopedic on the airport page (the Glasgow Airport#Bus section is already overly detailed per WP:NOTRAVEL) and I'm not convinced that they would be due on the former operators' pages either. Redirect: at least Glasgow Flyer as it is mentioned already at the target. Delete: Glasgow Airport Link - its a long defunct bus service, and the sources provided in that article wouldn't demonstrate it meets WP:GNG in any case. Redirect Glasgow Flyer per The Bushranger. Redirect: Though I looked, I couldn't find any sources that show this meets WP:GNG; however, I still think redirecting to Glasgow

Flyer or Glasgow Airport would be better per WP:ATD. Verdict: to Glasgow Flyer. There is no support for retaining this as a stand-alone article, and with no further discussion after one relist I am closing it as a redirect per WP:ATD, selecting the target because an editor stated the subject is already discussed there. If... Merged into another page.

00:00 Stephanie Seungmin Kim (curator). Nominated: See Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Stephanie Seungmin Kim. This page was already previously deleted and has had cross-wiki issues with UCOI. This user circumvented AFC. Moved from draftspace to mainspace very likely by a UCOI user. Has ignored questions on their talk page about whether they have a COI. Delete and salt: This should not have been created. The article has no demonstration of WP:BASIC, and I couldn't find any in my own source-searching. It doesn't address any issues brought up in the previous deletion discussion and is most likely the product of a COI. Delete and salt: Obvious COI case, no indication of WP:GNG being met by the (largely primary) sources. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Dancho Danchev. Nominated: Refiling after contested soft delete. Delete: per nom. The only coverage about him is about him missing, which is 1E. Wikipedia.gptzero.me also says that the article was AI-generated with a 100% probability. Redirect is not appropriate as the target includes only notable people (with a few exceptions). Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources, and, as I've written before, "Forbes is a crust of a shell of a carcass of a formerly reliable source." Also, everyone should know that we are not a soapbox and we are not Grokpedia. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Wound bed preparation. Nominated: I have brought this to AfD because my review of this article is bringing in many policies and guidelines, so I would appreciate additional perspectives. The article has had cleanup tags for many years, but also WP:DEADLINE. But I think the existence of the aged tags without resolution hints at an underlying issue with the article itself. Keep: It has many hits in Google Scholar. Draftification is not appropriate as the page was created in 2011 (50% of the text is still from that revision). WP:NOTCLEANUP. Weak keep: based on what's available. Issues of undue weight for primary sources or similar problems are editorial issues, not for this forum. I'm hesitant to draftify an article that's been around for a while. Keep: Certainly could be rewritten but as it stands it is sourced and certainly better than nothing. Not a TNT candidate and an obviously notable topic. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Sravasti Abbey. Nominated: This article fails WP:GNG. It has no reliable sources. It cites mostly to the article subject's website which is WP:PRIMARY. I suppose a bit of primary for a religious sect is appropriate but this article is in wikivoice and should meet a higher standards. Keep: I think Tracy Simmons and her outlet FAVS are reliable. This is how she is identified, , so she is rather mainstream and her work is regularly republished by others. This, together with OPB, is enough for GNG. Verdict: (non-admin closure) 🍒🥧 Merged into another page.

00:00 Statue of Charlie Kirk (McCann). Nominated: Article is tagged with GNG, has no other notability other than being unveiled, and vandalized. Merge: for the few lines of text, this can be merged into the main Turning Point article. Rather non-notable work of art, articles only talking about it being vandalized. Merge: the statue does not meet notability guidelines for a standalone article. Merge: I am trying to understand how WP:LOCAL applies here. There is considerable local press regarding the work, but on the world stage it seems to be less significant than Freedom (statue). There is scant detail regarding the commission, materials, design, making of the work in the local press, which emphasizes the tragedy more than the work. I am not convinced that even the local press actually covers the work. The world press regarding statue of Charlie Kirk seems to discuss the other sculpture per this, this and this.- (/ WP:FOUR / WP:CHICAGO / WP:WAWARD) Wait: then merge. is right: The article and its subject are both too young to judge notability just yet. Give it a week or two, then if no additional coverage exists, merge. Wait:

then merge. See whether the artwork receives more media coverage or significant reception. Wait: then merge per Apoxyomenus. Merge: Generally there should be significant media coverage that allows notability to be judged before a page is created. Since it's at the TP headquarters it can be covered in that context without another discussion at a later time. Verdict: to Turning Point USA. At this point there is consensus against a standalone. If or when that changes - not likely within the normal course of an AfD so a "wait" is not viable here - the history remains for it to be spun back... Merged into another page.

00:00 Naval Force of Pennsylvania. Nominated: Under WP:ORG, an article about an organization, of which this page describes an organization: Merge: or redirect to Pennsylvania Navy, specifically the Naval militia section. This fork doesn't really stand alone due to WP:NORG, having only two low quality sources. Merge: I support this merge. Seems like the best overall option. Merge: any relevant content and then made this a redirect to Pennsylvania Navy. Redirect: to Pennsylvania Navy. Verdict: to Pennsylvania Navy. Merged into another page.

00:00 List of Thursday Night Football results (2006–present).

Nominated: Note: This discussion includes all pages included in :Category:NFL on television results Delete: There are now outside sites that compile this work much better (for one, the excellent 506sports), and these pages are loaded with irrelevant trivia and standings tables which should be in the main article, not here (but are also subject to going out of date). Especially now when Monday Night Football outside a couple weeks has now moved back to ABC (no longer needed to disclaim which TV stations they're on, a role we've removed over time due to it acting as a programming guide), we should leave these statistics for team season articles and dispense with these result pages once and for all; outside a few teams without recent success, playing in primetime or internationally has become normalized. • Delete all: I was watching football yesterday but my team will have non-Sunday games later in the season. But I care about their result on a weekly basis and the overall record. Maybe some bigger football fans do, but I have no idea why anyone would care about aggregated past results of matchups on a particular day of the week or in primetime. This is just an artifact of scheduling, with every team having several Monday, Thursday, Saturday, and primetime games each season for the sake of broadcasting and not having all games simultaneously, not something that needs to be recorded separately based on what TV channel got the rights to air it. The statistics or “standings” like List of Monday Night Football results (2020–present)#Team standings (2020–present) are entirely arbitrary and meaningless. The main articles about each program can include what’s important. Lean delete: I think there is some inherent value in this lists to be honest, especially for those of us who use these archives for other purposes. But I can’t find any sources that discuss these results together, and inherent value is not a good reason to keep an article. Delete: No notability for these games as a set or grouping under the WP:NLIST. Delete: Has to be considered a violation of WP:NOTSTATS. –  \lor Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Modified half-normal distribution. Nominated: This article is about a recently introduced probability distribution. This is a legitimate mathematical object and it does make sense to use and discuss it in research papers. However, I have two concerns: Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Eufy. Nominated: ;Proposed merge of eufy and soundcore into Anker Support: go for it. Per WP:PAGEDECIDE, we don’t need stubs on all brands of one company. One article is enough. Keep.: “One Anker” rebranding does not erase the brands’ established notability. it seems both have enough independent coverage to remain separate articles. Per WP:NTEMP and WP:PAGEDECIDE, keep both articles remains reasonable. Merge: per nom. There is not enough content to justify three pages. These two have (without lead) roughly 180 words and 280 words, which can easily fit into the target. This doesn’t take into account notability, which may actually be absent here. Merge: As others have said, the relevant guidance is at WP:PAGEDECIDE. In this case, both standalone articles as well as just one parent one are defensible.

It does seem that a significant part of the material on the sub-brands relates to how the parent company has managed them and responded to controversy, and a lot of the underlying sources deal with them as sub-brands of Anker. Ultimately, a lot is now duplicative between parent and child articles and not much isn't, so a merge is a good editorial suggestion. Without prejudice against someone undoing the merge later if enough sub-brand specific content would emerge to warrant it. Verdict: to Anker along with :soundcore. Merged into another page.

00:00 Attacks on Smonica. Nominated: A near-identical article was already previously deleted. A google search for "Defense of Smolica" shows a blacklisted Wikipedia mirror where the contents are quite similar to this one, save for the title. I originally used WP:G4 but retracted because I wanted to assume good faith and that it could be expanded properly with quality sources; unfortunately that isn't the case. Keep: Although the original "Defense of Smolica" article was deleted, this article suffers from similar issues, mainly original research. I have to admit, most of the article is based off reports of shelling, or firefights. It doesn't meet notability at this time. If we change the article into "Smonica operation/offensive" and have it be about the August 2-4 fighting, would it meet notability? It isn't guaranteed, but it certainly has a higher chance than the current article. Also, two examples of deleted pages, "Attacks in Ponoševac" and "Battles of Ješkovo", were recently created into new pages, Ponoševac clashes and Battle of Ješkovo. The new pages are well-written, and establish notability, compared to the deleted pages. The Smonica page can be undergo the same process and given another chance. Smonica was a KLA base operating from the early stages of the war (April 1998) to the FRY counteroffensive. It is located a few miles west of Gjakova, and the Albanian border, so the KLA used this as a arms smuggling base too. It is notable in relation to the war. Admittedly, it's quite clever to make a page about the village to strengthen the deletion reason. Delete: The page as mentioned is a collection of unconnected articles with no major pieces of reliable sources to back it up or, no sources to back up the claim whatsoever. As this article was already deleted, one better use more reliable sources to recreate this article which I see hasn't been done. The Kosovo War was widely covered in academia so if there are no resources then it means it isn't worthy of publishing. Delete: Weak article and too much POV. There was a similar article that got deleted some time ago on this topic. Draftify: The one keep vote here casts doubt themselves on the notability of what this article is covering. However, I still understand where they're coming, maybe some work can be done. Delete: per nomination and Retronicklespot. Fails WP:GNG and WP:NOTNEWS. Delete: as per nom; it apparently lacks significant coverage. Delete: for lack of extensive coverage. It invites original research. Delete: per nom, lack of significant coverage in sources. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 King Adeyemi Letter To The British Empire. Nominated: This article based on this letter doesnt appear to meet the general notability guideline and there does not seem to be a reason to justify a standalone article here. Merge to Dahomey raids on Yoruba People: as suggested by the nominator, this material can be comfortably covered there. Merge: either to Dahomey raids on Yoruba People or Adeyemi I Alowolodu. Merge: primarily to Dahomey raids on Yoruba People and secondarily to Adeyemi I Alowolodu, per WP:NOPAGE. The material that exists not only poses no size or organizational difficulties at the destination articles, it is in my view clearer to the reader with that additional context. I see no evidence of additional material that would justify a standalone article. Merge with Kiriji War: under the Attempts at peace subsection, or with Yoruba Civil Wars where a subsection can be created for it. Both articles are more than sufficient. A footnote can also be mentioned about it under with Adeyemi I Alowolodu in the 'peace treatise and diplomacy' subsection, as he was the subject. It shouldn't be merged with Dahomey raids on Yoruba People as the topic does not cover the scope of the letters in full, but it may be mentioned there. All the letters written by the monarch were made against the backdrop of the Yoruba Civil Wars which engulfed the region following the collapse of the Oyo empire and attempts at securing lasting peace and securing the border. The ‘belligerent powers’ mentioned in the anchoring letter for example, are the Ibadan and Ekiti parapo sides which were at war (Kiri-ji). Also, what the Dahomeans were said to have ‘taken advantage of’ in the letter was the same ongoing Yoruba Civil War. So, while the letters are indeed notable, the full scope of both letters are well (in-fact better) covered in any of the two afore mentioned main articles. Redirect: to Dahomey raids on Yoruba People, the only coverage that contributes to GNG is a 1897 book, The History of the Yorubas, which is not enough. There are some hits in Google Books, but I did not see anything sufficiently in-depth. Verdict: to Dahomey raids on Yoruba People. Merged into another page.

00:00 Anil Nakka. Nominated: Keep — I have a connection to the subject and am disclosing that here. I would like to point editors to the independent coverage available for consideration. Verdict: Per WP:SK1B and WP:SK3. Closed with no prejudice to any editor in good standing re-nominating the page with a suitable deletion rationale. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:00 Computational irreducibility. Nominated: I PRODed this article with reason = “Wolfram’s original research, without independant secondary source”. Another editor enforces this with reason = Redirect: to A_New_Kind_of_Science#Computational_irreducibility until such time as someone wants to write an actual article about this. The existing text isn’t good enough to justify a page of its own. I’d say it’s in fact bad enough that it shouldn’t be in mainspace. Nor do the sources, either those provided above or those turned up by a literature search, substantiate the idea that this has truly taken off in a way that makes it reasonable to cover separately from NKS. Redirect: to A_New_Kind_of_Science#Computational_irreducibility – With no prejudice against future expansion. Not seeing the sourcing to motivate a standalone article and this is functionally a WP:TNT situation, so returning to a redirect seems like a reasonable editorial outcome until that section gets too large. Cheers, Keep: doesn’t have to be long to be of substance. Strong Keep: I previously only commented on this because I felt that what the nom included was very incomplete; the reason I added to Talk:Computational irreducibility#Article should be deleted and in the DPROD notice on August 29th was reproduced in my comment. Since is requesting an opinion, I will state that I do not see any rationale for a deletion. This is not WP:OR, an opinion that has been cited > 11K has to be considered as notable encyclopedic content. I do not understand the nom's claim or the claim that this is a non-notable fringe theory and should be deleted for that reason. By policy, whether one agrees with them, likes them or hates them, if a theory of any sort has been extensively covered in multiple sources then it is notable, WP:VNOTT. (Like many of us, more than once I have had to accept at AfC/AfD/NPP articles which I thought were very inappropriate, but passed the Wikipedia notability criteria; this is how we have to act. Personal opinions and politics have to be put into a box and left behind when we hit the "edit" button on Wikipedia.) I feel strongly that no policy-based case has been made for either a delete or redirect. Redirect: to NKS. Wolfram gives lots of things grandiose names, whether or not they have any impact in the world. This is a half-baked article on a Wolframism that doesn't seem to have drawn very much attention; the 11K cites mentioned above are for the entire book, not for this specific idea. WP:PAGE-DECIDE suggests that "editors should consider how best to help readers understand" the topic, and that "at times it is better to cover a notable topic as part of a larger page about a broader topic, with more context (and doing so in no way disparages the importance of the topic)". I am not convinced that Wolframian computational irreducibility is more than marginally notable, but whether or not it is, this isolated idea is better understood in the context of Wolfram's book than it is in isolation, and readers would be best served by having it offered to them in that context. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 List of HD channels in the United Kingdom. Nominated: The digital transition is all but complete in most western nations, especially the United Kingdom, and most channels have fully transitioned to HD operations with the standard definition version of a channel just downscaled by the provider where needed, or if still existent with its main HD broadcast. Those that have not and remain standard definition-only are easily noted on their articles due to circumstance or inability/lack of want to do so. Keep: The digital transition is irrelevant. A list of TV Channels isn't an Electronic Programme Guide (EPG). An EPG is a list of upcoming programmes/ schedules on a TV channel(s). And a list of TV Channels is... well, it's a list of TV Channels. Two very different things. WP:NOTATVGUIDE says nothing about such lists. But please feel free to prove me wrong using quotes baring in mind that WP:NOTTVGUIDE states "Electronic program guides. An article on a broadcaster should not list upcoming events, current promotions, current schedules, format clocks, etc., although mention of major events, promotions or historically significant program lists and schedules may be acceptable." Delete or move: All TV channels are now HD channels, so this is pointless. I don't see much historical value in the relative dates in when each channel switched to HD either. I am a bit surprised that List of television channels in the United Kingdom was deleted since it seems that could have been a valid navigational list though (it appears to have been too much of a guide to which channels were available from which source), so if this is kept it should be refashioned back into a simple list of channels or networks, rather than implying that the HD channels need to be specifically listed on their own. Keep: WP:NOTTVGUIDE is about , not about a list of channels. That most channels are HD is just a reason to drop this from the title, and not a reason to delete. Both TV in the UK and its TV channels have received enough coverage, this list also serves a navigational purpose, quoting WP:NLIST, . Merge: to List of DTT channels in the United Kingdom. There is already a section in my proposed target article which covers HD channels specifically. The article in question is a needless fork. Verdict: There was consensus that this list should not exist in its current form based on WP:NOT. The merger proposal was opposed, so there's not a valid alternative deletion on the table. Merged into another page.

2026-09-07

18:07 100 Derece. Nominated: I am struggling to find in-depth reliable sources about this band. This is good, but not enough. This may or may not be reliable. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

13:20 Covid Act Now. Nominated: Not seeing enough in-depth coverage for WP:NORG. A lot of brief, passing mentions of data processed by the group, but hardly anything sourceable about the organization. The Verge source is best, but citations of their site in a few academic papers is not evidence of organizational notability, it's just a data source. Merge: selectively to List of COVID-19 simulation models. The org did not receive coverage directly about it, however, simulations by it were referenced by others, example. delete: they aren't updating the website (not since 2024), so there probably won't be recent sourcing. I don't see any RS we can use and the two in the article are yellow per Cite Highlighter, so of moderate notability. Delete for lack of sourcing. Verdict: to List of COVID-19 simulation models. Merged into another page.

2026-09-07

17:11 Ryan Coyne. Nominated: all of the sources are discussing his company's acquisition of another company (Parler). This should be redirected there. The only source I've found on him not in the article is this NYT article about the American exhibition at the Venice Biennial, which mentions that Coyne was on the board of the exhibition running it... after a correction, because the Times had originally wrote that a different Ryan Coyne was on the board. Keep: A redirect to Parler is inappropriate since the nominator's own New York Times finding shows Coyne is active in unrelated spheres like the Venice Biennale, ruling out WP:BLP1E. Furthermore, the acquisition sources discuss Coyne directly, and dismissing them as a group without a proper WP:SIGCOV analysis does not justify deletion. Keep: the nomination says all of the sources are about Starboard's purchase of Parler. That is not correct, and Parler is not a suitable redirect target. My reasons: Delete: The coverage of him is related to the Parler acquisition. A redirect is not appropriate because he is not mentioned at the target. Keep: Coverage isn't limited to Parler: WaPo, Baltimore Sun and Axios covered his firm's cut of Klacik's fundraising in 2021, Axios and TheWrap his bid for The Messenger, GIR his work for Argentine intelligence, and the NYT Magazine his role behind the 2026 US Pavilion, so this isn't WP:BLP1E and Parler is a poor redirect. No single source is a full profile, but Gizmodo is about him with its own assessment, and there's enough for a biography under WP:BASIC. Delete: Source table indicates a distinct lack of independent coverage from reliable secondary sources. Verdict: Undecided.

MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER

18:46 Steve Rothaus. Nominated: I don't believe this journalist crosses the threshold of WP:GNG. The only GNG-qualifying source in this promotionally written page is a Columbia Journalism Review profile. Other sources are affiliated sources (such as his alma mater), his own writing, and trivial/passing mentions. Nothing came up in my BEFORE search and I don't see any evidence of passing any SNGs under WP:NBIO. Delete: Fails WP:GNG. CJR is only one qualifying source. Verdict: Merged into another page.

18:21 Incident in Lez. Nominated: About half of the article lacks verification and citations, and I wasn't able to find any WP:SIGCOV of these events that makes me think it would pass WP:GNG. While there were a number of casualties over the course of several days, this could easily just be mentioned elsewhere. Delete: due to a lack of WP:SIGCOV and thus failure of WP:GNG. I can't find any other reliable sources for this. If someone else can find reliable sources, let me know, and I'll re-evaluate my comment accordingly. Verdict: Merged into another page.

18:11 2024 Mayotte crisis. Nominated: Article fails to say what the "2024 Mayotte crisis" even is, and I couldn't find any mention of a crisis from the quick lookup I did. The closest thing I could find was the impact of Cyclone Chido, which is already talked about in much more detail on that article. Most of what's here is background, but it looks like background to an event that doesn't even exist. Maybe the crisis in question is Yaël Braun-Pivet's visit? If so, that only takes up 3 sentences in the whole article and the rest of the "Events" section is just "things that happened in Mayotte in 2024". Delete: Yeah, I read the article and I'm still not seeing a crisis. Some MPs said stuff, Marine Le Pen visited, a bunch of things happened. Seems to be SYNTH, to promote a narrative about things that never happened. Merge: to Mayotte#History which I did originally consider. Delete: There are a couple of French-language sources mentioning a "Crise à Mayotte" (Crisis in Mayotte) . So all of that is more about the territory's poverty and not a single crisis in 2024. It looks like original research. There is no need to keep it. Delete: everybody should know that we have never published original research, and that we are not a soapbox. The article is centered around visits from controversial politicians. Verdict: Merged into another page.

18:08 Jed Melvin. Nominated: Non-notable rugby player; no evidence he passes WP:GNG or WP:NSPORT. The coverage is all (1) passing mentions, (2) routine transfer/match coverage, (3) non-independent sources like his league's website and (4) LinkedIn(?) Keep: Jed Melvin is a rising star in New Zealand rugby. The current article (as it is now) is focused on his time in Major League Rugby and hasn't been updated to include the New Zealand side of his career. He already had a wider training group contract with the for the 2026 Super Rugby Pacific season (source) and there's a good chance he will earn a full contract for the 2027 season (source). He was named the captain for his side for the current 2026 Hilux NPC season (source) and is currently one of the top performers in that competition. (source) I haven't done an extensive search for sources, but I'm confident that there are more sources and that there will be more sources as his career progresses. Deleting this page now is premature. I'm happy to update the article a bit to include his NZ career, but have no time for a more extensive edit. Keep: Simple search is bringing up sourcing, plus those that have been provided in this discussion so far. Giving the players career trajectory, it is likely more sourcing will continue to appear. I think we're past the stage on WP:TOOSOON on this one also. There is a suitable redirect here also at List of Blues (Super Rugby) players, but my preference would be for keep. Redirect to List of Blues (Super Rugby) players: Not seeing the needed in depth coverage to merit keeping under the WP:GNG or any other notability guidelines. All I see are routine match coverage and databases. Delete: we are not LinkedIn, and we don't accept it as a source. This is lacking good sources. I don't oppose a redirect as an alternative to deletion. Verdict: to List of Blues (Super Rugby) players. Merged into another page.

17:19 Bejai bus stand. Nominated: No significant coverage in reliable sources. Delete: per WP:TNT. Not written by a proficient English user, a damp of various information. Keep: The coverage in the article is enough for notability. I think this is also a good source. Also, page quality is not a reason to delete. Verdict: A WP:HEY effort was successful. 10:10 Salvador (2025 film). Nominated: Non-notable short film, lacking significant coverage by independent sources per WP:NF, simply showing at film festivals (and being listed on their web-sites) is not sufficient to meet the notability criteria Redirect: to Henry Ian Cusick, the director. Short film that appeared in festivals, but won no awards, cannot find any reviews. Redirect: to Henry Ian Cusick per . Insufficient sources to establish independent notability. Verdict: to Henry Ian Cusick. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

19:58 Hurricane Ava. Nominated: I propose merging to 1973 Pacific hurricane season because, while it was a strong hurricane, it didn't do much. I recently did some copyediting to the Ava article, and a lot of it was dependent on some original research, or more generally about Category 5 Pacific hurricanes. The Ava article is now only 430 words. The 1973 Pacific hurricane season is only 2,049 words long, and already has 260 words in Ava's section. I believe adding another 170 words would not overwhelm the article, not when Ava was the strongest storm of the season. () Merge: per nominator's rationale. Keep: Firstly, it is notable, as shown by multiple papers in Google Scholar that are about the hurricane. Secondly, the body of the article was [https://en.wikipedia.org/w/index.php?title=Hurricane_Ava&oldid=1295329661 1,200 words until the nominator trimmed it to 430 prior to the nomination. Finally, merging is about the inclusion of content in some other page, and such editing is governed by WP:ONUS (which is a policy) that states, , and I am not convinced that the disputed content should be included at the target. Keep: Category 5 hurricanes regularly meet the notability threshold if there are good meteorological sources on them, regardless of societal impact. There is nothing wrong with a 400 word article that is well-written and well-sourced. A merge should only be performed if there is a legitimate lack of reliable meteorological (or other) sources. Keep: Surely there's something to write about the fact that Ava is the only Category 5 Pacific hurricane with no land impacts that received reconnaissance. Readers may also want to know whether the modern "90% rule" was used here. Verdict: (non-admin closure) 🍒🥧 Merged into another page.

MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER

17:14 Melanie During. Nominated: Tenuous notability. No indication of significance. Fails WP:NACADEMIC. Delete: New PhD without enough time for her research to have accumulated the scholarly impact needed for WP:PROF#C1. There is some news coverage but it fails WP:BIO1E. And the Escher Prize is a student award, explicitly ineligible for WP:PROF#C2. Delete.: Let's wait five or ten years and see if she achieves notability in her field, but she's nowhere near there yet. Keep.: Her research on the timing of the Chicxulub impact received substantial international media coverage. She has also appeared in prominent Dutch television and radio programmes, both in connection with her expertise and, to some extent, her public profile. This includes appearances on programmes such as De Slimste Mens and AVROTROS Triviant, which feature well-known public figures in the Netherlands. Delete: Fails WP:NACADEMIC, also the above keep vote screams LLM to me. WP:SOLIDARITY Delete: Fails WP:PROF and WP:GNG. Notability requires verifiable evidence, and this article lacks it. Only WP:SIGCOV from a reliable source is one article from Omrop Fryslân. Delete: too soon as an academic to pass WP:PROF. She got her PhD less than two years ago. I remember reading about her research, which is remarkable. Alternatively Draftify to see if a different emphasis can be applied. Verdict: Merged into another page.

16:41 Zarra Trophy. Nominated: It's an insignificant trophy awarded to La Liga's highest scoring Spaniard each season, unlike the Pichichi Trophy. Unsurprisingly, the article features only a single reference (WP:GNG), stating that the award was created in 2006 only because Zarra died that year. Keep: per things like this and this - no doubt more in Spanish. Keep: The Marca awards in Spanish football are definitely not insignificant. Verdict: Merged into another page.

16:37 Moris Lekiashevili. Nominated: Suspected LLM generated (and poorly sourced) article with multiple AI signs, including WP:AIREDCAT (in history), WP:AIDASH, WP:AIPUFFERY. Delete: as sourcing meant to demonstrate marriage with Lamara Chkonia isn't great. Delete: per WP:NEWLLM. In general, the biggest benefit of a redirect is the history that can be used to recreate a page, but due to LLM-related concerns, this page history should be removed. Verdict: due to LLM-generated content, with no prejudice against creation of a redirect afterward. Merged into another page.

16:28 The Accusatory Gravediggers: The Real Gravediggers of the Hungarian Nation. Nominated: No evidence this passes WP:NBOOK or WP:GNG. The sources are a brief biographical sketch of a co-author and the full text of the book; no indication of third-party reviews or other WP:SIGCOV in qualifying sourc- es, although I'm open to suggestions given the language barrier of searching in Hungarian. Suggest restoring a redirect to Louis Marschalko that existed before this article was created. Redirect: I could find some sources ~320 words, ~100 words ~200 words, plus many cite the book, but I just don't think this is enough significant coverage. Verdict: to Louis Marschalko. Merged into another page.

19:40 2023 Australian National University stabbing. Nominated: BLP-adjacent controversial article. Needs a lot more refs. (|) Delete: agree with above. It's unusual to keep an article on stabbing when no one has died. There are literally 1000s of non-fatal stabbings worldwide a year and they don't get a WP article. Verdict: NOTNEWS applies. Merged into another page.

2026-09-07

08:33 Camp Baldwin (Oregon). Nominated: The article does not demonstrate significant coverage of this camp in reliable sources. There is evidence of trivial mentions, it was the location of an accident in which a young man died and sources not linked mention that it was evacuated during wildfires (again trivially). I don't feel this article passes WP:GNG or WP:NPLACE. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER

16:08 4th Street Theater. Nominated: No independent SIGCOV, doesn't meet NORG. BEFORE search shows some more of the same type of coverage in the Post-Tribune and NW Indiana Times, mostly local previews, occasional notice of auditions, fundraiser, or that they scored a grant. Keep: 4th Street Theater is an established cultural institution in Northwest Indiana, has had regular seasons of plays for 35 years, and has been recognized by the State of Indiana as a cultural asset with funding from the National Endowment for the Arts obtained through the Indiana Arts Commission. These and other statements in the article are supported by the following references independent of the theater's own website and postings: Keep: Overriding deletion is warranted here per WP:GNG and WP:ORGIND. I disagree with the nominator's restrictive reading of WP:NCORP. Attempting to entirely uncouple a theater organization from the specific theatrical seasons, historical coverage, and curated productions it brings to a community is an artificial distinction. Per WP:PRODUCTREV, robust coverage and deep editorial reviews of an organization's primary cultural output are inherently valid indicators of that organization's broader community impact and notability. A theater is not merely a corporate shell; its notable existence is directly proven through the substantive coverage of its decades-long creative output. Keep: I read the article and the discussion comments. The article is well written and the crux of the discussion seems to be whether 4th Street Theater is sufficiently notable to warrant Wikipedia article page. Delete: I am sympathetic to the idea that reviews would help with notability here, but what is linked above are previews, not reviews as nom explained. Verdict: Undecided.

2026-09-07

06:04 Kiki Rockwell. Nominated: Fails Significant Coverage. No evidence of notability to warrant an article. Keep: I can't believe that none of the sources are actually unreliable. Keep: The sources are reliable and secondary and the subject itself is significant in these sources, I don't agree with nom's rationale. Verdict: Merged into another page.

MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER

16:05 Kumbhoj Jain temple. Nominated: Delete per WP:AIPOLICY. Scan with <https://wikipedia.gptzero.me> indicates all or most text is AI-generated. | Draftify: as the editor of the article has admitted to his use of AI to fix the errors and has reflected on it, the article can be re-written in Encyclopedic tone without the use of LLMs and more sources can be added to it. The subject itself seems significant enough to have coverage and a simple google search produces results. Draftify: Agree that the editor is working to remove LLM content, and that this article could be salvaged with some further work. Keep: The creator rewrote the article on their own, so I see no reason to move it to draft. The subject is notable. Verdict: - original author rewrote the article. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

07:46 Portland Christian School. Nominated: Fails to mention individual WP:NOTABILITY. Only mention in social media and official website of the school. Keep: Coverage from newspapers. comWeaker, but more recent coverage. MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER 16:02 Florian Dagoury. Nominated: Non-notable freediver fails WP:GNG and WP:NSPORT. The sources are limited to stats/rankings pages on his diving association ([https://www.freedivingranking.com/athlete/Florian-Dagoury another ranking page, a primary source [https://freedivecafe.com/2022/02/19/127-florian-dagoury-mr-10-minutes/ podcast interview, WP:TRIVIALMENTIONS ([https://www.gmanetwork.com/news/showbiz/chikaminute/878347/wil-dasovich-sets-national-record-for-underwater-breath-hold/story/, and a [https://web.archive.org/web/20250619041049/https://www.boholchronicle.com.ph/2023/06/19/florian-mr-10-minutes-dagoury-to-visit-bohol/ press release. My BEFORE search turned up no WP:SIGCOV in independent, reliable sources, and seeing as there's none in the article, we're left with deletion. Delete: no valid secondary sources to prove GNG -- (•). Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

15:56 LGTM. Nominated: This topic does not meet the notability guidelines. Having a page say that we don't have a page is silly and pointless. We are not a dictionary and we are not a forwarding service for Wikitionary. Keep: per WP:SOFTSP. Your argument is more about the Wiktionary redirect template. Verdict: As a nomination for a (soft) redirect, this belongs at WP:Redirects for discussion. 17:25 Akdoğan Sub-district. Nominated: sub-districts of northern cyprus are not notable --  Keep: Sub-districts are a legally recognised administrative division so article meets WP:NPLACE. (Keep: per above. Merge: to Gazimağusa District as an WP:ATD. Northern Cyprus is not internationally recognized, so its administrative divisions should satisfy the GNG, and this doesn't. Keep: per adove. 19:28 Saurus City. Nominated: Non-notable film, lacking significant coverage by independent sources per WP:NF Keep: The article's two citations are poor, but WP:BEFORE turns up real coverage. Animation World Network ran a ~2,500-word feature by Victoria Davis with original interviews on the puppet engineering, the 3D-printed components and the film's adoption themes, Collider published a Sundance interview piece by Steven Weintraub and Tamera Jones in February 2024, Variety covered the Archstone rights acquisition in May 2025, as did Animation Magazine. That's enough for WP:GNG i think. Weak keep: Would like to see more than this, but at least two of those, maybe all three are solid enough to keep. Altho if this remains in development hell, I would err away from keep...unless we get coverage of that. ← Weak Keep: High-profile voice cast and verified production metrics, passes film notability guidelines. Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:41 Appalachian Children's Home. Nominated: Fails to mention individual WP:NOTABILITY. Only mention in social media and official website of the school. Keep: There is some coverage in newspapers.com, especially if searched under the old name. Delete: After looking at the various newspapers and Google articles (using both names), nothing seems to establish WP:N Delete: Even taking into account historical coverage under the old name, the available sources don't provide significant coverage needed for a standalone notability under WP:GNG. Verdict: after two relists. MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER

15:33 Robert K. Barth. Nominated: Non-notable business person. Article was created by undisclosed paid editor (since blocked/banned) with a clearly promotional intent and as part of a cabal/sockfarm of UPE profiles. Article is based on several sources which do not mention the subject or otherwise don't support the text - not to mind a claim to notability. Several of the "keep" recommendations, in the previous AfD, came from the creating editor and their various socks (now also blocked). Given that the socking issues were only identified after the closing admin closed the thread, at the very least this needs another look. (Personally, as many of the sources do not mention the subject at all, others are non-independent press releases, several are random passing quotes attributed to the subject in ROTM business reporting (that don't support the text they are placed alongside), I don't see how notability is established. Where is the significant coverage of the subject in multiple published/reliable/secondary sources that are independent of each other and the subject? I can't find any in my own WP:BEFORE. The article text otherwise describes a business person similar to many others....) Delete: This is literally all there is in Gnews, a photo caption. None of the sources are acceptable, press releases, SEC filings/official papers. The ton of socks that came out last time also tell me this isn't notable; notable people don't need socks to promote their article. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources, mostly press releases, and created by a now-banned paid Sockpuppet. Paid editing is now a legal problem, because our critics, including powerful men from Boca Chica to Palm Beach, want to use any excuse to take away our charitable status, which would cripple us financially.

Delete: This article is a stub that lacks reliable sources, significant coverage, and even verification that the unreliable sources that lack significant coverage say what is stated in the article. It doesn't demonstrate WP:BASIC or WP:GNG, and reads like a promotional COI article. Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:39 List of Sri Lanka Air Force Sports Club cricketers. Nominated: I propose merging to Sri Lanka Air Force Sports Club (cricket) because it fails WP:NLIST, no reason for a split standalone article as it's parent article is incredibly lacking and potentially non-notable as well. Merge: per nominator's rationale. Merge to Sri Lanka Air Force Sports Club (cricket): No need for a separate article. Sri Lanka Air Force Sports Club (cricket) is a stub, it can easily include any notable players. And WP:NOTDIRECTORY applies to List of Sri Lanka Air Force Sports Club cricketers as it currently consists almost exclusively on non-notable players. (Strong oppose: A list like this easily meets NLIST because of its defining characteristics. All of the players have represented the club, and the club has chosen all of these players to represent it in top-class matches. You might as well claim that List of Liverpool F.C. players fails NLIST. Ridiculous. The NOTDIRECTORY claim was completely inappropriate for two reasons: (a) given that the list was then NEW and undergoing development, it was ill-timed to say the least; (b) NOTDIRECTORY does not support any non-notable players argument, which was wrong in any case because the players have all played in top-class matches (whether they have articles or not is irrelevant). Oppose: WP:NSPORTS update has made lists like this vital for redirection of stubs and articles that previously passed guidelines, but now longer do. A quick look on CricketArchive suggests over 50 players have played competitive matches for the team, so it wouldn't be suitable to list all of these in the parent article, which itself could probably be expanded with more information. Merge: to form List of Sri Lanka First-class cricketers, but restrict to only the notable players... Also, there's currently only one redirect coming to this article. Oppose/Keep.: Meets NSPORT and is consistent with many similar lists. —‍? Keep: per above. The players should be covered somewhere; and it is apparently standard practice for sport articles to separate them from clubs, which I think is reasonable. Regarding NLIST, this serves a navigational purpose as roughly 60 people on the list are notable. Weakly oppose merge for now: For a long time now, we have implicitly allowed the sports fan community to define much more liberal rules for notability, inclusion, and standalone articles than are used for other topic areas. If this were a list of, say, C-suite executives of publicly traded companies, or artists exhibited at (insert your favourite gallery), or players in a top-tier symphony orchestra, we would merge and ruthlessly prune it. However, the argument that this list can be built out to be helpful, as a source of information and a destination for redirects, is apparently in line with NSPORT and sports-related RFCs like WP:LUGSTUBS2. BlackJake has expanded it significantly during this AfD, and I'd extend good faith it can be built out further. Hence my keep (oppose merge) !vote. That said, if it doesn't expand further, to be more than a bare list, and/or actually become a destination for policy-compliant redirects, I would not be surprised to see it back at AfD in a few months. I expect I and likely others would support a merge at that point. WP:LUGSTUB2 was sprawling and loud and consensus was hard to pinpoint; let's extend some leeway for pragmatic attempts at implemetation, but that can't mean we won't apply more general criteria in due time. Verdict: While Keep has more numerical support, reasonable arguments in its favor and some rather vociferous assertions in its defense, other editors continued to express reasonable doubt as to whether it is really more useful to readers as a standalone list, rather than merged elsewhere. The... Merged into another page.

15:09 Mack the Knife (musical). Nominated: WP:TOOSOON. I do not know if there are guidelines for whether individual theatre productions are notable; I certainly do not think that this 'cabaret experience' passes WP:GNG Delete: as WP:CRYSTAL. Has not premiered yet. No notable creators involved. Delete: Sourcing is entirely routine, with a brief mention in coverage of the producing theater's season announcement, and primary source promo. No-tability unlikely to be established until after the show's premiere. Draft: If the feeling is this is Too Soon, temporary incubation in draft form is better than deletion, considering the article is in a reasonable condition. Draft: it is currently almost entirely based on primary sources (Hayes Theatre Company) and until production commences & reviews are published that is likely to remain the case. Draftify: per WP:ATD and WP:TOOSOON. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

15:01 Homosexuality in the Hebrew Bible. Nominated: I propose merging to The Bible and homosexuality because this article is a more incomplete version of The Bible and homosexuality and is basically a duplicate with different wordings Merge: per WP:OVERLAP. Same thing. Merge: Not sure why these would be separate articles. Keep: From what it appears the Hebrew Bible and the Bible are different religions. I wouldn't merge Hebrew Bible and Bible, so the merge would be inappropriate. The included section for the hebrew bible in the recommended merge (old testament? I'm not christain) would likely suit this article to be a WP:SPINOFF Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances. Merge: though they are different religions, Homosexuality in the Hebrew Bible still has very significant overlap to Homosexuality in the Bible, making me still think that two different articles would be redundant. Verdict: to The Bible and homosexuality. Merged into another page.

15:01 Billy Dick. Nominated: Wholly unsourced article with no credibility. I attempted to delete this article via A7 twice today, neither worked. | was here. ? Delete: The name is too common to find sourcing... We only have statistics used in the article, and a letter to the editor. Not showing notability. 07:38 Jackson City School. Nominated: Mention only in land deeds and official school website. Fails to explain WP:NOTABILITY Redirect: to Jackson, Kentucky where it is mentioned. I looked through several paywalled Kentucky newspaper databases as well as Kentucky historic references but couldn't find anything specifically about this school. Its 2004 dispute with the county over funding for out-of-town students to attend was covered in several papers with long articles, but they were about the dispute and just wrote about Jackson City School itself for a sentence or two. I really wanted to find sources here, seems like an important school in its community, but that is not always Wikipedia notability. I was unable to find archives for the local paper, Jackson Times-Voice, before 2024. This wouldn't meet WP:AUD anyway. Keep: I recall from a previous deletion discussion that school districts are considered inherently notable per WP:GEOLAND. Someone can correct me if I am wrong. Keep: Some hits in newspapers.com. 14:17 Sam Aiyegoro. Nominated: Spammy bio of a Nigerian crypto businessman. The sources are typical WP:NEWSORGNI-GERIA over-the-top promo ([https://guardian.ng/news/shop-nig-and-mybtc-nigeria-companies-reshaping-nigerias-e-commerce-tech-web3-spaces/]) (Example:) This one reads like sponsored content for his company, this one might be OK but in the broader context of promo I'm skeptical. Nothing else in BE-FORE search that indicates notability. Delete: Obviously nothing to establish a BASIC or GNG here and a search for more sources is negative. Delete: PROMO spam with the flowery wording we associate with it... Nothing for wikipedia, not notable. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:11 Ragz (entrepreneur). Nominated: Unbylined sources, interviews, content creators masquerading as journalists, non-notable awards and brown envelope journalism. Fails GNG Delete: With the poor sourcing, does not appear to meet GNG. Article moved to draft, author moved to articlespace without any modification. There is possible COI/UPE as well. Delete: Agreed - there's nothing here that satisfies reliable sourcing requirements. Delete: Fails WP:GNG. Delete: fails GNG -- (•) . Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources. Also, at least 90% of BLPs with "entrepreneur" in their title are not notable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:11 Darren Gualtieri. Nominated: Surprisingly, top level bowls player Gualtieri appears not to pass WP:GNG and no subject specific guidelines exist for bowls. I have searched on BBC, the Scottish press and specialist bowls publication Bowls International and can find no articles giving him sigcov. I believe that the official websites of the various sporting bodies that govern bowls do not constitute independent sources, so that leaves us with nothing. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

13:35 2022 Lebanese general election in North I. Nominated: I propose redirecting to 2022 Lebanese general election because, not enough independent coverage to justify the need for separate standalone overview articles by district.. 13:16 Harouna Dabougui. Nominated: The article does not establish notability under WP:GNG or WP:ARTIST. The substantive sources are two works by the same author, where Dabougui is only mentioned in passing, while the remaining source is the project's own website. The local cultural-centre prize does not demonstrate significant critical attention weak keep: Mentioned here [https://books.google.ca/books?hl=en&lr=&id=1WXBDwAAQBAJ&oi=fnd&pg=PA79&dq=%22Harouna+Dabougui%22&ots=mSAaRw-0ZCX&sig=kqj7cVU99eqgOWEpMDTC8Pr6b8k&redir_esc=y]. 05:17 Jiangsu Donghai Senior High School. Nominated: Fails WP:NOTABILITY. No coverage except school website and social media. The second paragraph looks like WP:PROMO Delete: The sources attached by Cunard don't appear to carry enough SIGCOV to meet GNG and/or NSCHOOL. And my additional searches yielded nothing useful. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Keep: per the sources above. — (·) Delete: They are generic in nature and don't meet WP:NSCHOOL. They certainly don't WP:N-CORP. Keep: per Cunard. There is a case study on the school. Even if we disregard sources 2 and 4, which appear to be interview-like, GNG says, , not “always expected”. Delete: Has anyone read Hui (2011)? Because I can't find any published copy. It has 5

citations, but the citations are also not published, and all appear to be a single citation cluster. From what I can see it is an unpublished locally circulated school-based teaching/research report. It is certainly not the kind of top quality source that would allow us to pass an article on the basis of this alone. It may not be very good at all - and it is certainly not something we can write this article from. Article does not meet WP:GNG, and I cannot find any evidence it will pass WP:GNG. Considering the deadline today, request another relist so that either better sources can be found, or someone can show that Hui is something after all. Weak keep: per Cunard. Verdict: Strong arguments on both sides, engaging with sources, but no consensus. 17:56 Phantom Fantasia. Nominated: This article has no evidence of passing WP:GNG. The only independent sources are 2 entries at the DRD (Dake Ride Database) site. This seems to be a fansite and it is debatable whether the entries constitute WP:SIGCOV. There is a BBC article relating to the fire that destroyed the ride, but this does not give sigcov, as it was a fire which destroyed large parts of the park and the ride is barely mentioned. Merge: to Thorpe Park#Former attractions. Entry there is currently unsourced, so we can expand its description. I must have made a mistake when patrolling this article the first time around. Memories of Thorpe Park looks like an unreliable fansite, and a search only gave passing mentions. ~ Verdict: Merged into another page.

11:46 Acharya Prashant. Nominated: Does not have significant independent in-depth coverage needed for WP:GNG. Keep: Totally meets GNG as per sources on main article. I am seeing a clear failure of WP:BEFORE. THEZDRX | Keep: Meets notability guidelines. Has appeared in multiple news articles and international conferences. — (•) has made few or no other edits outside this topic. KeepDelete: leaning keep. Prashant has published with Penguin Random House and HarperCollins across several titles over multiple years, which goes a fair way toward WP:AUTOR on its own. There's also significant coverage in multiple reliable sources. Delete: At this point, there are 20 sources in the article. Five are either unbylined or attributed to news desks (BWEducation, Jagran, Bhaskar, TimesNowNews and Entrepreneur), while 6 are links to his book listings on various e-commerce and publisher websites (Penguin, Rekhtabooks, HarperCollins ×2, Jaicobooks and Prabhatbooks). Delete: Not “several titles over multiple years” with either house: Penguin India’s author page lists one book, Karma, and HarperCollins one, Truth Without Apology. And the coverage of that HarperCollins release is a press release - identical headline on The Wire (filed under pti-prnews) and The Tribune, same text on PR Newswire. Keep: per EmilyR34. While the role of UPE is not deniable, the subject does meet WP:GNG. Keep: I agree that the current article has some weak and routine sources, but that can be fixed through cleanup rather than deletion. A WP:BEFORE search shows several independent sources with substantial coverage of Acharya Prashant over the years, including India Today, The Pioneer, Navbharat Times, and The North East Times. Delete: I was honestly surprised when checking his many books, but he doesn’t appear to pass WP:NAUTHOR. I can’t find independent, reliable source reviews of his works. (Unbylined fluff pieces in WP:NEWSORGINDIA outlets don’t count.) The news coverage of him is not really independent since it’s based on Q&A interview or otherwise regurgitating his social media posts, videos or other work. Most of the coverage, like the article, seems highly promotional. I share ‘s concerns about the sourcing as well as about the arrival of several new-to-AFD participants in this discussion, which is a good reason for more experienced editors to look closely at the claims being made about the sources provided. Keep: I agree that some links are weak and need to be removed. But per WP:NEXIST and WP:ARTN, notability is about the sources that actually exist, not just the ones currently cited in the article. If the sources are out there, the fix is WP:PRE-SERVE and WP:CLEANUP, not deletion. WP:TNT doesn’t apply here either, since the problem is citation quality in a few specific sections. A WP:BEFORE search turns up several stronger sources that aren’t in the article yet: Keep: as the subject itself has signifi- cant in-depth coverage which qualifies him for WP:GNG. Many sources have been provided above to highlight sufficient coverage for the subject. Citations could be added or made stronger but a deletion is not warranted here. Delete: ‘ Looked at this a few days ago and prepared a big rationale but my pc is acting up so lost it. The books may be notable but there is insufficient coverage for a WP:BLP. There is lot of promo and WP:PUFF in a lot of these references that preclude them being used and due the fact they are WP:NEWSORGINDIA articles, which alone makes them suspect. There seems to be some confusion in meeting nauthor. For a book get an article, it needs multiple reviews, 2 or 3 reviews in well established sources. Everybody know where they are and its not social media or some PR or promo review, trying to sell the book. Genuine companies that do review are well known. To become an author on Wikipedia, you multiple books that have been reviewed, so lots of decent reviews. Looking at this e.g. This one is not bylined, so another duff review. I don't see it here as passing WP:NAUTHOR. As a WP:BLP and it fails WP:SIGCOV and WP:BIO. Verdict: Assertions of sourcing are less compelling than actual analysis of sourcing against policy. Votes arguing to clean up or to improve sourcing are not persuasive - source it or lose it are pretty much all that gets looked at Merged into another page.

11:19 Torto. Nominated: A disambiguation page with not much to disambiguate: a surname, a mythical giant for whom Torto is an alternate name, and a partial match. Retorto: Your case would be stronger if Torto weren't an alternate god name. Move: Torto (surname) to Torto, and disambiguate there with a hatnote. The surname seems like a slightly more likely search-case than one of several poorly attested names that are clearly related to the more established term of “Tartalo”. Noticia de Torto is a particularly bad addition to the dab as in this case the phrase as a whole is just the phrase “notice of a tort” in Old Portuguese and seems extremely unlikely to be referred to as just “Torto”. signed, Move: Torto (surname) to Torto. It is best. Verdict: and add other disambiguation entries there. Merged into another page.

20:19 PhotoSi. Nominated: Business that doesn't appear notable. Somewhat promotional. Delete: I'd have no objection to draftification if independent, in-depth coverage turns up, but the current article is also written promotionally and would need rewriting either way. Move: to Draft and start from scratch. The current article is very promo like and would have been nominated to be deleted if not for the sources listed by Simone. At brief look, most of the sources are reliable but they are all in italian, which make sense why this article is nominated for deletion because a search in English will not yield much results. ~ Verdict: Sufficient foreign reliable sources, needs more work (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

10:13 Government College, Rajahmundry. Nominated: No notability shown WP:NOTABILITY xoxo Redirect: to Rajamahendravaram#Education, where it's mentioned, as an ATD-R. Found nothing with SIGCOV in additional searches to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Redirect: per and WP:ATD. I think it's better to redirect than to delete. 20:20 D. Eric Bookhardt. Nominated: I do not see sufficient reference material to support this article. Note source numbering is of revision . As to the sources, source 1 is by his employer, so not independent. 2 is written by him, so not independent. 3 is written by his associate/friend of 35 years, so not independent. 4, by him, not independent. 5 only briefly mentions him, so not substantial coverage. 6 is a site's search result, so not any kind of substantial coverage. 7 is a sales site for his book, so definitely not independent. Additional searches don't turn up anything better, so I don't see notability here. Keep: There seems to be fair number of book mentions in Gbooks and this e.g. [https://prcno.org/thank-mr-bookhardt/ a book of poems dedicated to him as well as a couple of obits and co-author of a book. I think its more than borderline. Delete: Scattered mentions in Gbooks or Scholar with some published photographs, but nothing extensive. Not listed in the Getty ULAN , likely fails artistic notability. Delete: per 's statement above. What we can find is his memoir. But Wikipedia is not memoir. Verdict: Undecided.

09:27 Deepali Sahay. Nominated: The page does not appear to meet Wikipedia's general notability guideline (WP:N). Currently, there is a lack of significant coverage in reliable, independent sources. As Wikipedia is not a directory of every person (WP:NOTDIRECTORY) Keep: The Hindu is an excellent source, and there are others. Whether it's a BLP1E case I have no opinion. Keep: Seems like plenty of SIGCOV and I don't think it's a BLP1E, especially considering Indian Idol. Keep: I've found various sources covering the subject over different years, apart from her Indian Idol appearance and the recent fame. Dainik Bhaskar 2022, Etv Bharat 2023 2020, Amar Ujala 2019, India tv 2019, Zee News 2022, etc. They are independent Hindi reports from reputed media houses and cover different aspects of her career/life. This earlier and unrelated coverage seems relevant to the BLP1E concern. Verdict: (non-admin closure) • Merged into another page.

20:56 Decho. Nominated: Could this be a hoax? I can't find any reference to it not originating from Wikipedia. It could just be an obscure topic, but the author of the article made no other edits (not always of an indication of a hoax, but it can be) and the four sources cited in the original version don't actually reference the topic. Delete: which could turn out to be premature, but this seems pretty unverifiable to me. It doesn't appear in 'Philippine Food, Cooking, & Dining Dictionary', I can't find any trace online or on the Wikipedia library. Could be that it's extremely regional. I'm curious what happened here, but I'm skeptical. delete: per above and my GNews and GBooks search too Verdict: Merged into another page.

08:29 THC Hurley. Nominated: This version has only one primary source. Draft:THC Hurley is in better shape, although that version was also declined at AfC. I don't see any reason to keep this inferior version of the article. Keep: and replace the article with the draft. The club is highly notable as evident from the references in the draft. Adding a few others: Delete: “Keep and replace” does not make sense - it is actually impossible. Delete the mainspace version and move the draft here when ready - but not based on the existence of Gidonb’s sources before they are incorporated into the article. The draft space exists specifically to harbor bad articles until which time they have had the sources added. Verdict: Source the draft and renominate. If accepted it gets moved to mainspace Merged into another page.

20:04 Seadog30. Nominated: This sailboat does not meet the general notability guidelines. The sources on it are user generated or come from sources that would generally not be considered reliable. A large portion of sources are primary. I’m open to alternatives, but I’m not sure of any target for a merge or redirect. Delete: This article does not pass WP:GNG. It lacks significant coverage in independent reliable sources. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article’s undeletion for any reason. I am taking Kelob’s comment as not being opposition to deletion; if I am mistaken, please advise me and I will undelete. Merged into another page.

21:13 Matilda Brindle. Nominated: Article is a conflict of interest, and is probably not notable enough for an article regardless Delete: Clearly falls far short of WP:NPROF and does not otherwise meet WP:ANYBIO. An ig-nobel prize is certainly not enough for ANYBIO#1. Delete.: Insignificant as a scholar. Delete: no evidence of academic notability. One of many weak pages of academics moved directly to main by a pair of editors. Delete: As well as a lack of notability, I think it’s AI generated. “Brindle has written and spoken about evolutionary biology and animal behaviour in public-facing publications and media” is classic LLM speak and the opening edit summary was “The revisions transformed the draft from a rough, incomplete outline into a clean, publication-ready Wikipedia article”. That’s an AI commentary. & Delete: Borderline notability and the evidence from Fences&Windows of AI generation (and hence the need for WP:TNT) is unambiguous. Delete: as per . Sorry, , but everyone should know that we are not Grokpedia. Unfortunately, based upon the probability of LLM use, we must start from scratch. An IgNobel is not a presumption of notability; it is one factor or piece of evidence that a scientist could be notable. Delete: Seems to be LLM generated, but more so, seems to have no indication of significance as a academic at this time and fails WP:NACADEMIC and certainly WP:NPROF, which is wide of the field. Verdict: Merged into another page.

06:55 FC Haunstetten Augsburg e.V.. Nominated: Am unable to find any sources that show notability, as all I can find are not independent or run of the mill. Verdict: Merged into another page.

15:53 Oweyegha-Afunaduula Fred Charles. Nominated: Ugandan retired professor (BLP). This is a case of WP:REFBOMB and I haven’t looked through everything, but it looks like the references are mostly passing mentions and so forth rather than sustained coverage of the kind required for WP:BASIC. I also don’t think that it looks like he meets WP:PROF or WP:AUTHOR. But even if he does meet some criterion, I think the article is such a mess that it would justify WP:TNT anyway. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article’s undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

15:19 Kazimierz Eckstein. Nominated: This article has been awaiting review for 18 months, probably due to its poor sourcing. The only source on the page is primary, the website of a school bearing Eckstein’s name. Google, scholar and archive.org searches have revealed no reliable sources giving significant coverage. I don't see this article as passing WP:GNG. Delete: I'm sure this person is fondly remembered, but one source isn't enough and I don't see anything extra we can use. Lack of sourcing, nothing in the native language to check, I can't see notability. Keep: I've added the source above and another one (thanks!) to the article as general references, and an inline citation to a source for the commemorative mural. For me, there is enough to demonstrate WP:GNG is met. There is some editing to do, but I will get to that in the next week. Cheers, Weak keep: or draftify. Based on my analysis of sources (above) I believe the subject meets NBIO. What I am concerned about is that this is a new article (Dec'25) yet the referencing standard are bad - there are only two footnotes, much of the content is unreferenced. The article should be fixed, and the author should do it, learning how to write proper content (and how to reference it). --| Keep: per WP:HEY. 04:33 Instance dungeon. Nominated: I propose merging to Dungeon crawl#Instance dungeon because a large portion of the article is WP:OR, there is a major WP:OVERLAP, and it is better described in the context of a larger article on video game dungeons. Right now, the dungeon crawl article is still fairly short, but if it gets long enough, it would be better to split it along media lines, such as "Dungeon (video games)", than types of dungeons. Merge: per nominator's rationale. Merge: – Ideal merging conditions, though some cleanup on the merged material might be required to keep the article balanced. ~ Keep: While I understand the idea of merging these two, this should not be the way to do it. The section of “Instance dungeon” on Dungeon crawl has almost nothing to do with the page itself. The idea of an instance dungeon has more to do with multiplayer games than Dungeon crawlers. It would make more sense to Draftify the page, and remove the Dungeon crawl section entirely. ~ Keep: There’s “there” there. Verdict: Merged into another page.

06:17 Hot Demon B!tches Near U!!!. Nominated: Similarly to E-Girls Are Ruining My Life!, which I’ve also AFD’ed, zero coverage from reliable sources beyond Internet tabloids & various charts. Charting alone isn’t enough, per WP:NSONGS: “Note again that this indicates only that a song may be notable, not that it is notable.” Redirect: to Corpse Husband#Singles as WP:ATD. I couldn’t find any reliable sources establishing notability. Widget-Kid Redirect: per ; redirecting seems like a good alternative rather than just fully deleting. Verdict: to Corpse Husband#Singles. Merged into another page.

06:13 E-Girls Are Ruining My Life!. Nominated: Zero reliable sources aside from various charts. The little independent coverage in the article is from low-reliability Internet tabloids. Notability starts and ends at the fact that it charted. Per WP:NSONGS, “Note again that this indicates only that a song may be notable, not that it is notable.” Redirect: to Corpse Husband as an ATD. I see it mentioned in a Rolling Stone article, but the section seems to be mostly about Corpse Husband as a rising artist with the song not being described, analyzed, reviewed, or anything else beyond its name being mentioned. Redirect: to Corpse Husband#Singles as WP:ATD. I could find no reliable sources establishing notability. WidgetKid Redirect: to Corpse Husband per above ~ Keep: The song is practically as notable as Corpse Husband himself. Literally achieved a Platinum certification, something Rebecca Black’s “Friday” took 15 years to do—as well as a Times Square billboard. You may not remember it as well because it's been 6 years, or perhaps you've just discovered this page and because you haven't heard the song are 'deciding' it's not noteworthy, but it was certainly a novelty. Ask yourself this, if it wasn't notable to begin with, why was it up for 6 years? Redirect: to Corpse Husband per WP:ATD, WP:N-SONG, and WP:NOPAGE. Verdict: to Corpse Husband#Singles. Merged into another page.

05:40 Donna Steichen. Nominated: Fails WP:AUTHOR and WP:JOURNALIST. No sigcov or major awards. Weak keep: there is some significant coverage, such as this. I'm not certain if it's enough to keep. Keep: Meets WP:Basic. Article needs work and cleanup, but this is taking a sledgehammer to a walnut here. Keep: I found reviews of her books (and). The fourth is not a review, but coverage of her book in a paper, still good enough for notability. Keep: from reviews found above and other coverage, I'd say she passes WP:AUTHOR. I may take a crack at starting the work of fixing the article itself. (•) Verdict: Merged into another page.

05:11 OMSI 2. Nominated: Appears to be no more notable than the previous AFD. Sources are entirely primary. ~ Merge: to OMSI: The Bus Simulator - I have confirmed that OMSI 1 is notable, see here, here and here. If the page is created, this one can be merged to it due to the coverage it also got from Rock Paper Shotgun here. German Wikipedia has a similar setup. I call on the nom to make the page since they nominated the article, but I suppose if that fails this article can be deleted until such time as it gets made. Keep: Since an additional review was found: (page 192), though I wouldn't object if someone wants to create a single article for both games since they are both low notability. Merge to OMSI: The Bus Simulator. Found a review for OMSI 1: . Still leaves OMSI 2 as non-notable and it would be better merged with its notable predecessor. Keep: Independent German coverage exists that isn't yet cited in the article: a review at Games Magazin and a database/test entry at 4Players. Per WP:NONENG, non-English sources count toward notability as long as they're otherwise reliable; WP:GNG doesn't require English-language sigcov. The current primary-sourced citations don't reflect the full available coverage, so deletion is premature; cleanup (especially trimming the DLC table) is the real issue here, not notability. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

04:24 Damian D. Pitts. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG, WP:NBO; self-promotion page for an entrepreneur with approximately zero independent coverage. Delete: Not notable, as a poorly sourced BLP. Created by a SPA with 74 edits, probably an employee or a publicist, based upon the pattern. That's always been a problem, but it's much worse now, because our critics, including powerful men from Boca Chica to Palm Beach, want to use any excuse to take away our charitable status, which would cripple us financially. Delete: promotional bio and lacking in terms of actual WP:RS WP:SIGCOV. Best, Verdict: Merged into another page.

04:20 Kenneth A. McArthur. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG, WP:NBO; self-promotion page for an entrepreneur with approximately zero independent coverage. Delete: Not notable. 04:13 Noila Francy. Nominated: Fails GNG and NACTOR. No significant roles in multiple productions. WP:TOOSOON. Bringing to AFD because draftification was objected. Delete - Fails both GNG and NACTOR. Sources are either not independent, NEWSORGINIA, or otherwise unreliable. 17:21 Angela Gonzales-Torres. Nominated: Current congressional candidate. Most of the coverage from WP:RS relates to allegations/controversies made against her opponent, and the others lack WP:SIGCOV. Fails WP:NPOL Redirect: to 2026 United States

House of Representatives elections in California#District34 as a usual an appropriate outcome for candidates running for a national office. No prejudice against recreation if the subject wins in November. Redirect: to 2026 United States House of Representatives elections in California#District34 per usual. The page can be restored if she wins the general election. No evidence of notability yet, but she'd obviously meet NPOL if she won. Keep: Article already has dozens of sources and clearly meets notability guidelines. I'd just add a tag to the page to remind contributors to adhere to the BLP, and, remove some content that's unrelated to her but more about her current opponent in an election. Keep.: I want to echo this comment by from Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Graham Platner: It is sad that we might delete this article based on "the usual outcome for candidates" when a cursory glance at the article, which contains over 20 independent sources, indicates that this bio is the exception rather than the norm. The guidance here, WP:NPOL, is very clear that political candidates "can still be notable if they meet the general notability guideline". Seven sources have published full articles solely about AGT, and six more sources have given 5+ paragraphs to AGT. Those sources include an international outlet (The New Arab), national outlets (Salon, American Prospect, The Intercept, NYTimes), regional outlets (Los Angeles Times), and local outlets (USC Annenberg Media, Occidental News). This seems well beyond WP:ROUTINE coverage. Keep.: The sourcing here very clearly satisfied WP:BASIC and WP:NPOL. I will also note that there is an ongoing RFC/discussion at WT:BIO about what constitutes "routine" or "significant coverage" for local politicians and candidates. Redirect: to election. Wikipedia is not a newspaper or an election guide. Subject is only covered in the context of her campaign, and the campaign is not exceptional. Keep.: The coverage of Angela Gonzales-Torres's campaign that is used in the article is both substantial and demonstrates notability through the use of multiple independent sources as is stipulated by WP:BASIC. The section on WP:NPOL additionally stipulates that the criteria in WP:BASIC is sufficient for a candidate to be considered notable. Redirect to 2026 United States House of Representatives elections in California#District34: Reviewing the current references, they are primarily connected to her ongoing congressional campaign, and as such there is not enough sustained coverage. No WP:NPOL or WP:GNG pass here. Redirect: candidates for political office are not automatically notable, although a redirect might be appropriate to the election article. The underlying Wiki Markup will remain for if she wins, which is a possibility. Delete: I'm not convinced there's enough coverage outside of the political cycle to show notability. Many articles, but all published around the time of the election run, nothing from the period before that, showing they would be notable. Gnews only has coverage from 2025 forward, with nothing showing they were a notable activist before deciding to run for office. Redirect: to 2026 United States House of Representatives elections in California#District34. Among the 8 green sources above, 4 were published on 4 September 2025 and one on [https://www.salon.com/2025/09/05/progressive-dems-pick-their-latest-primary-target-and-its-a-modest-surprise/ 5 September. One is a student media(WP:RSSM). One is from October [https://www.newarab.com/news/gonzales-torres-daughter-deport-ee-la-runs-us-congress 2025 by The New Arab, which reliability has been questioned. And one is basically an interview in which she introduces her platform. Maybe more can be found, but this is still all about the election and 1E failure. Verdict: to 2026 United States House of Representatives elections in California#District34. The "keep" supporters have not grappled with the rebuttals to the source analysis that the coverage is all related to the election, and thus a 1E situation prevails. 03:27 Sharaf Shaz. Nominated: Cannot find sources that show notability or WP:SIGCOV. Delete: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSINGER. Cannot find any sources through a WP:BEFORE search and article is completely unreferenced. Delete: I'd have speedied it. Verdict: by an Admin per WP:G11. --- (|) Merged into another page.

03:02 DATAlegro. Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP. Almost all coverage is announcements of Microsoft's acquisition of the company; any more significant coverage is limited to niche WP:TRADES. Redirect: to List of mergers and acquisitions by Microsoft as an alternative to deletion. Verdict: (non-admin closure). Merged into another page.

22:05 Directed Machines (company). Nominated: Repost of previously deleted page: Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Directed Machines Keep; if we choose to recognize GeekWire as a reliable source. Noticeboard searches seem to imply a weak, perhaps stale consensus for "yes". e Delete: per nom. Fails WP:GNG and WP:LLM. Weak Delete: Seems borderline. fails WP:NCORP: apart from the GeekWire article, its references are partner and vendor marketing (T-Mobile, RealSense, Raspberry Pi). Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:53 Composite chondroperichondrial clip tympanoplasty. Nominated: Likely AI-generated article, but appears to fail WP:GNG anyway. Ref. 4 (Tos) appears to be ok, but the other seem to be primary references. I would like to see some significant coverage in (multiple) secondary sources to have an article, and at best we have one. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

2026-09-07

00:34 Jody Santos. Nominated: Created by a single purpose editor. Almost all the sources are primary. The one award she won can't be verified and I wouldn't regard it as major. Fails WP:JOURNALIST. Delete: autobiographies are disfavored because they almost always have original content. The cited sources are all primary sources, which are not sufficient to prove notability. But it's much worse now, because our critics, including powerful men from Boca Chica to Palm Beach, want to use any excuse to take away our charitable status, which would cripple us financially. Poorly sourced, and a conflict of interests? Doubleunplusgood for those guys. and other proponents of this page have had 3 whole weeks to improve the article, and have done nothing. The burden for a BLP is on the proponents. We must be above reproach for at least the next few months, and everybody should know that. Delete: Among the sources listed above, there is only one good enough, a book review, which is not enough. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-06

17:24 Ted Noffs Foundation. Nominated: Delete or merge parts to Ted Noffs. Tagged as promotional since 2021 and as needing more citations since 2022. What sources exist are mostly WP:PRIMARY. Fails WP:GNG. | Keep: There are some significant issues with the promotional tone of this article and its current reliance on primary sources as noted by the nominator. However, I have added 5 independent WP:RS covering a 10 year period that either confirm some of the claims already in the article, or provide new information to expand the article. There are many more reliable sources available via google that provide coverage and analysis of the Foundation or its programs, initiatives and partnerships with governments. Per WP:V, notability is based on the existence of suitable sources, not on the state of sourcing in an article. The issues can be fixed by adding these sources and re-writing some sections, and deletion is not cleanup. Keep: per WP:HEY. Change of !vote. Good rescue by . Keep: by nominator, per and WP:HEY. Kudos to . | Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER

01:55 Bethel Faith Spark Bible College. Nominated: Fails GNG and NORG. Delete: almost certainly an undeclared COI. Delete: Found nothing with SIGCOV in additional searches to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: for lack of significant coverage. I did my own search as required, and found nothing. Not little, nothing. There are zero sources on Google Scholar and Google Books. Ping me if you add more. Delete: my findings were the same as Bearian; even newspaper searches are void. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-08-30

19:37 Ashish Hemrajani. Nominated: Indian entrepreneur (BLP). Sources are mostly promotional interviews and so forth; I see no evidence of sustained coverage in sources that we can be confident are reliable and independent of the subject, as required for WP:BASIC. Keep: the available sources provide sufficient significant media coverage beyond the interviews including independent coverage to meet the basic GNG. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources, and, as I've written before, "Forbes is a crust of a shell of a carcass of a formerly reliable source." Delete: The first source by Bloomberg contributes to his notability even though it is somewhat promotional, but others are not useful. For example, the second is from 2014 and was already rejected in 2016, by substance, it is a WP:NEWSORGINDIA promotional profile. In the third, we can read and . The fourth contains roughly 150 words of biographical information on him, which is not enough for sigcov. The fifth is about his company and he is quoted as an executive. And so on. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-06

23:25 In the Mix (TV series). Nominated: This show is not notable enough for a Wikipedia article. All its sources are primary sources. (surprising for a PBS show huh?) Keep: I can only access the first two sources, but they are enough to establish a GNG pass. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

MONDAY 14 SEPTEMBER

01:25 Agate (game company). Nominated: I propose merging to Valthirian Arc: Hero School Story because the company seems to fail WP:CORPDEPTH and the article was initially created by an WP:SPA. Valthirian Arc appears to be their main notable work.

Merge: on the basis of WP:CORPDEPTH. Whilst not a formal guideline or policy, a significant indicia for non-notable game developers seems to be prose that has nothing to say but a play-by-play of basic business milestones and releases. A lot of this is uncited. If the developer has one notable game, that's an easy target. Verdict: Undecided.

01:12 Malik A. Ahmed. Nominated: I simply can not find sources about this person to meet WP:NAUTHOR or WP:GNG. Every linked source in the article appears to be self-published, interviews, or press releases. I couldn't find any non user-generated reviews of his book, and the sole source I found outside of this article is an issuewire source that is on the spam blacklist. However it appears to also be a press release. (they/them) Keep: Meets WP:AUTHOR (Criterion 1) and WP:GNG. While the nominator notes that coverage includes interviews and initial press releases, published authors in independent speculative fiction often begin with genre-focused spotlights and profile coverage across independent literary platforms. The subject's published novel (The Woman of Fire) has established formal bibliographic and cataloging records (including registered ISNI and national deposit entries). The issues cited regarding copyright and promotional tone are matters for cleanup and pruning under WP:PRESERVE, which can be resolved through routine editing rather than outright deletion. If consensus determines mainspace is premature, the appropriate remedy per WP:ATD is a move to Draft space (Draft:Malik A. Ahmed) to allow independent secondary reviews to be integrated without permanently deleting the page history. Delete: fails WP:NAUTHOR. Self published book with little to no third party coverage. Delete: everybody should know that we have never published original research. Our mission is literally to be a laggard. This is lacking significant coverage. It's just too soon. We are not a free web host to store your information until maybe could someday become notable. Verdict: Consensus to delete is clear. (, please reach out to me if you'd like this article restored to your user space for future work, but please do not return it to mainspace until it meets requirements. Better yet, use WP:AFC to help ensure it does.) Merged into another page.

00:58 Walt Johnson. Nominated: I am unable to find enough coverage of this American football player to meet WP:GNG. Perhaps someone else has better luck with their search filters. I also tried searching “Walter Johnson”, but that’s a needle in a haystack, plus Walter Johnson (linebacker) played in the NFL at the same time. Keep: and move to Walter Johnson (defensive tackle, born 1965). Meets WP:NBASIC as demonstrated by my expansion of the article, which is now over 650 words. The source found by WikiOriginal-9 is WP:SIGCOV to satisfy the requirement at WP:SPORTCRIT and then, in accordance with NBASIC, , which applies here. It is also likely that further coverage exists, but it is very difficult to search given his common name. It also seems some of the newspapers covering his area, such as the Okeechobee News, do not have archives from his time period online. If they were searched, it is likely more coverage would be available there as well, given his accomplishments in the region. Thoughts ? Keep: per the WP:HEY efforts by BeanieFan and WikiOriginal. Keep: by NBASIC and HEY as above. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:31 Theresa Greenfield. Nominated: I propose redirecting to 2020 United States Senate election in Iowa. This person is known primarily for their candidacy in one election, and that candidacy was not particularly interesting or compelling. The person does not pass GNG outside of election coverage, and in my estimation, the election coverage was ordinary. ? Keep: Solid, full-length coverage from Politico and Iowa Capital Dispatch during her 2020 campaign and Des Moines Register and Des Moines Register again during her 2018 campaign, and importantly she’s also got lengthy coverage of her 2021 USDA appointment from The Hill and Iowa Capital Dispatch. We also have coverage of her subsequent business position at Invest DSM here in the Des Moines Register. Redirect:: per nom. This is a case of failing WP:NPOL. The coverage of her is in relation to her campaign, and she doesn’t otherwise meet WP:GNG. Keep: per WP:BASIC and WP:NPOL per Jishara’s sources. Keep:: The current article needs a major cut to remove all WP:PROMO content. But I agree with Jishara that it meets WP:GNG, so meeting WP:NPOL is unnecessary. Easily ~10 sources with substantial coverage of subject, across two election runs (so not WP:ONEEVENT). Keep. Keep: but WP:STUBIFY to remove promotional cruft. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

2026-08-30

13:31 Paul Rofe (cricketer). Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSPORT. At this point, only has WP:ONESOURCE. Lacks WP:SIGCOV as potential WP:RS found in WP:BEFORE search limited to recent criminal conviction, with little or nothing about sports career: WP:ONEEVENT applies. | Keep: as well as playing 70 first-class matches there is plenty of coverage. Examples: “Rofe takes five” Gold Coast Bulletin November 26, 2001 (“Rising quick Rofe comes of age” Advertiser January 19, 2002 (). There is also his Cricinfo profile blurb. Keep: difficult to find many online sources as the Murdoch local paper is hidden from view, but they do exist. Added one already. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:02 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, East Sikkim. Nominated:

TUESDAY 15 SEPTEMBER

23:44 Tagalized Movie Channel. Nominated: This article had stayed like a stub for almost 12 years (since its creation in October 2014) and fails WP:GNG. There's barely any reliable sources or any notable events for it after a long search. — ?/?/? Delete: no WP:GNG coverage. They had more than enough opportunity to get recognized. Delete: Concurring that a quick BEFORE didn't reveal anything useful for sourcing. There's not even an article for this channel on tlwiki. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:40 Deb Placey. Nominated: Another sports journalist who fails WP:GNG. Keep: I found a short article from 1993 in the Arizona Daily Star , and a short mention with some family background in Newsday when she changed her professional name . There are a lot of job move articles too. Keep: per WP:HEY. Verdict: (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

23:27 Rebrickable. Nominated: Article in it's current state does not meet WP:THREE, raising WP:SIGCOV and WP:GNG concerns. A run down of each source is viewable here, but essentially, there is currently only one good source used in the article to establish notability (i.e. non-primary, neutral, and in-depth). No attempt was made by the article's creator to find additional sources, and requested the article be brought to AfD for further discussion. Would be happy to draftify the article until sources can be found, but if none exist, then delete. Keep: per . The sources listed above are sufficient to establish notability under the GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:21 Olakunle Williams. Nominated: Fails WP:BASIC. No significant independent coverage. • Delete: Most of the articles are not signed by editors; profiles and overly praises the subject - obviously WP:NEWSORGNIGERIA. Delete: Promotional tone, WP:PROMO. Also, I agree with @'s rationale. Delete: articles are Promotional, and doesnt show any significant independent coverageWP:PROMO. — Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Delete: AI article. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:18 Lillian Echelon Mbadiwe. Nominated: Fails WP:BASIC and WP:NACTOR. • Keep: She played the title role in Black Rose and the female lead in Yahoo+, and the first performance brought an AMVCA nomination and two Golden Movie Awards wins, a clear pass of WP:NACTOR. The Tribune interview is thin, but the career bar is met. Verdict: Undecided.

23:18 Deb Matejicka. Nominated: Unnotable sports journalist who fails WP:GNG. Delete: Fails WP:JOURNALIST. Most of the google news are just articles by her. No major awards or recognition. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

23:17 Panuel. Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP. I see nothing meeting WP:CORPDEPTH. • Delete: we are not CrunchBase. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:09 Crazy, Lovely, Cool. Nominated: Fails WP:NTV SERIES and WP:GNG. • Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

23:08 Lorenzo Menakaya. Nominated: Fails WP: BASIC and WP: NCREATIVE. • Delete: I do not see any GNG-worthy coverage. The awards are not significant enough for ANYBIO. He also directed one blue-linked movie (which is at AfD now) and co-produced another, this is something, but not enough for NCREATIVE. He also was a host at various ceremonies, but this also doesn't make him notable. Keep: because it meets WP: GNG and WP: NBIO. He has been nominated for a continental award, specifically The Future Awards Africa, more than once, and he won the major award for broadcast media in Nigeria. These cover WP: CREATIVE. He produced Yahoo+, a Netflix film and other films too. He was big enough to host the Africa Movie Academy Awards twice. Hosting a major continental awards show should be strong proof of notability. I ask that the community keep the article and allow for time to improve it rather than deleting it. Thank you for your consideration. Delete: Sources are trivial mentions and PR fluff, nothing to pass WP: GNG. The only film he's made that would constitute a claim to notability under WP: NCREATIVE is Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Ordinary Fellows, which I reviewed and believe is also non-notable, and besides multiple notable works are needed. Keep: This article clearly passes WP: NACTOR and WP: ANYBIO. Weak keep: about as bare as can be. Substantively, the subject appears to have gotten significant coverage, albeit from a media environment that chooses style over substance, and rewards those who are famous for being famous. In many countries, midday DJs are not as prestigious as drive time radio personalities, but I suspect that it's the reverse in Africa, due to its transportation issues (more people drive for work than to work, and listen to music and/or radio during the workday than in the United States), although this is just a working hypothesis. As an aside, being a co-producer or executive producer is negative notability, a red flag. Verdict: Undecided.

22:58 Ordinary Fellows. Nominated: Fails WP: NFILM. The sources are trailer announcements and festival listings, with no reviews. I couldn't find anything to support the awards either. • Keep: I see the film has significant cover and passes WP:NFP even if the coverage were mostly festival listings and releases. I found a review which was added yet on Book Art Ville. Sometimes, we editors will have to improve the articles even if we didn't create them. I do that a lot here. I ask that we keep this, and I commit to improving it too. Thank you. Delete: I am not really seeing any critical reviews beyond the BookArtVille post which looks like an unreliable blog to me, but might be usable. Capsule reviews or directory listings don't really contribute to notability nor do listings at film festivals. Delete: No evidence of passing WP:GNG or WP:NFILM. Nominator's source assessment is correct. Verdict: Undecided.

22:49 Ije Awele. Nominated: Fails WP:NFILM. • DELETE: Fails WP:NFILM. Nothing to support notability found in a search. Keep: as there is WP:SIGCOV for the subject so it passes WP:N-FILM, one such example - . KEEP: the subject has significant coverage and deserves a place on Wikipedia. I had listed about 60 films from Nollywood to add to Wikipedia, but I have decided to halt my intention to populate Wikipedia with films by Nigerian women, as the Wikimedia Foundation was promoting when they visited my academy. It takes a lot to create these things, which I do during my holidays, but I'm not sure how to feel if they are said to not have WP:SIGCOV after I've done the work, so... Let me keep improving on this particular subject. Delete: I did not find any reviews or other reasonable post-release coverage. Delete: Taking a look at the sources and article, I see no evidence this film was ever even released. A couple of the sources indicate it was "self-produced" by the lead actress and that producers were trying to get a distribution deal. Most of the sources are the typical Nigerian PR fluff. There are no independent, full-length reviews I can find of this film to pass WP:NFILM and nothing to indicate WP:GNG either. Verdict: Merged into another page.

22:48 Seamfix. Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP. The coverage is funding announcements, partnership notices and anniversary pieces. • Delete: Upon review, WP:NCORP is not met. The sources are promotional pieces or affiliated sources. The Nigeria Tech Awards are just trade awards (and becoming notable through winning a prestigious award only applies to people, not companies). Delete: fails WP:NCORP per above comments. I don't have anything to add. Delete: I can see a lot of WP:NEWSORGNIGERIA. Verdict: Undecided.

22:46 Chimezie Emewulu. Nominated: Fails WP:BASIC. The sourcing is coverage of Seamfix rather than of Emewulu. • Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources, and, as I've written before, "Forbes is a crust of a shell of a carcass of a formerly reliable source." Practically every longstanding editor has seen their hard work deleted or destroyed here, including me, so I sympathize with . Delete: Sources do not support notability under any applicable guideline. Verdict: Merged into another page.

22:27 2016 Katie-Wynnewood tornado. Nominated: I propose merging to Tornado outbreak of May 7–10, 2016 because this article does not add any substantial content that couldn't be said in its section of the outbreak article. There are only about 900 words in this article, most of which are in the tornado summary that looks longer than it is because there are a ton of unnecessary paragraph breaks. The only reason I see this needing an article at all is because it was an EF4, which alone is not grounds for needing an article. Verdict: to Tornado outbreak of May 7–10, 2016. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

22:03 Ali Lenin Aguilera. Nominated: Appears not to have WP:SIGCOV and fails WP:BLP. No significant independent coverage found; existing references are affiliated or routine mentions. Per WP:NRVE, notability requires verifiable, objective evidence of significant independent coverage, which is absent here. Delete: No awards, recognitions or impact that confirm notability. Delete: I searched for additional sources that could demonstrate notability, but did not find anything usable. The assertion of notability in the article is extraordinarily weak, and I can't find any treasure trove of info that would gainsay this. Delete: as it fails notability Delete:

same as above, there's no evidence of notability. Delete: this because he just doesn't have enough real, independent news coverage to meet Wikipedia's notability rules. Keep.: The subject meets the General Notability Guideline (WP:GNG) because he has been the subject of significant, verifiable coverage in independent, reliable secondary sources—including national fact-checking organizations (EsPaja, Cotejo, Efecto Cocuyo), international legal and corporate news (Pique Newsmagazine), and public records regarding his role as general campaign manager for a presidential candidate and his official appearance before the Supreme Tribunal of Justice. While earlier iterations of the article required clean-up for neutrality and WP:BLP compliance, the current draft has been thoroughly purged of unverified claims and relies strictly on secondary, verifiable sources. Deletion is unwarranted as the subject holds verified public prominence in recent political and legal events. — Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Keep: The subject meets general notability guidelines (WP:GNG) and criteria for biographies of living persons (WP:BIO). The article is well-sourced with multiple independent, secondary reliable sources documenting his public career, legal background, and his verified role as general director of a national presidential campaign in Venezuela (confirmed by independent fact-checkers such as Efecto Cocuyo, EsPaja.com, and Cotejo.info), alongside official public records. — (•) has made few or no other edits outside this topic. Delete: Wikipedia is not LinkedIn. Delete: WP:NOTLINKEDIN and WP:PROMO. The editor/creator of the article seems to be using LLMs to add details and also generate his responses so it also fails WP:AIPOLICY. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This person also fails : “Campaigning for public office, or managing a congressional campaign or office, by itself, is not sufficient for notability ... Service on a political party county or state committee, by itself, is not notable, because many attorneys use such service as a marketing tool or résumé filler.” Delete: Notability not demonstrated. Delete: Page lacks the in depth independent coverage needed to satisfy WP:GNG and WP:BIO. Verdict: Merged into another page. 21:53 Cheryl Stern. Nominated: At this time, subject fails to meet

WP:NACTOR Delete: So far, she has appeared in a few bit parts on Broadway and on tour, so I'd say WP:TOOSOON. Weak keep: based on what's available and what's been added. Just so you know, , IMDb is an unreliable source. I just had a conversation last night with an otherwise notable artist who was mistakenly proud of her IMDb page (sorry for the blind item). Delete: The problem I've got is none of the sources are specifically about her and don't really go into depth, so we're just trying to mine as much as we can out of the source material to get it above stub level. For a BLP, we need to do better and be sure of having high quality and readily available sources. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:52 Dileep Agrawal. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG. I didn't find significant independent coverage of the subject. I had flagged it as BLPPROD earlier. But, by the suggestion from other editors, I am nominating this for AfD. Merge: with WorldLink Communications. The company itself seems notable. Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances. Merge: with WorldLink Communications - The person has no notability by himself. Verdict: to WorldLink Communications. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

21:40 Bhawana Ghimire. Nominated: I think it fails WP:GNG. Many sources are company-based press release coverage which don't account for the notability guideline. Delete: Routine coverage of appointments and resignations, trivial mentions and other interview pieces do not help establish notability. Keep voters should try to find sources that are completely independent of the subject. New ground, old hurdles can be considered one such source, as it provides substantial independent analysis of the subject, but the subject is still far from meeting GNG. Weak Keep: Arguably enough coverage via google news and google books to suggest that this article passes WP:GNG. Verdict: Undecided.

21:31 Ajeya Sumargi. Nominated: The subject fails WP:GNG. Most of the references given are press-release-style coverage. I didn't find any independent sources covering the subject. Please ping me on my talk page if you find any. Keep: based on a second look. What do you think, ? Keep: This doesn't look like a typical promotional article, it also contains sources that cover him in depth. He was also covered in a book, so even its review discusses him. Keep: Given the fact that a book covered him, I'd be surprised if it didn't have anything on him that we could include here. In solidarity, (?) Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:25 Dikesh Malhotra. Nominated: The article fails WP:GNG or WP:BASIC - virtually all the sourcing is primary or is not independent: the subject's own website, two YouTube interview videos, and a now-dead Samsung corporate blog post. None of the cited sources are independent, secondary coverage about Malhotra himself; most of the article's content (parentage, siblings, in-laws) is heredity/gene-based rather than establishing why he individually meets notability criteria. Notability is not inherited from his father's company or his wife's pageant title (WP:NOTINHERITED). Recommend delete, or draftify if someone wants to find better sourcing. Delete: for lack of secondary coverage. His father who created the company does not have an article either. Redirect: to IMS Group. It's poorly sourced to blogs and lists. Other than his wedding, there's not much more in the article than his work. Delete: Notability has not been demonstrated. Delete: No indication of significance. Fails WP:SIGCOV, WP:BIO. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:04 Kanchan Amatyia. Nominated: I think the article fails WP:GNG. There are not significant independent coverage on the subject. Please write on my talk page if you think otherwise. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources, and, as I've written before, "Forbes is a crust of a shell of a carcass of a formerly reliable source." The Huffington Post is another one gone wrong. I want her to pass, but the sources are a checklist of everything deprecated. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

00:05 Walter Light. Nominated: Permastub (for 22 years) on a subject who made drums and started a company that made drums. At best, merge to the company. Keep: He has a fairly important career as a percussionist outside of his timpani designing. See his entry in Percussionists: A Biographical Dictionary (page 235) and the Percussive Notes article “Walter Light - The End of an Era” for in-depth information about him. Additionally, most percussion reference books at least mention how important he was to timpani design. I know you said there could be a merge, but there is also no harm in a sourced stub. Delete: I’m unable to find any sources (the one presented above doesn’t seem to be the same person), and no others have surfaced in this discussion. Delete for lack of sourcing, notability not shown. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. I did my own search as required, and found nothing. Ping me if you add more. Merge: to American Drum Manufacturing Company which he founded. The links to the two sources mentioned above. The first one is written like a tribute to him and the second is somewhat short. I didn’t find anything more. Verdict: to American Drum Manufacturing Company without prejudice against selective merge. Clear consensus against retention as a standalone page, but I don’t think the arguments for deletion would necessarily hold up at RfD, leaving us with a viable, cheap ATD. Merged into another page.

01:22 Altıntaş, Nazilli. Nominated: Not notable. Needs more sources, none of which are available from a reliable source. In solidarity, Keep: it seems to be legally recognized with census data. delete: I don’t think breaking up the census by city neighborhood generates notability. I’m all for putting a table in the city article that lists the information (not to mention a map) but a separate article is unwarranted. Redirect: per Katzrockso. Keep: per Crouch, Swale. [[User:Vitorperrut555|VitorFriboquen :]] Keep: per Crouch. Keep: I visited this city last year, it was truly beautiful. It is by no means a fake city I agree with Crouch’s opinion. Keep: Expanded it a little with some sources; now certainly passes GEO-LAND. Keep and Improve?: Keep it but is there any way it can be improved with more information added? Verdict: Undecided.

20:54 Bikash Nepal. Nominated: I think there is not enough significant independent coverage of the subject. Fails WP:GNG Redirect: to Nepal Foods as an WP:ATD. The coverage is either about the company he founded, or promotional pieces about his entrepreneurial skills. Verdict: to Nepal Foods as a sensible ATD. Merged into another page.

20:42 Vladislav Nikitin. Nominated: Obscure entrepreneur that has very little news coverage, the MSN source does not mention this individual in the matter this article claims it does, and most of the references are blogs or social media pages. It also does not help that this article reads like an advert. Delete: The MSN source doesn't mention him, the rest is PR and social media. Nothing in Ukrainian or Russian media either. Fails WP:GNG. Keep: Although the article has a number of shortcomings, the author could potentially revise it if it were returned to their drafts. Draftify: as per above discussion. Delete: this article seems too resume-ish for me. I like the comment by Signahistar. Verdict: I'd gladly consider restoring to draft if the author (or anyone) manages to find sources establishing notability. Merged into another page.

00:00 Meitei people in Assam. Nominated: The sources consist almost entirely of routine local event notices, primary press releases, and directory listings (primarily from regional portals like e-pao.net). Nothing to suggest WP:GNG also I see a lot of WP:SYNTH issues here. Keep: This nomination statement is unreasonable. The substance of the article is from independent, reliable sources and the insubstantial sources are only to matters that could be removed. The description is a serious mis-statement. Articles are not deleted for lack of scholarly sources. GNG is met and SYNTH does not look to me to be a problem since claims seem to be referenced without combining sources. The lead does not contain Indic script and the single character in the infobox seems legitimate to me and anyway would not require the article to be deleted. Keep: The largest section in the article is “History”, which is sourced to this book, which to me looks like a reliable source. The topic also has many hits on Google Scholar, such as. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:00 Western Division of Suffolk. Nominated: ; Merge Western Division of Suffolk into West Suffolk (constituency) Keep: West Suffolk (constituency) is about the single-member seat created in 1997 and held since 2024 by Nick Timothy. That article states itself that the 1832–1885 Western Division was a separate constituency on different boundaries. Merging a two-member county division abolished in 1885 into a seat created 112 years later would tell readers the two are the same thing when they share nothing but name. Verdict: to West Suffolk (constituency). 00:00 Hamaar Betwa. Nominated: Appears to fail WP:NFILM. Nothing found in a BEFORE to support notability. Delete: per nominator. 00:00 Nasha Jurm Aur Gangsters. Nominated: (no reason recorded) Keep: I believe it would be unfair to say this article fails WP:NFILM and WP:GNG A few clarifications on WP:GNG Verdict: Withdrawn. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:00 Good for the Soul (song). Nominated: Despite the article's size, the article was built with original research and potentially unreviewed AI prompts. Draftify: per nom. The song charted and the album received many reviews, so there is a nontrivial possibility that some of them contain coverage of the song. But I agree that there are some indications that the page was created with AI assistance, which is contrary to WP:NOLLM. Verdict: (non-admin closure) • Merged into another page.

00:00 Thomas Vles. Nominated: Not seeing enough significant, independent coverage in reliable sources for WP:NBIO. The FD article only briefly talks about him, MT/Sprout seems to be content marketing (this also looks like content marketing), Laughing Squid is a blog, and several others are primary sources. The two Silicon Canals articles seem to have the strongest coverage (here's also another one), but they aren't enough on their own. I also tried searching Google News and Google, and found a UPI piece about a marketing thing he did (also briefly covered in the Standard), and a brief mention in the Guardian, but not much else in reliable sources. I'd suggest redirecting to the article for GoDutch. Keep: There are independent coverage of Thomas Vles beyond the sources currently used in the article. Silicon Canals has published multiple articles covering his roles at Tellow and GoDutch, while MT/Sprout and De Ondernemer have also published coverage of his career, including Poopy Cat and Wedoido. Redirect: to GoDutch per ATD and CHEAP. Vles is the founder of a startup and presently fails the GNG. Startups often fail NCORP but there is some evidence above that the company might be notable. Still undecided on this matter. Redirect trumps delete while we carry this obvious target and it isn't a straightforward NCORP failure. Verdict: Merged into another page.

20:04 EVRYTHNG. Nominated: Non-notable per WP:NORG. Exclusively routine coverage; article is clear WP:PROMO. Keep: per analyst reports found in the previous discussion. The issue here is that they are very expensive and have close to zero chance of being actually added to the article, but nevertheless they exist (WP:NEXIST) and show that the company is notable. Keep: NCORP AfD's are (well ... should be) decided on the quality of sources, and in the previous nomination there were three analyst reports identified which meet GNG/WP:NCORP criteria. Therefore this topic company is notable. And once notable, always notable. Delete: per nom. The sources provided in the previous nom were not academic studies. They are of commercial nature and come under WP:PRIMARY. I don't think we should even cite them in the article. It is a commercial topic and need non-commercial in-depth coverage outside of WP:TRADES. Keep: as per multiple reliable independent sources identified in the form of analyst reports which are already accepted in policy such as WP:LISTED inv Verdict: On balance of P&G weight, I see a rough consensus that sources are sufficient to meet NCORP, and certainly no consensus to delete. Commercial sources are perfectly acceptable, as long as they are reliable and independent of the subject. Promotional language, if any, can be... Merged into another page.

01:07 List of honours of the Grand Ducal Family of Luxembourg by country. Nominated: Page has had a notability template for several years now. It also has many of the problems that were present with the articles discussed at :Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/List of honours of Italy awarded to heads of state and royalty in that it fails WP:LISTN, WP:SYNTH, WP:NOTDATABASE. Delete: Maybe it's the American in me speaking, but I've never understood these lists and sections – why exactly do so many countries hand out these “honours” to other countries’ royalty like candy? Order of St. Olav#Current holders of the Grand Cross and List of foreign recipients of the Order of the Chrysanthemum say Norway and Japan gives their honours to numerous state leaders as a quite routine “diplomatic courtesy”, so I don't really know why anyone is supposed to care. Order of the Redeemer says “In modern times, in practice the Grand Cross is awarded only to foreign heads of state.” I always glaze over sections like Henri, Grand Duke of Luxembourg#Honours and Guillaume V of Luxembourg#Titles and honours and think they should all be deleted unless there's context for why they deserved them beyond holding their position. Like, the former lists Henri received the Order of Merit of the Federal Republic of Germany, which has been given to a quarter-million people! Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:10 Mami Matsui. Nominated: The article was AFD-ed and deleted back in 2019. The new version doesn't seem to differ from the deleted one. Delete: just to a lack of coverage on her career. If someone could find some neat sources in Japanese, that might change things, but sans that... Keep: People are notable for their achievements, not just whether they get coverage or not. They can meet either the general notability guidelines or the subject specific guidelines. WP:NACTOR number 1 is clearly met, “The person has had significant roles in multiple notable films, notable television shows, stage performances, or other notable productions” <https://www.animenewsnetwork.com/encyclopedia/people.php?id=7667> has bold letters for major characters in a series. Delete: poorly sourced; one source is not enough for a BLP. Ping me if you add more. Verdict: The term notability, as used on Wikipedia, strictly refers to coverage. Having one's role appear in boldface on a filmography listing does not establish notability threshold per NACTOR, NBIO or GNG. Merged into another page.

TUESDAY 15 SEPTEMBER

20:04 May 1996 Kentucky tornado outbreak. Nominated: This topic should not be a standalone article because it fails to meet Wikipedia's structural and content redundancy guidelines by repeating identical data across stacked infoboxes and paragraphs, which artificially inflates a stub-length event that would be much better merged into a broader regional weather history page. ()

Expand/Draftify: I'd argue that a full expansion/rewrite of the article to match other tornado event articles—expansion of the lead section, meteorological summary of the atmospheric conditions that contributed to the outbreak, summary of the outbreak itself, and a table of the reported tornadoes as well as sections describing the impact if possible—would suffice over a deletion. The Kentucky outbreak is notable enough to warrant its own article, especially considering several of the reported tornadoes impacted the Louisville area, it's not fleshed out as is and needs a total overhaul. Delete, Draftify or Merge: I would not be surprised if it does have lasting coverage how ever this article needs a ton of help if would want to survive. The best option would be to merge into the Tornadoes of 1996 page and maybe down the line a better article could be created. Draftify: I don't know that I hold much hope of this getting a proper expansion, but there's no harm done in giving it a chance. I'm not totally against a merge, though, if that's where the community wants to go. Verdict: Merged into another page.

20:02 Shooting of Qassem Hussam. Nominated: Contested PROD. My reasoning for the PROD stands: "Israeli soldier non-fatally shoots Palestinian man" is, regrettably, WP:RUNOFT-HEMILL. No indication that there is anything exceptional to this event or that it will have any enduring impact.' There is nothing there to indicate this is any different than any other IDF-on-Palestinean incident (indeed, it is much less so than many). 19:37 Boniface Akenga. Nominated: Non-notable Kenyan footballer; sources are mostly routine match/transfer coverage. One source that appears to be WP:SIGCOV is based entirely on quotes from Akenga and thus not independent. WP:GNG is not met. One source is a non-existent link (it goes to the site's homepage) that has never been archived. The page creator has had multiple page creations deleted under CSD G15, especially following a spree of article creation in August, and this article may be partly AI-generated. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: for lacking notability. Delete: Fails in WP:GNG. 17:57 Wang Kelong. Nominated: I propose redirecting to B&K Corporation because the subject is not independently notable. Sources are primarily about the company, or are Forbes lists and a WP:BLOOMBERGPROFILES, which generally are not to be used to establish notability. There is also grounds to suspect a WP:COI from the author. Redirect: to B&K Corporation per nom. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources, and, as I've written before, "Forbes is a crust of a shell of a carcass of a formerly reliable source." Redirect to B&K Corporation (with the history preserved under the redirect): per Wikipedia:Deletion policy#Alternatives to deletion. A redirect with the history preserved under the redirect will allow editors to selectively merge any content that can be reliably sourced to the target article. A redirect with the history preserved under the redirect will allow the redirect to be undone if significant coverage in reliable sources is found in the future. Verdict: to B&K Corporation. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

17:56 Sleepy Sea. Nominated: One of a number of very lengthy, possibly AI generated, articles about the work of photographer Kansuke Yamamoto . This article is about a single photograph, and basically a description of what a single author says in her book Japan's Modern Divide: The Photographs of Hiroshi Hamaya and Kansuke Yamamoto. As such, Sleepy Sea shows little sign at all of meeting WP:GNG. Time for it to go. Keep: The 2013 J. Paul Getty Museum catalogue discusses Sleepy Sea in detail. Amanda Maddox compares it with Magritte's The Reckless Sleeper and discusses the compass, pocket watch and toy gun marked "Japan". She relates the photograph to Breton, its title and postwar Japan. I think that satisfies WP:SIGCOV. WP:GNG does not set a fixed number of sources; its note on sources allows for cases where one source is credible, neutral and detailed enough for a comprehensive article. Maddox's essay appeared in an edited Getty Museum catalogue. The work is also documented in the 2001 Tokyo Station Gallery catalogue and in the 2017 Japanese Surrealist Photography materials. I don't think the nomination's reference to a single author, by itself, shows that Sleepy Sea fails WP:GNG when Maddox discusses the photograph in this much detail. Keep: I believe that the sources identified by are sufficient to meet the GNG. Keep: the main article in a sense reflects the artist's body of work, and burying this work into it doesn't do it justice. There are sufficient sources for this stub. Can the main article and this stub be improved? Yes, but AfD is not for cleanup. Verdict: Undecided.

15:35 LCD television. Nominated: We should merge this article's content into Liquid crystal display and Television since LCD TVs are just a subset of both these articles, and most of the info presented here can just be copy-pasted selectively into TV's #History, LCD's #History and #Advantages and disadvantages section. / Uploads Keep: Content in the encyclopedia should be decided based on the sourcing and not "service to the readers" (otherwise we would be required to rewrite lots of content about American politics). From what I see, there are plenty of sources that cover LCD TVs separately from displays in general, which means Wikipedia should do the same. Oppose: keep. The topics may conceptually overlap, but the history of LCD TVs specifically has received sufficient attention (this last is about LCDs, but has TV-specific material). The volume of this material is more than sufficient to justify a standalone article. Verdict: for now, at least as a place to discuss the history of LCD televisions. Perhaps in a few years the question can be raised again. Merged into another page.

17:14 Tamil Eelam (1984–2009). Nominated: WP:POVFORK. Tamil Eelam was never recognised by any other country and the LTTE never declared independence. The Sri Lankan government's administrative apparatus continued to operate in the areas controlled by the LTTE throughout the Sri Lankan civil war. Sri Lankan government officials continued to provide public services such as schools, hospitals and public transport, in the area and the government paid them and provided funds. The LTTE even allowed Sri Lankan elections to take place when it suited them (e.g. 2004 Sri Lankan parliamentary election). Content from this article should instead be added to the relevant sections in the Tamil Eelam. (Verdict: No support for this other than from the nominator. (non-admin closure) In solidarity, (?) 17:13 List of maned wolf physical characteristics and adaptations.

Nominated: Unjustified spinout from maned wolf, implausible search term, and bullet point lists and tables of characteristics just isn't how we structure articles? ~ Speedy delete: per A10.

LLM-generated, not a Wikipedia list. – (c) Delete: I don't know whether it is LLM-generated or not, but it is certainly a poorly constructed and unnecessary fork of Maned wolf. There is no good reason for fragmenting the information in this way.

Delete: but without biting the newbie if possible, I believe that this is most likely LLM-generated. This article was created eight minutes after :List of dietary items of the maned wolf was created in Diff/1375025856 (AbuseLog/45127719), less than half an hour before AbuseLog/45127922 and 20 minutes after AbuseLog/45127565. All of them are related to maned wolves, so I believe that this is someone that's here in good faith and wants to contribute about their favourite subject so we should also try to handle that correctly. There are other filter log entries that indicate that this may be someone who is not confident in their English abilities. ‑‑ Delete: Topic covered in article on the Maned Wolf under 'anatomy'. I considered redirecting this when I came across it while new page patrolling but decided against doing so. Delete: per WP:TNT - possibly notable topic for research, but this is a poorly written and poorly sourced essay with a chart attached. It's as if the author has never read a Wikipedia article.

Speedy delete: Everyone above already made most of the points I would, with this jumping to a speedy due to blatant AI usage. I'm inclined to believe that certain species or species groups can have articles of this type if there is a unusually significant amount of research devoted to identifying characteristics, but I do not believe that the maned wolf actually meets that standard. Best, ~ Verdict:

17:02 Louisa Henson Mussler. Nominated: This subject fails WP:GNG and WP:SIGCOV. The article was initially nominated for speedy deletion for promotion and rewritten/posted same day. The sources are not independent, blogs, or only briefly mention the subject. There is also grounds for concern for the author having a WP:COI. Delete: The creator's evasive responses ("No one stands to gain...") strongly suggest a family connection or other COI. If they cared about getting the article right, the thing to do would have been to create a draft that could be reviewed, so that they could be helped to see what is wrong with it. Instead, they dumped it straight back into mainspace. Move to Draft: This article needs more cooking. Based on my limited understanding of the subject as a Louisvillian, it's possible more sourcing from the Courier Journal (via newspapers.com) and perhaps radio industry-related books is available and can be reviewed for citations, and the weak citations (like from blogs) either dropped or used as an additional backup to harder sources. Delete: per nom and reasons given by . Draftify: as per above discussion. The article is only 6 days old, and appears to have been rushed to main space. Needs more time. Verdict: as a valid ATD. Due to the COI concerns raised by , I'm EC-protecting the mainspace page to force the author to go through AfC. Merged into another page.

16:52 Tsarist Russia. Nominated: This recently-created behemoth (32,000+ words! c.f. WP:SIZERULE) duplicates the existing articles on Tsardom of Russia and Russian Empire in one article. This seems to be a case of WP:REDUNDANTFORK. A quick look at sourcing shows that the topic of "Tsarist Russia" may be notable as a historiographical concept, but not as a WP:DUP/WP:OVERLAP of existing articles. Possible alternatives to deletion include turning it into a disambiguation page, or draftifying to let the author reformulate it to focus on the historiography. Draftify: per above. The content of this article can and should be covered in other articles that already exist. Regarding comparisons with Prussia and France, we already have articles on other states that existed on the territory of Russia, such as the Soviet Union and the Russian Empire. What this article tries to do is unify Tsardom of Russia and Russian Empire into a single page. This effective merge is also not supported by the sources, as they mostly do not cover the whole 1547-1917 period together. Delete: as WP:CFORK, we don't need this (and can't accept duplication on this massive scale). No objection to merging some of the content to the existing articles if it's needed (fills in worthwhile gaps) and reliably cited. Making it a draft just kicks the can down the road, to where it will still be way too big and way too overlapping, on a subject that appears to be a WP:SYNTH conflation of Tsardom of Russia and Russian Empire as noted above, so there is no point talking about draftifying. Strong keep: per WP:CONCEPTDAB and 's reasoning. Tsarist Russia is a distinct concept which relates to a period extending from the 16th century to 1917, which is not encompassed by other articles on the various periods of Russian history. It is analogous to Ancien régime. 's claim that this reflects WP:SYNTH is simply not correct. There are libraries of sources which make direct reference to this concept. Draftify: or Delete It's an interesting idea, but the page right now doesn't really work as a broad concept page. It combines two or so discrete eras of Russian history/government into one hazy notion and doesn't properly abbreviate the sections enough. I don't doubt that there are sources that describe both 1503 Russia (or whatever) and 1903 Russia as "Tsarist Russia", but they're not the same entity. It would be like a page that just combined the Russian Republic + the Russian SFSR as "Communist Russia" or the various French republics as "Republican France". There's probably a version of this that's much shorter and better uses WP:SUMMARY style (and reserves space for the many hatnotes/wikilinks), but this version now doesn't meet the mark. It also makes it more confusing to the lay-reader what's what and when and what the proper terms are. UPDATE: Article's prose has been halved (32,300 to 16,712), with much of the content being moved into fork articles. I'm going to see if I can get it below 15 hundred. Verdict: Undecided.

16:10 Postliberalism. Nominated: Chock-full of WP:AISIGNS, as described by the template at the top of the article. (you just lost the game) Verdict: Reverted to non-AI version. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

15:48 Krishnaguru Adhyatmik Vishvavidyalaya. Nominated: Article was PROD by but material was added and PROD removed by . Despite the edit summary saying that reliable secondary sources were used, one source is dead and another is the institution website. AjayDas has been shown to use LLM at WP:AINB#User:AjayDas and this edit shows every sign of also being LLM, so can't remedy the concerns which caused the initial PROD. Since the PROD was contested, taking article to AfD. Delete: Additional searches yielded nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: the only independent and reliable source, The Sentinel, is a dead link. Everything else is either from the college or unreliable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

15:29 Columbia Central High School (Brooklyn, Michigan). Nominated: I propose draftifying because the article is not of high enough quality for mainspace and does not follow the WP:WPSCH guidelines Draftify: With a bit more work, this article could be publishable. Right now, the tone and the sources are not up to WP standards. Delete: No reason to draftify....the article was created in 2011 and that's an era compared to the 90 days limit mentioned in WP:DRAFTNO. My additional searches didn't yield anything to warrant standalone notability....just some trivial mentions in few incidents' coverage and some ROUTINE sports coverage....nothing with SIGCOV about the school itself. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: to Columbia School District (Michigan)#Schools. This preserves the history for anyone who wishes to use the content for a draft (with proper attribution!). Merged into another page.

15:28 Pontiac High School (Quebec). Nominated: I propose draftifying because the article is not of high enough quality for mainspace and does not follow the WP:WPSCH guidelines Delete: No reason to draftify....the article was created in 2010 and that's an era compared to the 90 days limit mentioned in WP:DRAFTNO. And my additional searches didn't yield anything with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: Merged into another page.

15:27 SMS Hulu Selangor. Nominated: I propose draftifying because the article is not of high enough quality for mainspace and does not follow the WP:WPSCH guidelines Delete: No reason to draftify....the article was created in 2011 and that's an era compared to the 90 days limit mentioned in WP:DRAFTNO. And my additional searches didn't yield anything with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability....just some ROUTINE sports coverage and directorial listings. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: the one source is primary. No need to draftify. Fails NSCHOOL. Redirect: to List of schools in Selangor. Maybe a smerge of the one source. Redirect: to List of schools in Selangor, too old to draftify. Verdict: to List of schools in Selangor. Merged into another page.

03:03 Meitei people in Meghalaya. Nominated: The sources consist almost entirely of routine local event notices, primary press releases, and directory listings (primarily from regional portals like e-pao.net). Nothing to suggest WP:GNG also I see a lot of WP:SYNTH issues here. Verdict: to Meitei culture. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

12:58 Pirojpur Riverview Ecopark. Nominated: No significant coverage in independent reliable sources. Five of the six cited sources are non-independent government sources. The sixth reads like a promotional travel brochure (translated version), so WP:RSNOI may be relevant. Keep: even though they're not independent, a state park should be notable as long as there are reliable sources. Deleting this would be a terrible precedent to delete thousands of other state parks and protected areas. If we're going to change the requirements for parks, then there should be a wider discussion. Redirect to Pirojpur_District#Tourist_attractions: Contra , there is no presumption of notability for state parks. And this isn't even the equivalent of a U.S. state park; it's operated by Pirojpur District, which is a second-level division as part of Barisal Division and thus the U.S. equivalent of a county.

I do not think there is any presumption that local U.S. county parks would be considered notable. Basically, the only protected areas with presumptive notability under WP:NCEO are nationally designated areas. For this local attraction, it's WP:GNG or bust. And the sources are not good for this. They're all official government documents or webpages, plus a news page that reads like a local tourist guide. That's not sufficient independent WP:SIGCOV. I suggest redirecting to Pirojpur_District#Tourist_attractions, where this subject is mentioned. Keep: Bengali-language searches uncovered additional sources about the park's inadequacies and about improvements there. Together with the travel section article from Bangladeshi news source Jagonews24.com, these are sufficient to meet WP:GNG. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

12:53 2025 Veteran Fencing World Championships. Nominated: WP:NOTDATABASE. No significant coverage in independent reliable sources. All of the Fencing Time Live citations are results tables with no actual coverage. Delete: most age-specific competitions are not notable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

12:53 2025 Veteran Fencing World Championships. Nominated: WP:NOTDATABASE. No significant coverage in independent reliable sources. All of the Fencing Time Live citations are results tables with no actual coverage. Delete: most age-specific competitions are not notable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

12:53 2025 Veteran Fencing World Championships. Nominated: WP:NOTDATABASE. No significant coverage in independent reliable sources. All of the Fencing Time Live citations are results tables with no actual coverage. Delete: most age-specific competitions are not notable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

03:17 Asgaard (brewery). Nominated: Can't find any independent non-blog sources. Doesn't seem to meet notability standards. In solidarity, Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

TUESDAY 15 SEPTEMBER

12:27 Dakota Floeter. Nominated: Doesn't appear to meet Wikipedia's notability guidelines, lack of significant coverage. Delete: Doesn't meet WP:NBLP. Delete: poorly sourced; two citations are not enough for a BLP. An actor can first become notable for commercial advertising work; examples include Jon Cryer (cereal), Geneva Carr ("rollover mom"), and David Duchovny (beer). However, this phenomenon does not include this person. Ping me if you add more. Verdict: Merged into another page.

12:15 Mongrel complex. Nominated: I propose merging to Cultural cringe because this seems to be just one of many synonyms (this one, Brazilian) of the concept better known under the current name. The concept is discussed as such in the academic paper here <https://www.cceol.com/search/article-detail?id=1299504> . Unless a case can be made that this Brazilian context is sufficiently distinct (perhaps by focusing on Brazil) and cannot be applied to other countries, it does not merit an independent article. | Keep: Article is sufficiently focused and detailed on the Brazilian context to justify a separate page (and there's even more info to add from the PT article), and is mostly well-sourced, which means a merge of valid material would make the relevant section in the target page unnecessarily bigger. • Merge: per nom. The article is substantially unsourced, and what is sourced is mostly various quotations, so a merge would not overwhelm the target. The paper linked by Piotrus is about the target, not about Brazil specifically. I found another one which also discusses Mongrel complex only as an example of what it calls . So the highest quality sources do not discuss the concept separately, and we shouldn't do it either. Keep: The article is well sourced and no need of MERGE as there are enough sources available as I see in Google Scholar as this, this, this, this study papers indicates standalone notability of the subject. The unsourced section is covered by this and this. Verdict: Undecided.

11:28 Eugeniusz Nowak. Nominated: One-time Olympic participant, a redirect to Poland at the 1924 Summer Olympics#Boxing is possible. Corresponding article on Polish Wikipedia is likewise a short dumping ground. Keep: a legendary figure, apparently has been called the “father of Polish boxing” – a quick search brought up a 7,500-word piece here and an in-depth story about his career from 50 years after it. Keep: per BeanieFan11. This is a mirror, but it suggests this text is based on or an excerpt from this book: I can’t sadly find many more sources, but I do see him in a snippet mention in https://www.google.co.kr/books/edition/Sport_olimpijski_w_Polsce_1919_1939/akITAQAAIAAJ and that book’s title suggests his bio should be there as well. I also see [<https://bokser.org/content/2012/07/20/120013/eugeniusz-nowak-pierwszy-olimpijczyk/>, another SIGCOV, and its cites another source, “”Ring Wolny”, nr 1, maj 1956”. I also expect review of Polish press from the 1920s would show some contemporary media coverage but this content is still poorly digitized. --| Keep: Coverage uncovered since the nom appears good enough for a WP:GNG pass. I’ve added one of the references to the article. Verdict: Merged into another page.

11:17 2026 San Benito shooting. Nominated: I propose redirecting to List of mass shootings in the United States in 2026 because this shooting didn’t even make national headlines and was created with the rationale “Seems notable since suspect is an immigrant” which has absolutely no bearing on whether or not an incident is notable. Usually I try to give articles the benefit of the doubt, but since this story hasn’t even gone beyond the immediate local area, I cannot see why this article was created. There has not been that intense of local coverage either nor any indication of lasting effect or wider geographic impact, meaning it quite clearly fails WP:NEVENT. Redirect: to echo the editor rationale, the article seems weirdly concerned that the suspect is a honduran national. Seems that this was created for someone to vent their anti-immigrant sentiment. Not appropriate for the platform. Redirect: as per nom: It’s now two days after the fact and it seems to have been only covered in short stories in the local press. No evidence of wider notability or lasting significance. As tragic of an event as it is, these are some of hundreds and hundreds of people killed in mass shootings in the U.S. every year (not to mention the tens of thousands killed every year by gun violence). Redirect: per nom and JTheOG, if we have WP:SUSTAINED coverage later we can submit a draft through AfC. ?, contribs)? Redirect: nothing special about this mass shooting other than the fact that the shooter was an “illegal alien”, and this story will fade into obscurity after a few weeks. Verdict: to List of mass shootings in the United States in 2026. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

11:17 Madeline Grant. Nominated: deletion requested under Wikipedia:Biographies of living persons#Relatively unknown subjects on request from the subject via VTRS (). As already tagged the subject does not clearly pass WP:GNG. Support deletion: per request. Delete: Yes, agree, not a strong case for notability - primary sources, fairly trivial events, no indication of lasting coverage. Delete: too soon as an assistant editor and marginally notable; has not sought attention to herself. Verdict: Merged into another page.

11:15 Cineyug. Nominated: This ‘entertainment company’ clearly fails WP:GNG and WP:NCORP, the only sources I could find were a bunch of directory listings as well as some promotional blurbs such as this that are clearly paid content. Delete: Fails WP:NCORP. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

11:05 İdil Saçalır. Nominated: Does not meet WP:SPORTSIG-COV: Keep: Established player in a top-level league. Turkish Super League is to the WNBA as NPB is to MLB, or the KHL to the NHL. Verdict: (non-admin closure) 🍒🥧 Merged into another page.

10:30 Peter Murray (immunologist). Nominated: No reliable, verifiable, independent sources. All the sources are listings, non-independent, or by him rather than about him. Keep: per WP:NPROF and Elemimele's comment above. He has contributed to many papers and it's fair to say that he has thus contributed to his field of academia. Keep.: Clearly notable. 3474 citations in 2026 alone: that's a lot, and very few scientists have more. h = 99 is very respectable, and he has numerous highly cited publications with one or two authors, so he's much more than a member of a productive team. Keep: verging on Speedy Keep SK3. Another example of an inappropriate nomination of an academic. He clearly flies through WP:NPROF. Maybe we need a bot to flag this type of nom, or change the twinkle so it asks if NPROF has been checked when the person is an academic. There seems to be something like one invalid nom of this type per week now, perhaps more. N.B., the page has some peacock which should be cleaned up after the (my prediction) SNOW keep. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

10:02 Department of Physics (University of Texas at Austin).

Nominated: Page on a physics department which does not include any evidence of WP:SIGCOV of the department itself, or a pass of WP:NSCHOOL. The only ref with some content is #3, but that is largely a republic of details in a book the department published about itself. Via WP:NOT INHERITED the obvious notability of some of its current and prior faculty does not make the department itself notable. I also do not see any obvious SIGCOV in Google, just other refs to their self-published history. While I do wonder whether we need an RFC to reconsider NSCHOOL, unless there is a change this belongs as a redirect. Keep: Please see :Category:Physics departments in the United States. Either all universities are allowed to have this on Wikipedia, or none should. No need to question on how a university department came into being. Keep: Per Maille. Redirect: First of all, the "either every department or none" argument carries no water. WP:NOTDIRECTORY. We can have an article about a particular physics department if enough has been written about that department as an entity in reliable, independent sources and if it makes better organizational sense to cover that department in a separate page rather than as part of a larger whole, like the university to which it belongs. UT Austin has a decent shot at that, as far as schools go, but I just don't see the case. Second, a department can't inherit wiki-notability from having famous members. We already have :Category:University of Texas at Austin faculty. Keep: There should be coverage available for a long established department, more than 100 years.

There seems to be sufficient coverage in the article already. Keep: high-ranking faculty, 100 years old, and large size. “Everything is bigger in Texas,” they say. No opinion on any of the others. Verdict: Undecided.

09:25 Rotary Club of Manila. Nominated: DELETE. I couldn't find any external, verifiable sources to pass the WP:GNG. Let's discuss. Merge: to Rotary International. Over the past 19 years, there has been a movement to merge or redirect all of the chapters into one article. It certainly merits a section of two or three paragraphs, but more than that would be undue weight. FWIW, I've been to Manila twice with my partner of 18 years, to meet the family. Verdict: to Rotary International. (non-admin closure) In solidarity, (?) Merged into another page.

09:21 BoAt. Nominated: Article does not meet WP:NCORP. Sourcing is dominated by press releases, launch announcements, IPO-cycle churnalism and sponsored business-blog coverage, none of which satisfies WP:ORIGIND (independent) or WP:CORPDEPTH (significant). Company-issued filings and DRHP-derived material are primary sources per WP:PRIMARY. Remaining content is product listings contrary to WP:NOTCATALOG and written in a promotional register per WP:PROMO. Delete: The sourcing is either primary or routine business coverage, and i'm not seeing independent material that would satisfy WP:NCORP. I don't think notability is established here. Delete: with regret. This would have been a notable company had it been in some other country, but WP:RSNOI-related issues make it impossible to find any coverage satisfying WP:SIRS at least for the present. Keep: I think there is enough independent coverage here to meet WP:GNG some of the sources in the article are definitely not useful for establishing notability, especially company material and routine product coverage. But there is also coverage from independent publications that discusses boAt itself, rather than just mentioning it. Delete: (and SALT this title given attempts at recreation). The sources provided by the sole “keep” !voter are WP:CORPTRIV or non-reliable/promotional content. Delete: It would be a benefit to Wikipedia if this deleted. Classic startup failing WP:NCORP, WP:SIRS. Verdict: and WP:SALT. Merged into another page.

08:56 Rotary Club of SoHo Hong Kong. Nominated: DELETE. I couldn't find any external and independent sources to verify the general notability. Fails WP:GNG Delete: Fails WP:ORG has no SIGCOV or notability. Verdict: Merged into another page.

09:08 Heavy Airlift Wing. Nominated: Propose merging into Strategic Airlift Capability: essentially duplicate articles on the exact same topic, with a large overlap in content. The HAW is the only component of SAC and is SAC's entire purpose. No need whatsoever for two different pages. In solidarity Merge: per nom, the topics are not exactly the same, but very closely related to each other. Articles are not that large and overlap. Verdict: to Strategic Airlift Capability due to significant overlap between the two topics. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

08:30 Coffee badging. Nominated: I have concerns that this topic, while potentially notable, is written in a way that merits WP:TNT. I checked the first five footnotes, and setting aside one which is dead and I can't open the archived page, none seems to mention this topic. The article may be an AI hallucination, or at the very least, much of the content here seems to fail WP:V. It doesn't help that there are parts, like the entire section on "Limitations", which are unreferenced. And also - Limitations is a section found in academic articles, but not usually Wikipedia ones; again implying major style problems. I will note that the fr wiki article is independent, and while shorter, does not seem to have such problems (i.e. the refs there seem to be on topic). PS. To illustrate the problem, consider the opening of the first section, which claims that "Coffee badging can be understood as a manifestation of status quo bias", citing a reliable academic source. However, that source does not mention terms like "Coffee badging" or "status quo bias" at all. If I am correct, we may need to investigate more edits by the creator. | Keep: This is a notable topic in human resource management. The current article has evolved beyond my original submission. The current article should be rewritten. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

20:34 Siraj Mohammed. Nominated: Non-notable Kenyan footballer, all coverage is routine match/transfer coverage, not WP:SIGCOV. Found nothing qualifying in BEFORE search. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: Fails in WP:GNG. Delete: non-notable footballer. GNG is not satisfied. 679 Verdict: Merged into another page.

22:11 Ridgeway (district). Nominated: The move to propose the new unitary authority has been paused and is likely to be dropped. So these articles are now pretty much no longer happening. Keep: for now, I have doubts that the cancellation will be permanent as most of the councils have supported such proposals so I wouldn't at all be surprised if this happens and there is another U turn. If there isn't a U turn in a few months I'd then merge them with Upcoming structural changes to local government in England but otherwise similar to WP:RAPID I don't think it is a good idea to merge now. Also note that apart from Essex, Hampshire, Norfolk and Suffolk the proposals are only halted not cancelled. Move to draft: at a minimum and do the same for all cancelled/paused district and council articles. We jumped the gun here and should have waited for the statutory instruments before creating these articles. Draftify: LGR in these areas hasn't been completely abandoned so they may happen at a later date or in a different way. These articles should not have been created until Parliament had formally approved them but now they have it's better to keep them in draft space than to have start to from scratch if the LGR process resumes. (Draftify: these were (mostly) created as drafts and I think I'd have preferred to keep them there until the SIs were made, but I think the moves were defensible (and also it would have been a serious effort to keep them in draftspace). The situation has now changed. Obviously information about these will continue to exist at Upcoming structural changes to local government in England and indeed the articles about the extant districts. Keep: per Crouch, Swale. [[User:Vitorperrut555|VitorFriboquen

:]]] Keep: add a standard paragraph about last week's announcement that the reorganisation is undergoing a review. These entities were previously announced as definitely going to be created, with elections in May 2027, so this was not crystal ball gazing. Readers deserve a record of the planned new UAs and the pause in implementation. Keep: as per comments of Crouch Swale and PamD.

Wait: if these are fully cancelled then a merger may be appropriate but at the moment they're only delayed, not cancelled. (, contributions) Keep: due to GNG, even if the plan does not go ahead it would arguably be a valid article based on press coverage. Too early to say that it is cancelled, the announcement is that it is delayed and under review. So frankly a waste of everyone's time to try to delete the page before a decision is finalised either way. Verdict: -- at least for now. Merged into another page.

20:06 Nir Zohar. Nominated: Israeli businessman (BLP). The sources cited are routine bios, coverage of his company, etc.: I cannot see anything that amounts to sustained coverage focusing on the subject, of the kind that would be needed to satisfy WP:BA-SIC. Weak Keep and Improve: He is notable but this article doesn't do a good job of reflecting it. There must be many more sources especially in Hebrew. Merge: into Wix.com as a FORK. This is basically the story of Wix and belongs at the destination. The reader is disserved by such fragmentation. Redirect: to Wix.com. Information about the party membership and military service of its president do not belong in the company's article. Redirect: is probably a good alternative but sources are atrocious and don't support a merge. Stuff must be referenced to secondary as its BLP material and its not this. Fails WP:SIGCOV, WP:BIO. Verdict: to Wix.com without prejudice against selective merge. Merged into another page.

18:34 Al Menne. Nominated: WP:BLP with no secondary. No indication of significance. Refs are routine announcements and interviews. Fails WP:SIGCOV. Keep: Freak Accident was reviewed at length by Paste and again by Post-Trash, and Them ran a substantial feature on Menne in April 2025 about his first year after coming out and the touring around it. Those are secondary sources written about him, not the announcement items the nomination describes. The article itself is weak, but that is a matter of someone spending 20 minutes on it. Verdict: Undecided.

2026-09-08

06:44 Taurian World School. Nominated: Declined prod. The one source does not establish notability. Fails NSCHOOL. Delete: Additional searches yielded a number of sources having detailed coverage, but they won't count towards GNG since none of them are independent. Besides these, there are some trivial mentions and directories....but nothing with SIGCOV to warrant stand-alone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: as it has no SIGCOV and notability for a standalone article. Delete: per Dz5t 8O12. 679 Verdict: Merged into another page.

TUESDAY 15 SEPTEMBER

07:49 Umm Farwa bint Abu Quhafa. Nominated: No independent reliable sources establish notability under WP. The subject appears in classical Islamic biographical dictionaries, but these are primary sources and do not provide the substantial independent coverage required. Without modern scholarly sources discussing the individual specifically Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

07:32 Ken Smith (North Carolina politician). Nominated: Politician holding a local political office, with coverage from local news outlets in the context of his election. Nothing seems to indicate that he passes WP:NPOL. If more relevant source are found, please ping me. Delete: I agree with nom about the lack of sourcing. A redirect to Atkinson, North Carolina does not help readers as while the subject was the mayor, there is no current list of mayors on the proposed redirect page. So, a reader who might be searching for the subject will not find anything there. Certainly if the city page were expanded, I would change my position. Move to Draft: This seems like an article that is not complete, and should have been caught by AFC. As mentioned by Enos733, useful information could be added to the Atkinson, NC article. Deleting it entirely seems like overkill. Delete: WP:NOTADVERT Delete: This individual does not meet any of our guidelines for notability. Thus, the existence of their article on this wonderful website should be ended. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-07

15:51 Harley Swedler. Nominated: Clear COI biography. I could find two sources that even approach SIGOV/reliability. One is this NYT article from 1991, which is four paragraphs about a mezuzah that he made. Considering the fact that it includes the cost of the mezuzah and a phone number, I'm not sure the article is independent. The other source I could find is this article from Interior Design magazine. I can't find any discussions about the reliability of this magazine, but it seems to be partly promotional in purpose. Even if both sources work, there's very little encyclopedic content they can cite. Keep: passes artist notability for the reason mentioned above; also indexed in the Getty ULAN . Delete: poorly sourced; two citations are not enough for a BLP. Ping me if you add more. I would be happy to change my mind. Delete: I removed all the unsourced claims for this article. I added a reference to the Jewish museum, which states his year of birth and country. I am not finding any additional reliable sourcing. The Judisches Museum Berlin citation <https://www.jmberlin.de/en/snip-it-stances-ritual-circumcision-0> is a press release for a show Swedler curated, a passing mention at the very bottom. I agree with the nominator that the Interior Design piece seem to be promotional. NYT piece is decorating tips. WP:TOOSOON. Delete: did a deep search nothing found to pass WP:BLP. Verdict: Merged into another page.

09:28 Codesmith. Nominated: No significant coverage; only routine business announcements. (Pigsonthewing); ; Delete: for nom. U.S.-based businesses receive a lot of such routine coverage because they have better resources. Fails WP:SIGCOV. Keep: Meets WP:GNG - The subject has received independent coverage from multiple reliable sources, including the Los Angeles Times, Los Angeles Business Journal, Fortune, and ZDNET. Keep: The articles listed below demonstrate Codesmith receiving consistent coverage from a variety of independent major publications across 10 years. Delete: fails WP:NCORP. As Bearian says “Forbes is a crust of a shell of a carcass of a formerly reliable source”. Other sources are not better, just WP:CORPTRIV and WP:TRADES. Keep: While the wiki page has room for improvement, the most established news sources do support maintaining Codesmith’s page. Keep: Meets WP:NCORP. Coverage from reliable sources are present at Poets&Quants, Reuters, LA Times, Fortune, Best Colleges, Gigazine. — Preceding unsigned comment added by Delete: I’ve reviewed all the links above and in my opinion there’s nothing revealed which improves on the bare mentions, press releases, fundraising and interviews already applied to the page. What is remarkable about this topic is the range of new temporary accounts who’ve out of the blue chosen to descend on this particular process as if we cared what they were paid to say. This seems like some sort of apparent coordinated editing; only the nominator, Holt Neeson and myself have written on any other topic. Eight temporary accounts and three new named accounts were created specifically for this AFD. Keep: I think it meets WP:NCORP. Codesmith has been covered in independent coverage and was listed in Forbes’ Best Online Bootcamps, in addition to its collaboration with USDT. Delete: All references above fall short of NCORP standards. Gigazine is probably the only defensible source, the outlet reported on a social media controversy about the company. Fortune fails ORGIN. Others lack significant coverage. Delete: per nom and per Kelob2678. I’m reminded of this - “ Plus ça change. Verdict: Discounting the canvassed, drive-by voters citing routine or promotional sources, I see consensus to delete. Merged into another page.

03:07 Jehovina. Nominated: A Google search provides no more reliable sources. This is not notable. In solidarity, Keep: per WP:-GEOLAND appears to be a census settlement. delete: This is a census district of some sort with no apparent settlement in it.

It's not an actual village. Simply being listed in the census is not enough for a separate article. Keep: per Joy, who provided enough evidence to show that this is not a census artifact, but an actual settlement. Delete: Merely existing or appearing in the census does not meet the legal recognition requirement of WP:GEO-LAND. Verdict: Merged into another page.

22:12 Peter Zandan. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:BIO. The sourcing is speaker bios, Bloomberg company cards, Inc. 5000 listings and local promotional sites. • Weak Delete: We do not decide articles on whether or not they are finished yet, so whether or not someone is is not really relevant here. What we are concerned with is whether PZ satisfies notability, and I'm seeing very little to support that. Barring that the article as it stands is written in a very promotional matter (MOS:PUFFERY, WP:PROMO, etc.), there is hardly any material on Quantified AI , which itself seems to not be so different from the many hundreds of AI companies that are propping up nowadays. The article itself right now relies heavily on primary sources and webpages (e.g., citing an SEC filing and a myriad of minor talk lectures), which are less convincing. The strongest source I've found is his position at NASEM, but its unclear whether being only a 'special advisor' rather than a member can itself satisfy notability. -Wiki Delete: I found this through the academic deletion sorting list but he has not worked as an academic and does not have the kind of citation record that could pass WP:PROF. We will have to go with WP:GNG instead. Of the references currently in the article: [1] Texas Software News: url does not promise reliability, irrecoverable deadlink. [2] Inc. 5k, listicle of companies, no in-depth coverage of Zandan, irrecoverable deadlink. [3] Wharton interview, not independent. [4] Global PR Summit speaker bio, not independent. [5] Bloomberg company database lookup, neither about Zandan nor in-depth. [6] Repeat of [2] with one less digit. [7] Repeat of [5]. [8] Austin American-Statesman about company, not about Zandan, no link. [9] WSJ listicle of companies with no link. [10] Another speaker profile. [12] Like [1] an irrecoverable Iris Company deadlink. [13] Government company database, not about Zandan. [14] National Academies press release about hiring Zandan, not independent. [15] Some local nature walk thing, no mention of Zandow, almost looks like an AI hallucination. [16] Art press release that heavily quotes Zandow, neither reliable nor independent. [17] Neither the Santa Fe magazine landing page nor the reference metadata provide any information linking to Zandow, looks like another AI hallucination. [18] ATC member blog, likely unreliable, one paragraph about Zandan. [19] Repeat of [17], but a deadlink this time. None of these contribute to WP:GNG notability. Delete: per nom — speaker bios, Bloomberg company cards and Inc. list entries, and what independent coverage there is belongs to the companies rather than to him (WP:BASIC). Verdict: Merged into another page.

03:40 American Angora Goat Breeders' Association. Nominated: No indication of notability. Searching shows no significant coverage and few passing mentions. (ping me in your reply, or I won't see it) Keep: or 2nd choice Merge to Angora goat. It's newspaper clippings, so it's on the weaker side of WP:SIGCOV, but I found a fairly good amount of coverage in various newspapers: (1900, 1901 on the establishment of the org) (1922, 1924 mergers with other orgs) (1906, 1938, 1943, 1965 various descriptions of the org & its progress over the years) (1931 lawsuit vs. the org). If it's determined the coverage isn't of sufficient depth, I think it would be helpful to add a little information to Angora goat - for example, the Pygora goat article states it but there's no context for what the AAGBA Angora goat is without at least giving somewhere that it's the sole US registry for this goat breed. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

13:06 Dallin Malmgren. Nominated: Fails WP:NAUTHOR. No independent WP:SIGCOV in WP:IRS found. The one source presented, Goodreads, is not reliable for Wikipedia purposes. PROD tag removed by article's author. Delete: poorly sourced; one citation is not enough for a BLP. Anybody can write a play, but it's about getting them produced that matters. Ping me if you add more. Delete: per WP:TNT if nothing else. Can't exist in this state, please do not relist. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:13 Theodore Melnechuck. Nominated: American writer (d. 2017). The sources are obituaries, one written by the subject himself (!) and one published by his college and presumably submitted by his family. There is no sign of sustained coverage in sources independent of the subject, as required for WP:BASIC. I don't see anything that would meet WP:ACADEMIC or WP:AUTHOR either. Draftify: I found 3 reviews, . Two are reviews of books he edited so not great, but enough to think the page might be improved. I agree about going through AfC. Draftify: as per above discussion. Draftify: This is a clear case of returning to draftspace being a good idea. It is not only on notability and sourcing grounds that I believe this, but also the structure of the page itself. Significant work is needed in all cases. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

16:50 Tizeti. Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP. Refs are routine business news. Delete: no significant coverage. Delete: per nom. Verdict: Merged into another page.

18:35 Amanvari. Nominated: Procedural nomination to enact the consensus of WP:Deletion review/Log/2026 August 31; I am neutral. Delete: as WP:TOOSOON. Remove the Ryan Walker episode and basically three sentences survive. Weak Keep: I would've agreed with the first voter but a quick search gave me this and this. Does pass GNG, although that controversy section may need to be cleaned up. Disclaimer: I was the one who'd speedied it, so feel free to disregard this vote. Keep: Meets WP:GNG, as in the sources identified by Sir Tragedy. The way the controversy is covered can be addressed through normal editing. Cheers, Verdict: - Passes WP:GNG, WP:Deletion is not cleanup. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

19:45 Pista House. Nominated: An article about a restaurant / bakery firm. Previous instances have been deleted at AFD in 2018 and 2024 () plus a G4 repost in 2025. This new instance is referenced to a Q&A with the company founder, coverage of an attack on a shop, and of a hygiene check, which are insufficient for WP:CORPDEPTH, nor does the coverage of price and ingredient changes strike me as the level of coverage needed to demonstrate notability. Delete: per nom, nothing has changed since the 2024 discussion. — Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Delete: Fails WP:CORPDEPTH. Sources are owner interview, menu announcements and hygiene news. Nothing that changes previous afd outcomes. Delete: and SALT. Three straight delete discussions in a row? Any future creation needs to go through AfC. Verdict: The need for WP:SALT is also recognized. Merged into another page.

20:27 Dizzy dithering. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG. Sourced to the creator and an unreliable blog. No hits in Scholar. ~ Delete: Everything here traces to the person who invented the technique — two Medium posts by Liam Appelbe — plus one personal blog. WP:SPS doesn't carry an article, and a method described only by its author is a primary source no matter how good the method is. Nothing in Scholar. Draftify: per request. The article has never been moved to draft, so the creator did not try to revert draftification as usually happens. He also acknowledged a lack of sources. I do not really believe that the coverage will appear, but also see no reason not to wait. Verdict: I recommend going through WP:AfC to avoid a rerun of this. Merged into another page.

20:41 KBAL-FM. Nominated: Christian radio station in Texas. The actual owner was Hispanic Family Christian Network. No standalone notability to meet the WP:GNG. Previously nominated in a 54-article procedural trainwreck in 2025. (she/her · ·) Delete: a remnant of the very loose inclusion standards in this topic area prior to 2021, based entirely on existence (even though it neither is nor proves notability) and not SIGCOV. A ten-year station started in 2012—especially a religious station in a less-populated area—tends not to get the SIGCOV we need. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:39 Stripo. Nominated: Created by disclosed paid editor, and it shows in that the article reads like a promotional brochure. Fails

WP:GNG and WP:NCORP. Lacks WP:SIGCOV outside of promo sites. | Delete: This is a weaker paper, but also discusses Stripo. This is about the product, while the article is clearly written to be about the business. Refocusing would require an almost complete rewrite, together with COI concerns, this is a good enough reason to delete. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:52 Mishael Zion. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NAUTHOR. • Keep: As the author of this article I believe that Zion meets both WP:GNG and WP:NAUTHOR. He has published several books: Halayla Hazeh: The Israeli Haggadah (2004), A Night to Remember: The Haggadah of Contemporary Voices (2007), together with his father, and Eighteen Talmudic Stories Every Jew Should Know (2018), Esther: A New Israeli Commentary(2019) on his own, and edited the book I Promise You (2024). He has held/holds leadership roles in the Jewish community. In addition he is a popular lecturer and interview personality on television, radio and other media. Weak keep: based on what's available and to avoid feeding our critics. The Issue for me is that there are so many poor references that take away from the whole. Less is more. I'm tempted to just remove them. Keep: as notability has been established under the GNG. Keep: meets WP:GNG. Verdict: - passes GNG. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

21:59 Emil Barr. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:BIO. • Keep: I think Barr barely meets WP:SIGCOV through Defector, Benzinga, and The Liberty Times. I couldn't evaluate coverage at La Repubblica due to a paywall. Keep: I believe the article meets the WP:GNG, as it contains sufficient independent media sources providing significant coverage of the subject. I am also providing four additional sources: [<https://www.foxnews.com/media/young-tycoon-drops-truth-bomb-arguing-work-life-balance-keep-gen-z-mediocre>, [<https://miamioh.edu/news/2024/07/four-miami-alumni-named-to-forbes-30-under-30-cincinnati-list.html>]. Delete: per nom. I think Kqol makes a persuasive case against his notability. The coverage is limited to two incidents, his piece in the WSJ about work-life balance, which was widely covered, but this is 1E from August 2025. And his essay in Business

Insider, which was also covered by The Liberty Times. The second part of the coverage can be discarded as non-independent and not reliable (WP:BI is not a WP:GREL source). Keep: I disagree with Kquol here - the WSJ op-ed was widely covered, and he's since had at least one more wave with the Business Insider piece (which is No Consensus, not Marginal or Unreliable) discussed by Liberty Times, a major paper. Keep: Per Jishara, in addition to this article, published recently by the Entrepreneur staff report. Delete: per WP:NOTPROMO and due to (up to at least 1333910945) being LLM-generated. The more I look into this the more it is obvious this is promotional nonsense entirely unsuitable for this encyclopedia, and it is unfortunate that I did not realise this much, much earlier. None of the sources that allegedly contribute to notability are the least bit independent. Interviews are not independent secondary sources. Op-eds are not independent secondary sources. News articles that breathlessly repeat (or summarise) what the subject has said in those interviews and op-eds, without one iota of evaluation or analysis, are not independent sources, and they are not secondary sources. Wikipedia is not an mouthpiece for the uncritical regurgitation of op-eds and interviews of anyone who has managed to insert themselves in the business churnalism machine, and it is a shame that it took us several months to get to this point. (•) Keep: the article once again, I think it's almost in contact with WP:N. Delete: Reads like a resume, with confirmation of employment only... None of the sources are RS, the few that are were written by the subject. I find nothing extra in Gnews that would help. Very PROMO feel to this. Keep: I edited the article and removed a number of promotional statements and opinions, while also adding several new sources. In my opinion, the article is now closer to an encyclopedic style. Moreover, I would support keeping the article as a stub. (P.S. I am the editor who commented earlier in the discussion using an IP address. I decided to create an account in order to become part of the Wikipedia community.) Delete: He fails WP:GNG. His coverage essentially stems from one WSJ op-ed and the reaction to it. The rest of his citations are his own op-eds, an as-told-to Business Insider essay, interviews and quotes, and routine seed-funding announcements for a startup, with self-reported net-worth claims doing much of the work. ~~Delete~~: per nom. It is a paid-for-spam. His claim to notability is that he is the founder of Flashpass, a company that has raised “$4.1 million” right? or you can claim that he is notable because he founded a marketing agency called Step Up Social? His both companies are focused on “marketing”, so he knows this stuff and how to get some coverage in the media, but that doesn’t mean he has become notable, and has done some great analysis why this spam doesn’t belong on Wikipedia. ~~Delete~~: I’m not convinced that the coverage is truly independent (i.e. with independent analysis), much of it reads like churnalism. ~~Keep~~: narrowly crosses notability borderline with a few sources to meet WP:NBASIC. Some sources date back to 2022, and one would expect to see sustained coverage between that time and present, only a few WP:RS are found but those are enough to prove notability beyond WP:1E and WP:TOOSOON. ~~Delete~~: as nominated, article lacking credible sourcing to meet WP:GNG and WP:BIO. All I see are visible marketing and self-branding efforts from churnalism news articles masked as WP:RS and WP:SIGCOV just to put up this spam article here. ~~Verdict~~: Although evenly divided numerically, the keep arguments are substantially weaker, in general the objections to the sources provided. Merged into another page.

03:59 Viktor Knavs. Nominated: WP:INVALIDBIO he doesn’t really have any coverage outside of just being Melania Trump’s father ~~Delete~~: completely unsourced, which is totally against our BLP rules. Ping me if you add more. ~~Redirect to Melania_Trump#Early_life_and_education~~: as a reasonable AtD. The previous redirect that existed until a week ago should be restored; he is discussed in greater detail and better sourcing in the article on his daughter than in this article. It seems possible an article can be created in the future, but per WP:BLP the current unsourced stub is inappropriate and the redirect should be replaced by community consensus. ~~Redirect~~: to Melania Trump#Early life and education as an WP:ATD. The redirect has existed since 2018 until September 2026. Verdict: to Melania Trump#Early life and education. As and others noted, it would have been sufficient to revert such an edit instead of starting an AfD and wasting a week over an open-and-shut case. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

03:55 Crazy Life (Lil Rob album). Nominated: Non-notable album. Only sources are databases. Redirect: to Lil Rob discography#Studio albums as WP:ATD. 03:54 2026 Philippine floods. Nominated: I propose merging to 2026 Pacific typhoon season because the page isn't sourced, and has lots of empty sections. [] Support: little independent content here, and much of it is unsourced/out of date. () Support: per WP:SHORTTEXT. Draftify: for now, as admittedly this was published a bit earlier than it should. While I agree that this should be merged to the 2026 Pacific typhoon season article for now, I still sincerely think there must be a separate article for the 2026 flooding in the future. (Question though: should there be a title change though, as this primarily affected just the Luzon island group?) That being said, I think this could be expanded into something similar to the :2020 Central Vietnam floods article which also involved several tropical cyclones. Just like in that article, impacts should also be detailed per area, region or province. Verdict: Rough consensus indicated that this article should be moved away from the mainspace into draftspace. 03:53 Maggie Pesky. Nominated: Non-notable specific character with very little content that doesn't really warrant a split from main show article. Also uses a non-free file (see the corresponding deletion discussion on Commons) Redirect to The Buzz on Maggie: Per nom. In my opinion, this could have been WP:BLAR'd, as it's obvious this character is not notable. In solidarity, (?) Redirect: Not even the usual plotcraft. Main character of a show that

03:16 Catseye (character). Nominated: I propose redirecting to Hellions (Marvel Comics) because the references of the page talk about the group as a whole. Redirect: Fails GNG. In solidarity, (?) Keep: or merge with List of Marvel Comics characters: C in the spirit of WP:ATD-M. Redirect: to Hellions (Marvel Comics) - Minor comic character without significant coverage in reliable sources. 03:14 Black Crow (character). Nominated: I propose merging to List of Marvel Comics characters: B#Black Crow or List of Native American superheroes due to lack of substantial references. Merge to List of Marvel Comics characters: B#Black Crow: Lacks WP:ROUTINE coverage or any real-world material to prove notability, in accordance with WP:NFCHAR, and primarily contains in-universe information against MOS:WAF. The linked entry in the list of Native American superheroes should remain. The article has also needed cleanup since 2018 and has seen no substantial improvements. — Redirect: Per nom; same rationale as my comment at Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Catseye (character). 22:00 Khai Bahar. Nominated: Malaysian singer (BLP). This BLP is mostly unsourced, and the sources given are trivial coverage and/or 404 errors, rather than the kind of sustained attention in reliable sources needed to satisfy WP:BASIC. 08:15 Buffalo–UMass rivalry. Nominated: This article fails WP:GNG. I don't see any reliable sources treating the rivalry between these two American football teams as a topic in and of itself. It seems to be simply a page detailing the history of results between the two teams, without discussing the rivalry itself. (for avoidance of doubt, this is a delete !vote). Delete:: Fails the GNG, WP:NRIVALRY, WP:CRYSTAL, WP:ROUTINE and WP:OR. No, we don't get to declare a "rivalry" just because a couple of bored sportswriters on deadline are trying to gin up support for the worst team in American college football. Nor do we get to declare, as the article does, a "burgeoning" rivalry based on a couple of recent games. The bar set for sports "rivalries" is quite high, requiring several high-quality, reliable, independent sources and a long, continuous history; declaring that a "rivalry" exists because two teams have played three games against one another in the last eleven years is absurd. A "growing sports rivalry," in the article creator's words, fails WP:CRYSTAL; we have articles on existing and well-documented rivalries. The article creator's indefensible attempt to put lipstick on the pig by dragging in the bare handful of games played between the schools in other sports just adds to the mess. Never mind that has seen fit to call out and on his user page as "Wikipedians Mods That Need Re-Training" and calling them power trippers, as well as a number of other incivilities and personal attacks on his user talk page. This is of course tangential to this AfD, but Yeahimaboss413 had better scrub them at once if he doesn't want ANI to get involved. Keep: content, open to renaming to UMass–Buffalo football rivalry. There are enough sources presented here to justify an article. Delete: This "rivalry" shows no signs of notability or significance. (|) Delete: I'm with Ravenswing on this. A couple of beat reporters want to drum up interest in an otherwise inconsequential series of match-ups by declaring it a rivalry. It's not. I don't buy the sources listed by Namiba as constituting general coverage on the overall notability of this rivalry, either. Delete: An NCB Sports headline using the word "rivalry" and a local newspaper saying "hey this might become a rivalry" is not sufficient for an article. They're hyping up some newly scheduled MAAction, not discussing a deep rivalry that warrants a Wikipedia article. –  \lor

Delete: Just because the two schools “declare” a rivalry doesn’t mean it passes WP:GNG and WP:NRIVALRY. It seems like the Civil Conflict, but with none of the coverage it had as most of the sources used are primary sources from the schools themselves or from fan blogs. Delete: A “growing sports rivalry” with few matches played... A real rivalry has a rich history. Using the word on all kinds of opponents makes the reporting unreliable. 18:05 Sheffield Declaration. Nominated: This article has only one citation. Fails W:GNG Perhaps this article should be deleted. Keep: on the basis of being notable and real, and clearly historic. There’s a number of sources that seem suitable for when and if someone should build out the article from a Stub level state of existence. I’ve just sourced over 250 articles in the past 35 days, and I’m pooped. Merge: to Thomas Sedgwick Theodore Sedgwick per WP:PAGEDECIDE. Looking at Google Scholar results, most of the coverage of this is in relation to Thomas Sedgwick Theodore Sedgwick (including the only source currently used for the article), often connecting it to his representation of Elizabeth Freeman in a freedom suit. Thomas Sedgwick’s Theodore Sedgwick’s article currently contains no information about this, and I think it can very reasonably be covered there considering the context in which sources discuss the declaration, and considering the sources do not seem to contain enough detail to allow the stand-alone article is unlikely to be much more than it currently is. –&thin-sp; \lor Keep: or Draftify. This book is a good place to start, along with some local coverage . Verdict: The nomination was lazy, but so are some of the Keep !votes. field Declaration against Apartheid in South Africa, not the 1773 Massachusetts petition. I see no support for 's proposed merge to :Theodore Sedgwick,... Merged into another page.

00:12 Ken Silverstein (business journalist). Nominated: Fails
WP:NBO. The one piece of substantial coverage is this “local boy makes good”-style story, a West Virginia paper focused on this West Virginian. Other than that, checking the first 100 Google, Google News, and Google Books results find no other significant third-party coverage -- listings for articles he wrote, biographies on the websites of publications he has written for, and brief citations of him. (Complicating matters is there is coverage of an investigative journalist of the same name; until recently, the article cited a Columbia Journalism Review article about that other journalist, for example.) The awards mentioned as being won are for specialized fields, not the level of award we generally see as connoting notability. His being named as a “a top economic and financial journalist” was on a list of over 150 names which was expected to grow as further research was done, and was on the no-longer-extant website wallstreeteconomists.org, which is a source of questionable import. Sources used in article are largely self-published by subject (often as a WP:FORBESCON piece), non-independent sources, or subject being quoted or interviewed about a topic that he covers, rather than about himself. Weak delete: Can't find any sources about this journalist (versus the investigative journalist) except as described by nom. The one linked article is substantial and does seem to support notability, but can't find a second source. Otherwise, per nom. Solidarity forever Delete: I stopped reading after I saw he contributed to Forbes. That makes him a public relations consultant, not a journalist. As I note, “Forbes is a crust of a shell of a carcass of a formerly reliable source.” Keep: The discussion has turned to Silverstein's Forbes senior contributor status, but that does not address the broader record or the strongest independent source available. Verdict: I have discarded the LLM-generated “keep” !vote(s) per WP:AI-

TALK, and it does not appear that the brand-new editor below who claims to be preparing a profile of Silverstein has convinced others that the community should consider the forthcoming proposal. Discarding the LLM-generated !vote results in... Merged into another page.

17:52 Antonia Medlicott. Nominated: British journalist (BLP). This article was recently soft deleted, and then undeleted by the request of the page creator, who then put the draft through AfC, where it was accepted. However, as in the previous nomination, the sources are mostly passing mentions or work by the subject: it is not clear that there is sustained coverage of her in sources independent of her, as required for WP:BASIC. 23:25 Adaptive representation. Nominated: The subject of this page does not appear notable at all. Browsing through the first dozen pages of results on this Google Scholar query, I can only find one single potential reference to it in the academic literature outside the PhD thesis where it is introduced, in this paper (I'm not even completely sure because I can't read Chinese). Redirect: to Francis Heylighen as an WP:ATD. He is the originator of the theory. The paper above just talks about adaptive representation in general, not specifically about the that this article is about. When I searched in Google Scholar, I mostly found papers by him that are not well-cited (less than 100). I also highly doubt that all Chinese language hits are about him. Verdict: to Francis Heylighen. Merged into another page.

04:01 2026 East St. Louis shootings. Nominated: I propose redirecting to List of mass shootings in the United States in 2026 because there has not been much coverage of the event since the immediate aftermath. The best I can find is and [https://www.riv-erbender.com/news/details/budzinski-joins-local-leaders-in-east-st-louis-for-roundtable-on-gun-violence-prevention-96161.cfm Coverage therefore appears inadequate for an article and the event fails WP:EVENTCRIT due to no apparent lasting effect, limited geographic impact, exceedingly short national coverage, and what little coverage there has been since has been hyper local. Redirect: Per nom and AadamantAardvark. We can't have an article on every minor act of violence. As a side note for clarity, the shooting occurred in a suburb of St. Louis, Missouri (called East St. Louis, Illinois), not on the eastern side of the city of St. Louis. In solidarity, (?) Verdict: to List of mass shootings in the United States in 2026. Feel free to merge as appropriate (subject to editorial consensus). Merged into another page.

14:18 Sahar Hashmi. Nominated: This person's biography does not have valid sources which would establish notability. I did not see anything on Google either. · Keep: per previous AfD, meets WP:NACTRESS, had major roles in two notable series. Keep: Nom is correct that the article lacks appropriate sourcing, and there is no fault with the renom as it has been over a year and the prior close was no consensus. The NACTOR guideline says a person may be notable if they have significant roles in multiple notable projects, which this person has, though that is not a presumption of notability. Nom should have conducted a more thorough WP:BEFORE search, as notability does not rest upon what sources are in the article, but on what sources exist. Verdict: Merged into another page.

02:48 Simon Willison. Nominated: The article does not clearly demonstrate that the subject satisfies the general notability guideline or the applicable biographical notability guideline. Most of the references currently cited establish particular employment positions, projects, organizational roles, or announcements, rather than providing significant independent secondary coverage of Simon Willison as a subject in his own right. Several sources are also primary or affiliated with the subject or the organizations discussed. Keep: per WP:NCREATIVE#2, , as he is one of the cocreators of the Django (web framework). Week Keep: It's difficult to search for sources because Willison is mentioned so much in so many outlets over such a long period of time (which itself is a signal of some kind...). I'm not seeing the kinds of slam-dunk coverage to trivially meet GNG (e.g. profiles in high-profile non-tech publications), but I see sufficient discussion of Willison and his work to justify keeping this page. He is used regularly as a source, sometimes as a passing mention and sometimes with a few sentences about his work. Business Insider , which doesn't count toward notability.) I'm going to stop my search there, but I suspect others may be able to identify more substantial coverage, including from way back in the Django days (he has a lot of mentions in old print materials on the Internet Archive that I didn't look at carefully). Cheers, Redirect to Django (web framework): I reviewed all of Suriname0's sources, and I agree with the TA's source assessment tables. These are churnalism summarizing his podcast appearances (the BI pieces) or standard instances of being quoted in the press (the rest) that don't reach WP:GNG. With GNG not met, it seems that his notability is limited to creating Django and thus a 1E situation. A redirect in this instance is appropriate and will preserve the page history should he become notable in the future. Verdict: Merged into another page.

• Keep: Satisfies WP:GNG with significant coverage. In addition, this is a premature renomination after the previous AfD closed as Keep. The six-month waiting period for renomination has not passed. Any remaining sourcing or wording can be addressed through normal editing rather than reopening the deletion question so soon. Keep: Still too early to start this discussion per WP:6MONTHS. In addition, the subject meets WP:ANYBIO. Delete: This essay has nothing to do with the fact that the article fails to demonstrate significance. Also, the was blocked in sep 2026. // Delete: I fully agree that WP:6MONTHS is not an argument here, because this is not a policy. His sources are WP:PASSING. It is not WP:SIGCOV (which is a policy) and therefore, no justification. Keep: meets WP:GNG through significant, sustained coverage in independent secondary sources, including CDC Gaming, SBC Americas, and the Las Vegas Review-Journal, covering his leadership of Global Cash Access, co-founding and leadership of Sightline Payments, major financing events, and related litigation. The article can be cleaned up by removing weak or primary-source material, but the existence of multiple independent sources providing substantive coverage supports retaining the standalone biography. Delete: More sources are about the Global Cash company, where this person is mentioned. I don't see enough sourcing to show notability. SIXMONTHS is a guideline, but lack of notability is not something we can waiver on. Delete: Because was created by a sockpuppet and all the other reasons raised above. Delete: In the previous AfD, five sources were linked to establish notability. Originally created as a self-promotional autobiography, then recreated and heavily COI edited (based on commons evidence). Bringing it here for the community to decide. Delete: autobiographies are disfavored because they almost always have original content. 09:47 Cloth loop. Nominated: The article is based on blog sources which do not fulfil WP:RS. I believe that this article falls foul of WP:NOTADictionary, I'd be very surprised if reliable sources giving significant coverage to the concept of cloth loops existed. Delete: How in the world is a minor passing part of textiles notable? Im just not seeing it. This isnt even a dicdef. ← Keep: as Locker loop, attested in the currently cited sources as well as additional literature (e.g.), and not necessarily loops made for the specific purpose described in the current article as loops are an important part of sewing techniques among other textile-related things. signed, Keep: agreeing with keeps above. 17:13 Einar Thor. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG – No significant coverage in reliable sources. Also fails WP:ARTIST/WP:BIO as no evidence of significant coverage of works or career in independent RS. Draftify: Several articles in articles in Icelandic tagged Einar Þór Gunnlaugsson are at a website called Klapptré, but I don't know the language well enough to evaluate them. Several films directed by him are listed at the Icelandic Film Centre. I think it's possible that sufficient coverage exists in Icelandic. Draftify: or perhaps still delete. Gurkubondinn's sources above suggest this person is notable, but what we have is still a largely unsourced BLP, which shouldn't exist in mainspace. I would be okay keeping if someone redid this from scratch, but otherwise I'm inclined to draftify or delete this. Draftify: per the sources that I managed to find. I'm leaning towards Einar probably being notable, but it being a question of finding the right sources that show the SIGCOV that likely exists somewhere. You're more likely to find interviews than independent coverage for someone like him though, but he has been mentioned so often in so many publications that some of it will most likely amount to independent and significant coverage. Seems like he has been making movies since well before the Icelandic film industry really took off. ‑‑ Draftify: so that Gurkubondinn can work on the article as requested. There is evidence in this discussion that he may be notable, imv Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:28 Alhar Bikaneri. Nominated: Fails notability guidelines, despite being a poet few public information is known about this individual, and this entire article is unsourced. Keep: He definitely meets WP:GNG. He may not have been mentioned much in English media. However, he has been covered by several reliable sources in Hindi (English publications of some of these are RS). I found a few by searching in Hindi. I agree on the article being poorly sourced, happy to help in improving it. Unfortunately, Hindi poets do not get much coverage; I hope these will be sufficient to meet GNG; Keep: The article has sources: it cites Amar Ujala, Dainik Tribune and Hindwi, and external links also connect to The Hindu obituary of 2009 and Hindu article of 2012 marking the anniversary. He was written up in Dainik Tribune in 2011, Amar Ujala reported on a commemoration in 2024, and Ar1201u1 found more Hindi coverage of him listed above, including coverage of an award named after him. This qualifies for WP:GNG. Coverage of Hindi poets is mostly in Hindi, so a WP:BEFORE search will need Hindi references. The article does need some cleanup as a few claims are based on wikis such as Jatland and Kavita Kosh and the Life section needs more sources. Keep: per The Hindu obit. Verdict: signed, Merged into another page.

23:28 Intrahealth Systems Limited. Nominated: The coverage lists awards and routine announcements, which is trivial. Not seeing depth of coverage. · Delete: per nom. Looked through the sources and it is contracts and product launches all the way down, with nothing close to SIGCOV anywhere. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

23:25 Digital Island. Nominated: Unsourced company profile, ordinary company not justified for inclusion. · Delete: fails WP:NCORP. As far as i can tell from a WP:BEFORE, it doesn't appear to have been merged with Spark Ventures (despite what the article states), so not even worth redirecting to Spark NZ. Delete: It does not pass WP:NCORP. The only two references used are the company's own "About us" page and a Spark press release on the leadership change; hence, they are not independent. Furthermore, the acquisition would only be standard coverage under WP:ORG-TRIV. The name is also ambiguous: Digital Island was a United States company that provided content delivery services and was purchased in 2001 by Cable & Wireless for $340 million (CNET, Electronics Weekly). That company is far more likely to be notable, so deletion leaves the title free rather than calling for a redirect. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:24 Leyla Omer. Nominated: This appears to fail WP:GNG, even with the Central Kurdish sources. A Google Search shows more results (in Turkish) of completely unrelated people with the same name or containing the keywords “Leyla” and “Omer”. There’s not a single reliable source for Leyla Omer Ali in the search. ?/?/? Keep: The problem with the unrelated search results could be due to the name having Spelling variations, if you search the name “ ” in google (the name in Kurdish) results will indeed show up. or even when you search the exact name but add the words “mayor of Sulaymaniyah” or “Deputy Governor of Sulaymaniyah” results will indeed show. In my opinion to completely delete the article due to the fact that there are different ways to spell the name isn’t right. i could be wrong or have misunderstood the rules. Keep: The nominator has searched in Latin script, which usually shows unrelated names, while the coverage is in Kurdish. The article cites Rudaw, Kurdistan24, Awene, Xendan, and Kurdsat. The Middle East Monitor also covered her being the first female Deputy Governor of Sulaymaniyah Governorate in English. It is unclear if becoming a deputy governor meets WP:N-POL #1, but she has been the mayor of one of the biggest cities in Iraq since 2022, and her appointment as the first woman in both offices was covered by several outlets, including Rudaw and Kurdistan24, which are aligned with a rival party to her own. This meets WP:NPOL #2 and WP:GNG. The article requires improvement, but this does not justify the deletion. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

21:21 Hengaw. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran#Organizations because the page fails WP:NORG. Media mention reports from Hengaw, but provide very little information about the organization itself. The prior AfD ended in “No consensus”, however no sources with significant coverage were found. Support: per nomination. Verdict: to Human rights in the Islamic Republic of Iran#Organizations. 22:11 Mo Koyfman. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:BIO.

The sourcing is job-move announcements promoted to general partner, joins Spark, leaves Spark, launches a fund... which is routine business churn. • Keep: I don't think we should dismiss these WSJ/Observer pieces as churnalism (1, 2, 3). They go into a fair bit of detail and focus on him, not just his company, and are reliable and high-profile (even if the Observer's been degraded of late, this was in 2012). No controversies or drama if you overlook the tabloid-fodder bachelor parties, so I know the business developments could be considered “routine” - but that's more applicable to businesses trying to pass WP:CORPDEPTH, not BLPs, and I think this passes WP:GNG and WP:BIO well enough. Delete: Agree with nomination and don't like that it was created by a paid editor. Delete: The sources here are largely routine career coverage and don't quite amount to significant independent coverage under WP:GNG. Delete: The article fails to establish independent notability under WP:GNG and WP:BIO. Delete: lack of extensive coverage about him in order to meet general notability. Weak keep: based on what's available and to avoid feeding our critics. His philanthropic work in particular has gotten some coverage. Delete: I see lots of passing mentions, lots of routine coverage, lots of press releases, and lots of name drops, but nothing that meets the WP:SIGCOV threshold. Likely this is a case of it being too soon: I suspect this person will be wiki-notable in a few years. Verdict: After two relists, deletion has a solid numerical advantage, and the case for keep is further undermined by a rebuttal to its most extensive argument. signed, Merged into another page.

23:00 Beatriz Amélia Alves de Sousa Oliveira Basto da Silva.

Nominated: I find no sign that she meets any relevant notability criteria. She was a teacher; she was once a member of Macau's legislative assembly; she's a member of a museum (I'm a member of two museums, because I pay annual membership fees, but so what?). The article itself reads like a résumé and gives no sense that it's here because of her greater worthiness of note. There had been a bunch of references, but they were just links to her own writings, and I removed them. Keep: Members of the Legislative Assembly of Macau are presumed notable per WP:NSUBPOL. Keep: Macau is a Special Administrative Region, which is a province-level designation, and therefore members of the Legislative Assembly of Macau are members of subnational (province/state level) legislatures. Therefore, they, including Da Silva, are presumed notable. Speedy keep: from nominator. Yeah, as I added above, I missed that detail. Can someone please close this? Verdict: withdrawn. 00:00 Utopian scholastic. Nominated: Plainly fails notability guidelines. No don't delete it.: It's my favorite aesthetic ever. — Preceding unsigned comment added by DELETE: Merge and Redirect to Consumer Aesthetics Research Institute. Does not have multiple independent reliable sources to support an encyclopedia article. Some more references: on the relevance of the topic and its notoriety: Delete: As much as I personally love this aesthetic, Wikipedia's notability requirements are not based on a subject's appeal. Its only substantial source is CARI, which catalogues the aesthetic. It's Nice That provides only brief coverage, and all the other material I could find online is self-published, crowdsourced, user-generated, a passing mention... (same applies to its alternate name "encartacore"). The available sources verify that the label exists, but not that it warrants a standalone encyclopedia article (yet). I'm not sure that Consumer Aesthetics Research Institute is an appropriate merge target, as doing so could misleadingly imply that CARI itself coined or originally identified the term. Delete: Fails WP:GNG. Delete: As much as I like the aesthetic, the article in its current state does not demonstrate notability. I am sure this niche aesthetic will warrant an article at some point in the future once a sufficient amount of media coverage has been published about it, but not now. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Abu Tahsin al-Salhi. Nominated: This article was originally given a PROD deletion by @swatjester, with the reason given being that it was “Poorly sourced, not broadly notable, treats extremely dubious claims as factual in wikivoice.” Keep: there are three good sources, and three more reliable sources found, easily enough for general notability. Since he’s dead, BLP doesn’t apply, but BEFORE does apply. This is not an endorsement of killing people, obviously. Keep: more than enough sources have been presented. 00:00 John D. Steinmetz. Nominated: Nominated for deletion. The subject of this article is a regional banking executive (CEO of Vista Bank, later NBH Bank) and a former regent for the Texas Tech University System. While these are notable professional milestones, they do not inherently satisfy Wikipedia’s Notability guidelines for biographies or Notability criteria for businesspeople. Speedy keep, speedy close: This AI-generated “argument” for deleting John Steinmetz’s article doesn’t make any sense, and it was also posted by a newly registered SPA with absolutely no other contributions on Wikipedia. Steinmetz is clearly notable per WP:GNG and WP:NBIO, as he is the president of a notable American bank in Texas with its own Wikipedia article. Plus I crafted this article with a lot of care as an enthusiast in the world of local American banking. Delete: I don’t see any malicious use of an LLM in this case, and as Nebulousway’s clearly has a COI with this article that must be declared (and 38 edits in six years), their vote is very much a case of not liking that their edits are now under scrutiny as their most recent edits are to this and Vista Bank, and I feel like the nom is being charitable asking for a redirect to Vista because they have more of a strong delete case as the subject is a generic bank executive out of many. The only assistance I see with the nominator regarding LLM was looking up policy to solidify their rationale, and I feel like they expanded them into their own words appropriately. Also Nebulousways, do not attack a nominator who made a good faith argument; this isn't 'slop'. • Weak keep: based on what's available. delete: very PROMO, most if not all jobs this person had are not notable. Coverage is simply talking about other things and this person gets mentioned. Being on a University's Board isn't notable, the budget/finance committee for the art gallery isn't notable. The rest is normal business activities. Redirect: to Vista Bank (Dallas) as an WP:ATD. The best five sources in the article are fwtx.com, a paper from his hometown, which I think is the best and contributes to nobility even though it still heavily quotes him. An interview with D Magazine, which doesn't count. A profile in WP:BUSINESSINSIDER, which is not reliable enough for cases like this. An award and accompanying coverage from the magazine Texas Banking, award coverage from the organization that gives it is not independent. And the one I cannot access, which is titled "Behind the deal: Vista Bank CEO sees $250 million opportunity to grow deposits in first year in Florida", so it is likely also not independent enough. Verdict: to Vista Bank (Dallas). It's suspicious when an account's first edit is an AfD nomination, even when unaided by an LLM. But the nom's argument was echoed by experienced editors here, who used their own voice, not an LLM's. The "Speedy keep, speedy close" !vote... Merged into another page.

00:00 Edward N. Martin. Nominated: Fails NBIO and GNG -- this person runs HJ Martin and Son which I previously nominated for deletion. He has had board roles for the Green Bay Packers and received some minor awards from organizations for his philanthropy/service. None of this supports notability. Delete: The article was created by a user whose edits have been overwhelmingly related to the subject's company, H.J. Martin and Son. Her edit summary said she created the company article "as a favor to a friend." See here. We also have a pattern of further COI and/or paid editing by (now blocked) and edits at talk and AfD pages by confessed paid editor ("This user ... discloses that they have been paid by H.J. Martin and Son for their contributions to HJ Martin and Son and Edward N. Martin. I'm Wally, an employee of H.J. Martin... I edit as part of my job.”) The article on the company has now been deleted, and this one should be too. This long pattern of surrogate/COI editing is a serious concern, and I don't see enough SIGCOV in reliable, independent sources to satisfy WP:GNG.

Delete: Quite simply, there isn't enough significant coverage from independent sources for this subject to meet the WP:GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Religious minorities in Pakistan. Nominated: I propose merging to Religion in Pakistan because the contents of the page is covered across multiple Wikipedia pages- Religion in Pakistan, [[Merge: This is a tough one, as Religion in Pakistan is obviously the overarching topic and the subject of Religious minorities in Pakistan should obviously be covered in the broader article. However, there is a lot of RS material across the news and academic spaces covering Pakistan for its socio-political practices related to religious minorities. I'm !voting merge right now on the basis that pages like Forced conversion of minority girls in Pakistan and Blasphemy law in Pakistan sufficiently cover the creed-non-specific subtopics while articles like Catholic Church in Pakistan sufficiently cover the specific minority religions. I am not broadly opposed to resurrecting this article should a clear need be established. Best, ~ Merge: to Religion in Pakistan. THEZDRX | Merge: to Freedom of religion in Pakistan as that page basically covers the same topic and has sections such as “Constitutional & Other Legal Discriminations against Religious Minorities”, “State Sponsored Violence Against Religious Minorities”, “Use of State Institutions to Propagate Against Religious Minorities”. Oppose merge to Religion in Pakistan as undue, there is a lot of content about religious discrimination in Pakistan, so a standalone page is needed (which we have). Verdict: to Religion in Pakistan and Freedom of religion in Pakistan, selectively, as appropriate. There is consensus for a merger, but some disagreement as to the appropriate target. It is therefore up to those carrying out the merger, as well as consensus among both article's editors,... Merged into another page.

00:00 Cardtonic. Nominated: This MIGHT be a notable company, but I am struggling to find reliable sources that prove that. The sources provided in the article are almost exclusively from September 2025 suggesting a concentrated effort to promote this company through various news organizations. The sources suffer from typical WP:NEWSORGNIGERIA concerns. Several are nameless desk editors; several are interviews; several appear AI/LLM generated, most are promotional in their tones. (More in depth analysis below) A BEFORE search shows a lot of similar sources and press release-esque coverage, or routine business coverage for transactions/promotions. Delete:: Per Country-ANDWestern's concerns about reliable, independent sources establishing notability; I also failed to find anything. The article also does read somewhat promo-ish; per WP:ITSNOTNEUTRAL that doesn't demonstrate Cardtonic's non-notability, but it reflects the lack of independent sourcing. analysis by Kqol. The Business of Photography may also be unreliable. Verdict: Undecided.

00:00 Aaron Boadu. Nominated: Performing the second AfD step on behalf of a temporary account as requested at . I have no opinion on the actual proposal and won't watch this discussion. 00:00 Uryankhay Republic. Nominated: I propose merging to Tannu Uriankhai because I think it overlaps with the destination article and I have found the state name 'Uryankhay Republic' to be rather dubious—it has not appeared in any of the Russian or Tuvan language sources I looked at as I was writing the page for Oyun Kombu-Dorzhu. The root may be the seventh source on the article, which is a self-published looking Dutch site made in 2017 that gives no source for the name. Searching Uryankhay Republic verbatim on Google Scholar brings up only two results, both works made after the publication of this Wikipedia page. Tannu Uriankhai was also a feudal monarchy, not a republic. Merge: per nominator's rationale. Delete: The article itself acknowledges that such a thing never existed. There were some rebellions, Russian troops, and the incorporation of the territory into Uryankhay Krai in 1914 (which our article ORs into a "Succeeded by"). The page also says (and is in line with other sources) that the elite of the land were divided and did not make a clear decision regarding further actions (for example, establishing their own state). This could be redirected to History of Tuva, but the issue is that the title is made up, as it has almost no hits in Google Scholar. Delete: One database identifies it But I don't know that it's reliable (could be copying from Wikipedia). Besides the two aforementioned hits, I couldn't really find usage of the term. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Disappearance of Noah Woods. Nominated: While a tragic incident, this appears to be a clear failure of WP:NOTNEWS. WP:NEVENTS says: emphasis mine. Delete: Sad but wikipedia is not a newspaper. It could have significance but I doubt it as missing children and murder is a regular occurrence. Delete: Kid disappeared, body found next day. It's very sad news, but my former student's grandson has terminal brain cancer and a former colleague's daughter has ovarian cancer even before puberty. None of these are things that we write about. A reminder that for "grown up reasons", we must stick strictly to our mission nowadays, and not go into other people's private lives. One good person's sympathy is another bad person's excuse. 20:58 Janice Tessa. Nominated: Recreated in 2025 after the previous AfD resulted in "delete". I don't see any evidence of notability since then; her roles seem minor and thus not qualifying for WP:NACTOR, and the coverage of her is trivial, tabloid, or primary source interview-type material. Nothing qualifying found in a BEFORE search. Delete: Fails WP:NACTRESS, two roles in blue-linked movies, both are relatively minor. If we go by the order on the respective pages, both are outside of the main 5 roles. Delete: The best source is this Express Tribune article but it does not say much. Other sources are brief mentions, Web/Entertainment Desk pieces which generally considered not reliable but either way they are mostly based on what she says or routine announcements. Agree with others her roles do not meet WP:N-ACTOR. Delete: The only additional sources I can find are primary (short interviews). As stated above, she doesn't seem to pass WP:NACTOR. Delete: Fails to overcome WP:NACTOR. 20:40 Collin Mutyaba. Nominated: No evidence of this young boxer meeting WP:GNG or WP:SPORTBASIC. The article is also possibly AI-generated. Delete: He doesn't meet any WP notability criteria. No evidence of any boxing success as an adult, amateur or professional. Don't believe coverage meets WP:GNG or WP:ANY-BIO, either. 20:09 Macklemore–Ed Sheeran tour controversy. Nominated: I propose merging to Loop Tour because this is a spin-off from the tour page, and nothing here is independent from what occurred during the tour. The content here can be said there. Several of this page's subsections are too small to even be their own subsections (see "Statements" as an example) and can easily be summarized without having too many subsections. (CC BY-SA 4.0) Snow close: irregular nomination following the snow keep at Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Macklemore–Ed Sheeran tour controversy an hour ago. I suggest the nominator to withdraw it. Speedy keep: per WP:SK2C. The other AfD was quickly closed with a WP:SNOW consensus to keep due to a clear pass of WP:NEVENT and concerns about keeping this at the tour article being WP:UNDUE. If the nominator disagrees with that close, then they should open a thread at WP:DRV rather than starting another AfD. Verdict: under criterion 2c. —⁠ Merged into another page.

20:09 Gelasio di Nicoló. Nominated: Di Nicoló receives significant coverage in Ione or two Italian books on the history of art in Ferrara dating to the period 1840-1900. The only more modern sigcov I can find is in a PhD thesis, which we can't use to establish notability. Per WP:AGEMATTERS, I feel this article fails WP:GNG. Keep: The Getty ULAN link provided has many other links to bibliographical info, that's usually a good sign to show artistic notability. I've not dug down, but this seems to be a notable person. Verdict: Merged into another page.

19:56 Michelle Mawby (interior designer). Nominated: No sources that clearly count towards WP:GNG/WP:NCREATIVE with independent significant coverage of Mawby or her work (not just brief mentions). Interviews/quotes from Mawby are not independent sources. The only source that even comes close is but even that is mostly quotes from Mawby. Redirect: to Junk Raiders#Team members. I wasn't able to find any additional coverage not mentioned by nom, and both articles discuss her in relation to that project. Redirect: to Junk Raiders#Team members. 18:33 MNR Tehosa class locomotive. Nominated: I tried to find sources, used various names, but couldn't find any reliable sources. The only source is a mirror site that references wikipedia. Selective merge: to Rolling stock of the South Manchuria Railway#Ordinary passenger locomotives, which already has a row for this class. The class clearly existed (:ja: has the same numbers and specifications, and both lists cite Ichihara et al. 1972), but I'm unable to find anything beyond list entries for the five engines. The short history paragraph could be included as a note in the table. The figures should also be verified because the list indicates the service in 1931 (the construction year was 1912), and in the infobox the driving wheel diameter is listed as 1,473 mm which differs from that given by ja.wiki, claiming a diameter of 1,753 mm. Redirect: to Rolling stock of the South Manchuria Railway#Ordinary passenger locomotives would be the best choice here, at least for now. Verdict: to Rolling stock of the South Manchuria Railway#Ordinary passenger locomotives. No prejudice against a selective merge. Merged into another page.

21:09 Vusal Abdullazade. Nominated: This article was recently draftified, but the author is attempting to jam this new version through. Verdict: Delete: already in draft space; editor is gaming the system. Merged into another page.

17:40 Codename: Ocean Keeper. Nominated: Besides this article from TouchArcade, there isn't much else demonstrating reliable secondary-sourced coverage. This feels like straight-up paid promotion, so I don't think it should be admissible and it may be worth revisiting Destructoid as an WP:RS. Everything else is a primary interview or database listing, making the game fail WP:GNG. Verdict: Undecided.

17:37 Zora (2025 film). Nominated: Appears to fail WP:NFILM. Nothing to support notability found in a BEFORE. All citations are about the director and not the actual film. No reviews found. Keep: as per the two reliable sources reviews identified above that show a pass of WP:NFILM in my view. That they are both very negative reviews shows their independence, imv Keep: The sourcing is not strong yet, but this is a 2025 film, so more coverage may still appear. I think WP:BEFORE should include a proper search of Hindi-language and Indian film sources, including regional newspapers, trade publications, and industry sites. Sources may not be well indexed in English yet. WITHDRAWN: reviews cited above support WP:NFILM. Verdict: Whitdrawn. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

17:36 Jiba Lamichhane. Nominated: I think the article does not meet Wikipedia's notability guideline for biographies. Fails WP:GNG. This concern was already raised in 2017 and remains unresolved since 7 years. Keep: I was ready to !vote delete on this, but he does appear to be a somewhat influential Nepali voice. See for instance herewhere his views posted on social media get picked up as a news story in English-language Nepali media (similarly . Additional sources. I also found , a newspaper article about his election as head of the NRNA; role in relief giving , role in foreign investment ; role as head of association as trade promoter ; coverage of the association election , , , . Keep: per Jahaza and satisfies WP:GNG. Keep: Page currently lacks sufficient references, and additional reliable sources should be added. But the subject meets requirements under WP:GNG. The sourcing issue can be resolved through improvement rather than deletion. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

17:28 Caring for the Lagoon. Nominated: Appears to fail WP:N-FILM. Nothing to support notability found in a BEFORE Redirect to Oliver Dickinson#Filmography (with the history preserved under the redirect): the film's director, per Wikipedia:Deletion policy#Alternatives to deletion. A redirect with the history preserved under the redirect will allow editors to selectively merge any content that can be reliably sourced to the target article. A redirect with the history preserved under the redirect will allow the redirect to be undone if significant coverage in reliable sources is found in the future. Verdict: to Oliver Dickinson#Filmography. The discussion reached a straightforward agreement. Since the film hasn't picked up enough notability to stand on its own, sending it over to the director's filmography page keeps the useful info intact without needing a separate stub article. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

17:13 Fort Carriola. Nominated: There is coverage of this fortification on non-reliable amateur websites but there is no significant coverage in reliable sources apparent online, checked internet archive as well. Doesn't appear to be notable. Delete: fails WP:GNG. Keep: In general, I think fortifications should be considered notable. Italy is terrible at listing buildings, so I don't know whether it's heritage listed or not, but it almost certainly would be in countries that actually do have decent built heritage lists. Delete: (reluctantly). As much as I would like to agree with Necrothesp, a fortification requires significant in-depth coverage to be considered notable per WP:NBUILDING. Geographical features cannot inherit notability; thus, a WWI fortification is not notable by virtue of being a WWI fortification. If produces a list of more sources I would change my mind (I have notified them on their talk page that they must post their arguments here, and not in reply to the talk page notification from Boynamedsue), but in my search the only reliable source on the topic was a book concerning WWI and the Austro-Hungarian Empire in which it is a passing mention (page 222). Keep: I think short sources from above are fine. The topic was also covered in this book. Verdict: Merged into another page.

16:59 Yoshiko Shinohara. Nominated: Fails WP:SIGCOV. Refs are routine business, PR and interviews. Fails WP:BIO. Source analysis to follow. Nomination withdrawn: Should have checked properly. Verdict: Withdrawn by nominator. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

21:28 Breet (company). Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP. • Delete: The notability isn't established through reliable sources. Many suffer from NEWSCORPNIGERIA concerns. Some examples: Delete: I responded to a G11 tag yesterday, but declined because I saw numerous sources present which could reasonably be argued to support notability. For my part I felt the article should be deleted, but as a sysop, speeding is not at my discretion. Since the topic was already in pagespace I chose a formal deletion discussion which I hope might lead to a more durable outcome. If sufficient RS is applied or brought here, I might reconsider my call. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:28 Islamic toys. Nominated: Original research with no reliable sources to establish notability of the topic. Checking Google Scholar and JSTOR reveals the phrase "Islamic toys" used in a couple articles tangentially related at best. Certainly this is a topic an historian could work with but this is not an established term of art nor are the central claims even cited. Delete: Seems like a promotional article for the toy company which is cited as the source, the article should be deleted for now, can be recreated later and follow WP:MOS and WP:GNG. Delete: per WP:TNT - notable topic, but this is a poorly written and poorly sourced essay. An alternative to deleting it would be a redirect to Ramadan#Cultural practices, since the majority of such toy sales occur within the month of Kareem. Verdict: Merged into another page.

16:32 Transport in Sydney in the 2010s. Nominated: This article isn't about a single topic. It is a group of topics that are already (or should already) be covered on other pages, and are only linked together by happening in the same decade in Sydney. Delete: I think Teraplane presents a strong argument. Content is covered in individual articles. No specific source about the 2010s. Weak keep: This article could provide a decent overview of the transport if taken care of. However no other articles exist about the 2000's or 1990's. Still could make those articles... TheEpicEgg56 Delete: or at best Selective merge to Transport in Sydney and subsidiary articles. Much of this content fails NOTINDISCRIMINATE, and specifically it is the time-limited material that does so: for example, has no obvious encyclopedic value, and it's placement in an article about transport in Sydney in the 2010s is original research. The topic of transport in Sydney, and its subunits, is obviously notable, but we have articles for those. I see no argument for a time-limited article, nor any evidence of due weight concerns created by minor mergers (I haven't evaluated all the potential targets for mergers to check whether the content is already present and DUE). Delete: per nom. Not seeing much scope for merging with much of the content already covered in other articles. Verdict: Undecided.

16:29 300-page iPhone bill. Nominated: I propose merging to iJustine#300-page iPhone bill because the article fails WP:INDISCRIMINATE. While unquestionable that the article passes WP:GNG, it purports that the 300-page iPhone bill had some sort of effect on AT&T when the company denied it ever did, and vastly overstates the stream's effect on society. It even says that iJustine accidentally chose paper billing, which is what caused her to get the bill in the first place. There is nothing demonstrating this needs to be talked about outside the context of the streamer or History of the iPhone#Oversized bills. Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances. This is a perfect example for a smerge. Verdict: Undecided.

16:27 Zach Lahn. Nominated: I propose redirecting to 2026 Iowa gubernatorial election. As before, he currently fails WP:NPOL. The coverage here is all about his campaign/candidacy. He does not otherwise meet WP:GNG. Nothing substantive has changed since the last AFD. If he wins, he gets an article. But not now. Redirect to 2026 Iowa gubernatorial election: Subject lacks coverage outside of the political campaign. As the nom notes, we can revisit this if he wins in November. Keep: I don't think the subject is a fully clear pass under WP:NPOL, but the coverage makes a clear pass under WP:GNG and WP:ONEEVENT. Redirect: candidates for political office are not automatically notable, although a redirect might be appropriate to the election article. Redirect: per the comments I made in the previous discussion. Nothing substantially has changed since then. If the subject wins in November, obviously no prejudice against recreation. Keep: Although the subject is short of meeting WP:NPOL they certainly pass WP:GNG. Temporary keep: Make the decision after the election. Redirect: to 2026 Iowa gubernatorial election. I do not see any substantial coverage not related to his campaign (all of the links above are about it). The only other things the article mentions are that he was a campaign manager, was referred to by the President during a Q&A session, and made a “millions of Montanans” remark, none of these sources contain any significant coverage of him. Ultimately, it is a 1E issue. Verdict: to 2026 Iowa gubernatorial election. There is no need to delete prior to redirecting as the history may be useful if Lahn wins the election. Consensus is clear now against a standalone page. Merged into another page.

16:23 Macklemore–Ed Sheeran tour controversy. Nominated: Per WP:RECENT and WP:NOTNEWS, there’s no evidence this is something that will have longstanding impact or coverage. There is suitable mention at Loop Tour and all this article does is provide a long blockquote and other quotes from responses. Keep: Pretty clear from the coverage that this is notable as an independent topic. The impact is clearly shown. Keep: Seems like this is the biggest controversy in music and it involves several celebrities. More importantly, the nature of the press coverage makes it notable. MagicatthemovieS Keep: Clearly satisfies WP:NEVENT as an independent topic from the tour. There is a large amount of ongoing coverage from WP:RS and it would be WP:UNDUE at this point to contain all the information at the tour article. Keep: There is already too much in-depth coverage for this all just to be covered at Loop Tour. Articles like this BBC one describe this event as the biggest controversy of Sheeran’s career. The level of analysis in that linked article is a lot more than what you would expect for something to be considered a 'minor' controversy. Al Jazeera also analysed the backlash from other artists in a high amount of detail. Keep: has received extensive RS coverage for days both inside and outside of the music industry. Keep: Per WP:SNOW. The controversy is covered in a multitude of reliable sources, which I can see on the article itself. ?Stalking eagle SNOW Keep: Per above. It's been in the news cycle for a bit now with decent third-party analyses. Keep: As per above. It's WP:SNOWballed enough that it's an avalanche. All jokes aside, there's enough sources sans music and enough coverage. Medical Coder, chess specialist, retired SSBWiki rollback, hi? Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

16:02 Carlos Roberto deMedeiros. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NACADEMIC, appears to be a physician and researcher doing the job of a physician and researcher. ~ Delete.: Very modest research profile:h = 13; 25 citations in 2026, 61 in 2021 (his best year). Delete: per nom and others, no evidence of a pass of WP:NPROF. Note, this is one of many weak pages recently moved to main by a pair of editors. Delete: fails the prof test. Almost every source is by the subject, rather than about him, so he also fails general notability. Delete: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NPROF the available sources don't clear the standards thresholds for independent notability. Verdict: / Merged into another page.

15:38 Press Your Luck (disambiguation). Nominated: Unnecessary dab. All features on this page are either 1. not titled "Press Your Luck", 2. spinoffs of the American show Press Your Luck, or 3. both. All are sufficiently linked from the main Press Your Luck page. Prod contested by page creator with . Ten Pound Hammer (they/them) • Keep: This disambiguation page is not harming anything and is a concise listing of multiple articles that contain the phrase "Press Your Luck". Keep: per Jax 0677 and the scandal article. Delete: The scandal is not referred to as "Press Your Luck", so it's a partial title match that doesn't belong on a disambiguation page. Everything can be covered by a hatnote to International versions of Press Your Luck; sending readers to the disambiguation page first just forces them to make an extra click. Keep: There is a redirect Press Your Luck (film) to the film The Luckiest Man in America which is not part of the franchise. The film was referred to via this name in sources. Verdict: Merged into another page.

15:00 Thumbay Moideen. Nominated: Not a person of note. Appears to have had profile added much like his son's (https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Akbar_Moideen_Thumbay) - in similar promotional style with little actual relevant material. Not a notable figure and article doesn't meet standards based on sources. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources, but I would not oppose a redirect as suggested. Merge to Thumbay Group: As the founder, would not be out of place, briefly mentioned in the article about the company he founded. Redirect to : Thumbay Group: following the above discussion. The coverage of this person already present in the History section there (which also needs better references for its claims) seems sufficient. Verdict: to Thumbay Group. Merged into another page.

14:53 Rong Berong. Nominated: Several sources do not mention this TV series ([<https://www.thewall.in/cinema/arindam-ganguly-was-the-first-hero-of-a-host-of-heroines-including-rituparna-labani-bidipta-pallabi-indrani/tid/165141>], or mention it only in passing ([https://www.telegraphindia.com/entertainment/rituparna-senguptas-most-challenging-roles-and-how-she-aced-them-with-elan/cid/1896716#goog_rewarded], [<https://bengali.abplive.com/photo-gallery/entertainment/in-pics-get-to-know-popular-movies-of-rituparna-sengupta-841566>], although they call it Shwet Kapot, assuming that is the same series). There's also a Bengali file hosted on self-hosting service Onedrive of uncertain provenance. Between this and a BEFORE search that came up empty, I can't find much evidence of a show by this name and certainly nothing that passes the test of WP:GNG. Verdict: Undecided.

14:40 Ricky Bell (Scottish politician). Nominated: Fails WP:GNG. Being a councillor or council leader is not inherently notable.

Most sources I can see are routine coverage of his appointment as leader and do not cover the article's subject in any detail. Half the sources cited are either basic profiles or election results. A draft for the article also exists and was declined at articles for creation in June. Keep: I agree with the logic of Goodreg3 and Jishara. He's only ten days into his term. This discussion has lasted nearly half his entire term so far! Furthermore, he at least meets WP:BA-SIC. No basis for deletion here. Worst case scenario, move it to a draft. Keep: looking at the pageviews of the largest council areas by population in Scotland, Glasgow City Council gets far more pageviews on average. Glasgow doesn't have a metro mayor (only a ceremonial Lord Provost), so the leader of the city council is the de facto leader of the city. Having an article (Jacqueline McLaren) on the Lord Provost but not the leader of the city council would be like having an article on the Governor General of Canada but not Canada's prime minister for comparison. Keep: council members of internationally renowned cities are usually notable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:39 Football in Beijing. Nominated: I don't believe this article warrants a separate page, failing WP:GNG. I've attempted to search " " in Mandarin but I didn't find any comprehensive article dealing with the history of football in Beijing. Merge to Football in China: Beijing is not a developed football hub significant enough to warrant a separate article. Delete: no evidence of notability. Don't think it merits a merge, otherwise we'd have to do that for every city! If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:38 Benito Zadi Zokou. Nominated: Not really sure on what basis this guy was ever considered notable. Fails WP:GNG in my view. I don't think he even meets the old NFOOTBALL criteria. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: poorly sourced; one citation is not enough for a BLP. Ping me if you add more. Delete: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NFOOTBALL lacking significant independent coverage. the page is poorly sourced with insufficient citation to establish verifiability under WP:V. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:35 Adenike Adeleke Nominated: Every single reference on this article is, in my opinion, at least 99% AI slop. The best two sources I could find elsewhere is an article from the Foundation for Investigative Journalism stating that she is the governer of Osun State's daughter-in-law and was nominated as a commissioner, and an article from Punch Nigeria on her birthday being celebrated. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. signed, Merged into another page.

16:52 Robert Etoll. Nominated: Fails WP:BASIC and WP:COMPOSER. The sources are his alma mater's alumni Q&A, a press release and the buyer's own page about the sale of his music library, database credit listings, and passing mentions like a soundtrack tracklist. WP:BEFORE find nothing better. Keep: in view of the multiple reliable sources coverage identified in this discussion that together shows a pass of WP:GNG so that deletion is unnecessary in my view, Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

21:37 FyaVerse. Nominated: Soft-deleted at AfD in October 2025 and recreated without new independent coverage. Still fails GNG. • The Jamaica Gleaner — “J’can-born FyaVerse broadens Caribbean sound” (June 7, 2025).: This is the source I believe is most relevant to the notability discussion. The article provides substantial coverage of FyaVerse's music career rather than simply mentioning him. It discusses his debut album Rak Di Wrld, earlier releases and collaborations, “Shatta Gyal”, his work with Chev-oBeatz, his HDP Music Awards nomination for “Times Dread”, and his musical activities in Barbados. I submit this as potentially significant independent coverage for editors to evaluate. The New Times Rwanda — “Jamaican artiste eyes Rwandan market with debut album” (December 1, 2025): This may provide additional support for the notability discussion, although I recognise its limitations. The article contains substantial discussion of FyaVerse’s music career, debut projects, international activities and plans involving Rwanda. However, it is explicitly presented as an exclusive interview, so I am not treating statements supplied by FyaVerse as independent verification. Kenya News — “FyaVerse Expands International Profile Through Publishing Deal, Chart Success and Cross-Regional Collaborations.”: This is additional coverage for editors to evaluate. The article discusses FyaVerse’s music career, releases, collaborations, publishing activities, chart history and international work. I am not assuming that the article independently establishes notability, but I believe it is relevant to the overall assessment of the available published coverage. St. Vincent Times — “Jamaican artist wins best Zikomo dancehall in Africa.”: I am not presenting this as evidence of independent notability. The article is explicitly identified as a press release. I am including it as documentation concerning the reported Zikomo award and leaving it to editors to determine whether it has any evidentiary value. FyaVerse’s official TikTok account — video showing the Zikomo award trophy.: I am not presenting this as evidence of notability. It is a primary source showing the award trophy and is included only as supporting documentation concerning the award. Verdict: Undecided.

13:28 Aaron Eichhorn. Nominated: No evidence of GNG and seems incredibly unlikely it could be met; he made a single senior appearance in 2017 before seemingly retiring. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: poorly sourced; one citation is not enough for a BLP. Ping me if you add more. Delete: Lacks sources even on de.wiki. Delete: Article fails WP:NFOOTBALL, lacking significant independent coverage to establish verifiability under WP:V. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:40 Thibault Sottiaux. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG. • Redirect: to OpenAI Codex (AI agent) as an ATD per . I don’t think that the coverage of him personally in the Fortune article is quite enough to justify a biography at this point, but one more profile is all he needs to be a slam dunk keep. Keep: by sources indicated and the GNG. Verdict: (non-admin closure) In solidarity, (?) Merged into another page.

13:06 INEC Abia State Office. Nominated: I propose merging to Independent National Electoral Commission because there's simply no point in having articles on branches or offices when they do not have significant coverage in reliable sources to meet GNG. Support: Per nom. Best, Merge: to Independent National Electoral Commission per nom. Verdict: to Independent National Electoral Commission (Nigeria). (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

12:59 Vince Thompson. Nominated: Fails to meet WP:GNG because of a lack of WP:SIGCOV, the only source does not provide significant in-depth coverage. - (she/her) Support: WP:NATH doesn't have American football which surprises me; agreed that it fails GNG as I couldn't find any coverage of the subject other than the cited book, which was just a single line in a table. Keep: meets GNG like all modern NFL players: 1 2 3 4 etc. Keep: Fails WP:SPORTSIGCOV but I will fix that. Passes WP:GNG per sources cited by Beanie. See also this, this, this, this. This is a back who played four years of DI football (1975-79) and two full seasons and 23 games in the NFL with the Detroit Lions (1982-83) and > 400 yards from scrimmage while with the Lions. See here. Keep: It is silly to think that someone who played 23 games (and started 3) in the modern NFL would not have significant coverage. And of course as others have found, Thompson has plenty. Withdraw: The article has been significantly expanded since the nomination. - (she/her) Verdict: Withdrawn, as the article has been significantly expanded since the nomination. (non-admin closure) - (she/her) Merged into another page.

10:00 Lisa Petrides. Nominated: Fails WP:BIO, WP:ACADEMIC. Coverage seems to be lack severly. Fails WP:SIGCOV. Redirect: to Institute for the Study of Knowledge Management in Education. asked for my comment here following the Ruth Colvin Clark AfD. This one was not entirely clear to me either way. The citation record does not look bad, but in what I take to be a pretty high citation field. While she's an author, I did not find any reviews of her books (although my search was cursory). The record of self-promotion suggests caution. I see arguments for keeping, but most of her notability appears to be connected with her institute, and it looks to me like it would be better to cover her briefly in that article. (I see that there is already a lengthy, perhaps too-lengthy, section about her over there.) Verdict: Merged into another page.

WEDNESDAY 16 SEPTEMBER

12:53 Christine Nan Seng. Nominated: Beauty pageant titleholder with little or no sources to show their notability. I moved the article to Draft for further work on it but was moved back without any improvement. A WP:BEFORE conducted before sending this article here showed that sources are not available. Delete: I had tagged for BLP notability while doing New Page Patrol in the hope the author would add additional sources/material indicating notability ('draftify' would probably have been a better option, in fairness), but if they're not willing to take the draftify option, then delete, as notable (borderline, anyway!) for only a WP:BLP1E single event. Delete: Miss Grand is not part of the Big Four, per WP:NBEAUTY, and still needs more SIGCOV to meet GNG. Redirect: to Miss Grand Myanmar 2026 as an WP:ATD. Verdict: to Miss Grand Myanmar 2026. There is consensus against a standalone page, I see no objections to a redirect. Merged into another page.

12:03 St. Mary's Academy, Meerut. Nominated: Fails NSCHOOL. Sources 3 to 6 merely confirm non notable alumni. Lacking third party coverage about the school. Redirect: to Meerut#Education — It's mentioned there. Additional searches yielded nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. Opposing the merger suggested above....it's totally redundant and a bad ATD for this subject. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: to Meerut#Education. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

12:02 Amoha. Nominated: The topic “amoha” is just an aspect of the topic “moha”, on which we already have an article. The present topic is too limited to ever become more than a stub. For this reason, I have shifted the material found here to become part of the article on “moha” so that the present article can be deleted and ideally a redirect be created from “amoha” to “moha” Verdict: to Moha (Buddhism). Note that this was essentially a “merge” outcome, but content was added to the target before this discussion was closed. signed, Merged into another page.

21:47 Thunder Jackson. Nominated: Doesn't seem to pass WP:N-MUSICIAN. The article was deleted a few days prior due to the author requesting it. Keep: as per above. What was the reason given for deletion within month it was created? Keep: per the subject satisfies WP:NMUSICIAN and WP:GNG backed by independent coverage like GQ and Clash. Verdict: Merged into another page.

11:51 National English School, Kolkata. Nominated: 2 previous AfD's were not consensus. Except for the Times of India article, the sources are primary or directories. A search in google news yielded little. Fails NSCHOOL. Keep: Found three articles by The Telegraph, about parents protesting low grades and celebrations of anniversaries in 2012 and 2025. ToI source from the article. Lean keep: per the sources attached by Kelob2678. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: The sources has shown are not notable enough to warrant standalone article. They still don't meet the relatively higher standards of WP:NSCHOOL we have now. Weak Delete: Of Kelob2678's sources above, the first is largely an interview of relevant parties, the second and third are odd shortish semi-promotional reports on school productions, and the fourth has obvious promotional language (are speeches ever “enthraling” and “delightful” in such a mundane context?). I should note, too, that the second source was apparently conducted . Such language, especially when combined with WP:RSNOI, pushes me towards getting rid of this. Verdict: Undecided.

11:39 Secondary Board High School, Cuttack. Nominated: All sources provided are primary except the first one which is dead. No significant coverage from google news to meet WP:N-

SCHOOL. Keep: There was a government takeover conflict in 2024, together with the TOI in the article, this is barely, but enough. Lean keep: per the sources cited above by Kelob2678. Changing my previous stance of deletion. (Ping me or else I won't see it) weak keep: with 3 available sources, it is barely passing notability. Verdict: Undecided.

11:31 Avinash Ashok. Nominated: Fails GNG. He has only played very minor roles in movies, fails NACTOR. Recent coverages are of WP:NEWSORGINDIA in nature because of his participation in reality show. Delete: Concur with nominator - lots of fluff pieces, not enough to support NACTOR being met. Verdict: Creator blocked as sock. G5 (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

11:19 2014 Patna Pirates season. Nominated: The information here can already be found in 2016 Pro Kabaddi League season (January) and I don't think it is particularly notable enough to justify as its own article Delete: all. Whether these statistics belong on Wikipedia at all is debatable - this is an encyclopedia, not a sports almanac - but they certainly do not need to be broken down by team, especially when there is no additional content beyond the statistics. The articles listed in :Category:Pro Kabaddi League seasons cover the same material much more concisely. Redirect: to Patna Pirates#Seasons as mostly duplicate. Verdict: to Patna Pirates#Seasons. Merged into another page.

10:53 Centre for Development of Imaging Technology. Nominated: Marked for notability and promotional concerns since 2023 and only sources its own website. Lacking SIGCOV to meet WP:ORG. Keep: plenty of sources available like here or this. It is used as a reference in independent publications as well, e.g. here by a UN publication. It is important enough that a change of director gets an article in The Hindu Things going on at or with CDIT get noted in the press... Plus lots of hits in Google Scholar. Keep: though I can understand how the article would ring alarm bells, it currently looks purely promotional. However, the news sources found by show the 'centre' attracts regular notice, not just for changes of personnel (it would be good if some could be added to the article). Keep: essentially per Fram. Sufficient sources to create a presumption of notability, entity having a page on Wikipedia serves a purpose because of this, and any promotion can be cleaned up. Keep: per Fram. Can understand though why this would be nominated with that name like that if not for Fram's good source finding ~ Verdict: Merged into another page.

10:31 Jessica Worsham. Nominated: This shooting does not appear notable per WP:CRIME and WP:BLP1E. The deceased seems to be a WP:LPI who has not received sustained, significant coverage during her life or following her death. ? (|) Delete: for lack of significant coverage. Delete: fails WP:NCRIME, lacks continued coverage. If the page is understood to be about the individual, then fails WP:NVICTIM. Verdict: Merged into another page.

09:34 Crişana Oradea. Nominated: Recreation of the same article that was redirected per this discussion that consists with the same LLM slop that Vladraresfilip did. Redirect: to List of football clubs in Romania by county and salt, ie protect the redirect. No evidence of notability, LLM use, and borderline G4. Verdict: to List of football clubs in Romania by county. Merged into another page.

09:11 Divakar Sharma. Nominated: Lack of significant coverage in reliable, independent secondary sources. The subject's notability under Wikipedia's general notability guideline is not established. Weak keep: based on what's available. The minimum effort for a deceased person is to look for obituaries. Verdict: Undecided.

08:48 Uplers. Nominated: Lack of notability, likely COI Delete: Fails WP:NCORP. Delete: Fails WP:NCORP and WP:GNG due to a lack of significant independent coverage. Verdict: Merged into another page.

08:25 The Holy Temple. Nominated: Fails both WP:N in general, and WP:NBOOK specifically. One source is a link to the book itself, the other is to a quote from the book in a church owned publication. Neither of these establishes notability. Nobody else seems to be discussing this book in depth outside of the church Verdict: Nomination created by blocked sock and has attracted no other support. Editors who are not sockpuppets can renom if they so choose. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

08:06 Zeram, Amnor, Manti, and Limher. Nominated: Only church owned sources for this group of characters. Independent reliable sources are required to establish notability, and I was unable to find anything that wasn't church owned covering this in depth. Delete: no claim of significance, extremely minor if not irrelevant figures. Church owned-sources, whatever the religion, can in certain circumstances be used in relevant articles, but per se carry no weight for a claim of notability. These 4 characters are trivially mentioned in a single verse of the Book of Mormon and appear to be non-notable even within the Mormon universe. Redirect: to List of people in the Book of Mormon. These four names are only in one verse of one, non-independent source. They are essentially supernumeraries or spear carriers. This is a reasonable alternative to deletion. Delete: don't redirect. There is no evidence of notability, and contra the above, I believe this is a bad search term: nobody is likely to be typing in four names of different people separated by commas. Verdict: I accept 's argument that "Zeram, Amnor, Manti, and Limher" is a highly unlikely search term. And since we already have , , and , all currently redirecting to nominated page, I will retarget them to the appropriate section in :List of people in the... Merged into another page.

07:52 Nephi the Disciple. Nominated: I was unable to find any reliable independent sources that covered this character in depth. Only the church seems to have noticed him, and we need independent sources to establish notability. Delete: Clearly a non-notable fictional character. And the disciples of Jesus in general tend to be rather obscure figures, with doubtful historicity. Redirect: to List of people in the Book of Mormon. This is not a major person, there are few or no independent sources, and it's a reasonable alternative to deletion. Verdict: to List of people in the Book of Mormon. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

07:34 Zionist Home – The Reservists. Nominated: I had meant to AFD this awhile ago because it is just an alliance between parties, which are often fleeting for one election. Before I got the chance, it dissolved anyway. While there is coverage and sourcing, at this point, it wont be lasting. Even the alliances website is already gone. ← Delete: by NOPAGE. This is a footnote in the history of the The Reservists and of Hili Tropper. Delete: There isn't a clear redirect target between The Reservists and Hili Tropper, so deletion makes sense here. Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:21 Randy Hurd. Nominated: I don't see anything to indicate that they pass WP:NPROF. They have a low h-index at Google scholar and I'm not finding anything to indicate that they pass any of the other criteria for notability of academics. If more sources are found, please ping me. Delete: Agree on WP:NPROF C1. Every source in the article is primary or non-independent — Weber State's own webpages, the ROV group Hurd co-founded, his old lab's blog, ASEE author listings, and his own papers and patent. Delete: much too soon. With an h-factor of 11 and 471 cites he is just starting his research career. We should wait 5-8 years when his career might have established itself. As mentioned above bring a Dean does not make an academic notable. Delete: Assistant professors are rarely notable and I see no signs of him being an exception. Associate dean is far from head of entire university (the level needed for WP:PROF#C6) and one triple-digit-citation-count paper with a non-leading author position is far from the level of impact needed for WP:PROF#C1. Delete: as per - too soon as an assistant professor to pass WP:PROF. Delete: every source is his university, his own group or his own papers. Verdict: / Merged into another page.

07:07 Montana Jones II. Nominated: I propose draftifying because the current version is totally unsourced. A previous version had sources that were removed as unreliable. I am not sure if this can meet WP:GNG, but if it can, this will give the opportunity to the author to find better sourcing. Delete: as per . FWIW, I have contributed to zines, but not those cited. Verdict: Merged into another page.

06:45 Jyotiprasad Jain. Nominated: Author of a few books about Jainism. Besides for this, I could not find any secondary coverage about their books or scholarship and I don't see any indication that they pass WP:NAUTHOR or WP:NPROF. If more relevant sources are found, please ping me. Keep: There are these reviews

()). He died a long time ago and lived not in the West, so more is probably available. Verdict: Merged into another page.

06:39 Harisatya Bhattacharya. Nominated: Author of a few books about Jainism. I could not find any secondary coverage whatsoever about their books or scholarship and I don't see any indication that they pass WP:NAUTHOR or WP:NPROF. If more relevant sources are found, please ping me. Keep: per my comment above, he died a long time ago and lived not in the West, so more is probably available. Verdict: Undecided.

06:28 Western AF. Nominated: Fails WP:NWEB, WP:NMUSIC, and WP:GNG. Original article appears to be LLM output in violation of WP:NEWLLM, and although has done a great job cleaning up the blatantly promotional prose, I cannot find enough sources to establish notability under any relevant guideline. ? (|) Verdict: Undecided.

06:26 Yuri A. Surkov. Nominated: I could not find any coverage other than the source cited in the Bibliography. I don't see anything to indicated that he passes WP:NPROF. If more sources are found, please ping me. Keep: per Lenin Prize 1970 and USSR State Prize 1983, WP:NPROF #2. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

05:53 2026–27 Auburn Tigers women's basketball team. Nominated: Exact duplicate of Draft:2026–27 Auburn Tigers women's basketball team; no improvement to poor sourcing. Delete: per nom. The sources are not independent/databases. The path forward here is to work on the page while it is in the draft and move it to the mainspace when the team has played actual games. Verdict: Undecided.

05:20 Fire-Boltt. Nominated: There's a prior deletion at Wikipedia:Articles_for_deletion/Boltt, and the current version doesn't address what brought it there. Forbes Indias Brand Connect is sponsored content, LinkedIn is the company's own page, ETTelecom is off a press release, and Counterpoint is a commercial vendor profile. None of that satisfies WP:NCORP. Delete: Fails WP:NCORP. Sponsored and selfpublished sources only. Keep: satisfies WP:GNG and WP:CORP, backed by independent coverage from mainstream publication like Forbes India and ETTelecom.

Delete: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NCORP. Verdict: Merged into another page.

04:44 Government of Yemen. Nominated: Poorly sourced with either think-tanks or primary sources. Nothing is covered by reliable sources. Merge: to Politics of Yemen per Maltazarian's suggestion. It should be notable enough to have at least one article on the politics/government of Yemen. I'm sure that some good sources could be cobbled together. Merge/Redirect: to Politics of Yemen; deleting the article outright would not serve the readers well. 679 Verdict: to Politics of Yemen. 22:14 Open Threat Exchange. Nominated: Fails WP:NPRODUCT and WP:NCORP. Every citation is a product-launch or funding announcement about the vendor • Verdict: Feel free to renominate in three months. Merged into another page.

22:18 Herb Horowitz. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:ANY-BIO. • Keep: He was absolutely WP:GNG and is credited with "helping shape the modern high-fidelity industry." Since he died in 1985 before many articles were online and given the way the article is written it is hard to necessarily tell how influential he was. I have already found some links, which I added and some citations and I will to edit in order to make sure that the article is clear about his contributions. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:02 Peter Emmerich. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:ARTIST. IMDb, a publisher's author page, a fan blog, a faculty directory listing, and a New York Times wedding announcement... • Has the one good New York Times feature: if there's another nice write-up somewhere... Weak keep: there's some coverage, and he has a lot of influential fans on Instagram. Delete: Best source is a wedding announcement in the New York Times, where wealthy New York families list their family's weddings. As the announcement says, "Mr. Emmerich's father retired as a senior vice president for operations, in New York, at CIBC Oppenheimer, an investment bank." Typically, either they or their parents wrote this and submitted it. So, this is not an independent source; neither is it reliable nor significant coverage, and we need significant coverage in multiple reliable independent sources. The employer faculty listings list them as an "adjunct" faculty member, which is the lowest rank of temporary part-time faculty at American universities. This is far from meeting WP:NACADEMIC, WP:ARTIST, WP:GNG, or any other standards. Delete: None of the sources constitute substantial coverage in independent, reliable sources. Keep: He illustrated at least four notable children books. Four reviews on KirkusOther coverage (())(). Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:03 Mad Labs. Nominated: Fails WP:NTV and WP:GNG. Every citation is a television listing or a "what's on this week" blurb. • Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

04:10 Maybe Smith. Nominated: Fails WP:SINGER and WP:GNG. Sourced only Ottawa Sun. No evidence of notability or coverage from reliable sources [[User:Vitorperrut555|VitorFriboquen :]] Verdict: [[User:Vitorperrut555|VitorFriboquen :]] Merged into another page.

22:10 Solid Ground (Seattle). Nominated: Run of the mill non-profit operations doing typical local non profit things. It's actions are hyper-local and sourcing do not show WP:NCORP is met. Given their hyper-local nature, WP:NONPROFIT is not a reasonable SNG to consider under. Keep: This nonprofit meets WP:SIGCOV & has been covered by independent secondary sources. I've updated the article with some of the citations covered by others in this discussion. But also, I don't understand what constitutes “hyper local”, as asserted in the nomination. Seattle has over 750,000 people. And the Seattle metro area (including King county, which this nonprofit serves) is 4.5 million, which apparently makes it the 15th biggest in the US (according to the Seattle article, citing The Seattle Times). Is the implication that articles shouldn't exist for things related to a particular city / metro area, even one that's this large? — ? ~ Verdict: Merged into another page.

02:53 Alexandros MOUNTZIS. Nominated: I don't see any evidence of this young fighter meeting WP:GNG or WP:SPORTBASIC. Delete: No evidence he meets any WP notability criteria. Fightmatrix currently ranks him at #228 in his division and coverage consists of fight coverage (which any pro would have). Delete: I was unable to find any detailed, independent coverage of this sportsman. 679 Verdict: Merged into another page.

02:23 Supernumeraries. Nominated: Album fails to satisfy the requirements of WP:NALBUMS and does not have significant coverage. Keep: Numerous in-depth reviews provide significant coverage here:etc. In solidarity, Keep: per Nil NZ, all three sources are reviews and listed as reliable at WP:MUSICRS. Keep: this is also a WP:MUSICRS. Verdict: Merged into another page.

02:34 Meghan Schultz. Nominated: This subject appears to fail WP:GNG and WP:ANYBIO for lack of WP:SIGCOV by multiple independent reliable sources. She also appears to fail higher benchmarks at WP:NATHLETE (WP:NBASKETBALL). Keep: per sources added by Bearian and WP:HEY. Think it passes WP:N-COLLATH considering she was Third-team All-Horizon League and the newly added sources showing coverage. Delete: Fails WP:NCOLLATH. Third-team All-Horizon League is not a national award, and Schultz has not gained national media attention. The increased sourcing is routine coverage by the local paper. Weak delete: while there is significant coverage from local news, with two reliable sources, that's not quite enough for a BLP. Local news can be reliable, but college websites are often not. For the second time this week, someone has pinged me about an AfD without adding enough sources to pass WP:GNG. For a BLP, three is a bare minimum; four is the threshold to keep. Delete: Besides some significant coverage from the Green Bay Press Gazette (which for the purposes of notability is just one source), I'm not finding the needed coverage to pass the GNG here. The sources added appear to be local from when she was in high school and as such fail YOUNGATH. Verdict: Merged into another page.

02:13 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Malappuram. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Delete: Except for this source couldn't find any other. Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL. Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala — Additional searches yielded nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. 02:11 Swami Rama Himalayan University. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Keep: per WP:HEY. I have added additional sources for notability and reduced reliance on the university's website. Weak keep: per WP:HEY. The case doesn't look very strong....it's pretty borderline. The sources added by Rublamb are just enough to save the page. And additional searches yielded a lot but they were mostly ROUTINE reportage....not useful to establish notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

02:11 De Britto Higher Secondary School. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Delete: The aforementioned sources may have been enough back then, but they are woefully inadequate now that schools need to meet either WP:GNG or WP:NORG. One was a link to a PressReader page that I can't access (not via Internet Archive either, it was archived once in 2024 but that page is just blank. The other was an article focusing mostly on something else, and at the very end it says Not exactly what I would call significant coverage. –  \lor Delete: as there is no SIGCOV for this school. 02:11 Rose Mary School. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Delete: Found one organic coverage in TOI but that ain't enough to sustain a standalone article. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: Unreferenced for 20 years. Fails NSCHOOL. Redirect: to Palayamkottai#Schools as an WP:ATD. Verdict: to Palayamkottai#Schools. Merged into another page.

02:11 Sacred Heart Matric Higher Secondary School, Sholinganallur. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Delete: as the available sources don't have notable enough coverage to pass WP:GNG and WP:SIGCOV. Delete: Found nothing with SIGCOV in additional searches to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Redirect: to Sholinganallur#Education as an WP:ATD. Support redirect: to Sholinganallur#Education as an WP:ATD, given the lack of WP:SIGCOV to sustain a standalone article under WP:NSCHOOL. Verdict: to Sholinganallur#Education. 12:10 Sabbath School. Nominated: I propose merging to Sunday school because that page already lists "Sabbath school" as an alternative name, with an Easter Egg link on the word "sabbatarian" pointing to this one. However, I'm not an expert in the topic, so if there are sufficient doctrinal differences for separate articles, they should instead be cross-linked more clearly. There's also inconsistency in capitalisation between the two, and I'm not sure if that's deliberate. support: as they are substantially the same. Oppose: "Sunday school" is the normative term used by the majority of Christian Churches that regard Sunday to be the Lord's Day (including first-day Sabbatarian churches). A number of Christian denominations, such as the Seventh-day Adventist Church worship on Saturdays, which they hold to be the Sabbath. These denominations view what they call "Sunday worship" as part of the Great Apostasy and as such "Sunday School" would never be used by them. If a merge would occur, “Sunday school” would be a subset of “Sabbath school”, not the other way around. Support:: The two are substantially the same concept, and can only be meaningfully distinguished for the minority of Christians who meet on Saturdays instead of Sundays, in whose case “Sunday” school would be a misnomer. With that being said, there doesn’t seem to be a good name for the merged page. “Sunday school” is not the correct name for those Saturday-meeting churches, whereas “Sabbath school” is too technical and not commonly used outside of SDA. A generic name is also not ideal given that pandenominationally “Sunday school” is overwhelmingly the commoner name. Ashorocetus ( #124; ) Merge: under nominator’s proposal. I’m confused why this would be merged to Seventh-day adventists, when they are not the only denomination discussed on this page (though I do acknowledge they are the primary group to use this wording). An alternate title is against policy per WP:COMMONNAME - yes, the SDAs may use a slightly different name, but they are just one small-ish group, and a neutral title will almost immediately be contested. Convert to disambiguation page, merge some content to Sunday school, merge most of the content to Sabbath School (Seventh-day Adventist): I don’t see much of a consensus in the above discussion; we seem far from an acceptable solution. To my reading, the biggest problem is that “Sunday School” is the common name for this Christian religious practice, but some denominations (seventh-day Churches?) do these practices on Saturday, and there are also doctrinal/implementation differences. I suggest that this is best solved with a disambiguation page (Sabbath School (disambiguation)?) linking to Sunday School (which should and already does describe Sabbath School as an alternate name for sabbatarian denominations) and whatever page splits are supported by sources for specific denominations. Based on the current article, it looks like we could support an independent Sabbath School (Seventh-day Adventist) article, with the rest of the current contents of Sabbath School merging into Sunday School or into additional page splits. Cheers, Verdict: to Sunday school. I see broad agreement that there is extensive overlap between the two articles. A “reverse merge” isn’t the same as a Keep !vote. A “Keep” suggests that combining the content will not add clarity for readers, while a “reverse merge” is no... Merged into another page.

16:39 Christopher Churcher. Nominated: A talented young composer who will likely be notable someday, but today is WP:TOOSOON for a standalone article. The coverage is limited to a profile in an Oxford student paper (not usable for notability per WP:RSSM), mentions by institutions he is or has been affiliated with and thus not independent ([<https://www.lmh.ox.ac.uk/news/lmh-student-composer-christopher-churcher-releases-debut-album>, [<https://www.some.ox.ac.uk/news/somerville-college-choirs-moonrise-is-album-of-the-week/>]), his own social media and personal website ([<https://www.christopherchurcher.com/>]), Q&A WP:INTERVIEWS, which are primary sources ([<https://meettheartist.online/2026/05/11/christopher-churcher-composer/>]), other self-published sources ([<https://www.planethugill.com/2026/05/unashamedly-romantic-with-expressive.html>]), other primary sources ([<https://cbso.co.uk/programmes/cbso-yo-brahms-2>, and some WP:TRIVIALMENTIONS ([<https://www.delphianrecords.com/products/a-short-story-of-falling>, Basically, there is no independent, secondary, reliable-source WP:SIGCOV for a pass of WP:GNG. I don’t think the “[<https://www.young-composersaward.co.uk/previous-winners> National Centre for Early Music’s Young Composers’ Award” has enough coverage to count toward WP:NAWARD. I searched for full-length reviews of his compositions to see if any of them qualify as notable under WP:NMUSIC. Moonrise comes closest, with a full-length review from the British Music Society and a brief capsule review in Choir and Organ (Two of its reviews, and [https://www.midlandsmusicreviews.co.uk/2026/08/norman-stinchcombe-reviews-latest_01080245883.html, are on self-published blogs and thus not counted as reliable.) I don’t think this is enough for Moonrise to qualify (yet) as notable under WP:NMUSIC, and I don’t see any other pass on the criteria of WP:NCOMPOSER. As I said, I have no doubt Churcher will be notable in the future if his career continues as it has, but he's not at present. Draftify: per above. He is a creative who produced only one notable work that itself barely received enough coverage to cross the notability threshold. For inclusion, usually at least two are required. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:15 Family Computer Emulator. Nominated: Little significant coverage beyond primary sources. Delete: No indication of notability with regards to the article. Redirect to FCEUX#History: per A412. This doesn't meet WP:GNG and redirecting to a more usable target seems like the best option. Redirect: per A412. 15:24 Shana Merlin. Nominated: Doesn't meet GNG or NAC-TOR, best source here directly about the subject is is a graf in Source-6. Sources 2 and 3 are interviews. Merge: into The Hideout Theatre. Nothing else she has done is encyclopedically noteworthy. Keep: The article has been substantially rewritten and expanded since this AfD was opened, and I don't think either the original sourcing assessment or the proposed merge reflects the article that exists now. Merge: to The Hideout Theatre per above. The KVUE piece is an interview with a local radio station that doesn't contribute to notability. Other sources contain little biographical information about her. The Austin Chronicle has 25 articles tagged with "Shana Merlin" including some reviews. In total, this outlet contributes to notability, but we would need another equally good one to keep this page. Wikipedia.gptzero.me also says that this article is AI-generated. Verdict: to The Hideout Theatre. Despite the extensive improvements carried out diligently by during this discussion, consensus is still that the content is better suited for the article about the theatre than one about its founder. One Emmy nomination as a producer does not meet WP:ANYBIO. • Delete: fails GNG and WP:1E -- (•) . Meh: by far not the worst. 17:36 Ronald Hellings. Nominated: The subject of the article does not meet WP:NACADEMIC or WP:GNG. His publications appear to have limited citations, and while he was respected in his field, he doesn't meet the threshold of notability for academics.

Weak delete: I agree with the nom. He has one well cited paper (~1.3K) in Google Scholar, but beyond that his h-factor (manual count) is below 25 which is not high enough. I don't see much on his co-authored textbook "College Physics: Putting it all together". If someone can find more I will change my vote. Keep: I find the fact that he coauthored an Annual Review on pulsar timing to be notable recognition, as it is the foundation for NanoGrav down the line. InspireHEP shows his citation count is growing by hundreds each year -- I'm certain this will continue for at least another decade, as experiments are finally sensitive to the gravitational background now. Besides gravitational waves, there is evidence of some popular science coverage of Hellings' measurement of variations in G, including 1983 articles in Science and New Scientist. I now added a paragraph and cited a later book which reviews it. He also seems to have been involved in early work for the JDEM/WFIRST/Roman telescope. – (|) (edited) Keep: per WP:NPROF C1. Hellings and Downs's 1983 paper is where the Hellings–Downs curve comes from, and that correlation is what NANOGrav and the other pulsar timing arrays pointed to in 2023 as evidence of a gravitational-wave background. Keep: One indication that his work has been growing in influence and notability is the citation rate for the 1983 Hellings & Downs paper. According to the NASA ADS, this paper has been cited a total of 967 times over the past 43 years, which is a high number. But what's even more striking is the fact that 241 of those citations are in papers published since the start of 2025. That is a huge and remarkable acceleration in the citation rate for a paper that is 40+ years old, and demonstrates how foundational this work was for the field of pulsar timing gravitational wave astronomy. Keep: per WP:PROF, which does not require multiple well-cited works. One single paper or textbook can be enough. If you want to change that, then we need a much stronger consensus. Verdict: (non-ad-min closure) Merged into another page.

15:08 Pukupuku Natural Circular Notice. Nominated: I couldn't find any coverage of this manga. The references on Japanese Wikipedia seem to be primary. A redirect to Ciao (magazine) is also possible per WP:ATD. Keep: It's won a major literary award which makes it pass NBOOK #2, but this article needs some serious cleanup. There's no information about the plot or characters at all, and the game section is literally bullet points with no source. Granted, the Japanese Wikipedia contains much more information that should be translated over here by interested editors. Overall, the topic is notable but the article needs a heck of a lot of work to bring it up to standard. In solidarity, (?) Keep: per above, per WP:NBOOK#2. Personally, I do not remember an article about Japan being brought to AfD that survived via direct coverage, usually it is always some sort of SNG, because Japanese media archives are poorly represented online. 19:32 Subotica Central Railway Station. Nominated: probably LLM output. checking all the sources all but one did exist but none appeared to be actually relevant to the sentence the sources were citing Keep: Did you perform a brief google search first before nominating? The first result is this . While it's not significant, it's something to improve the existing sources. HOWEVER, there's not much more reliable sources to find unless we find it in their language, which might be a pain. For now, it's notable enough to keep the article. ~ Redirect: to Subotica#Infrastructure per WP:NEWLLM. Wikipedia.gptzero.me says with 100% probability that the page was generated by AI. In principle, this could be stubified, but the proposed target already contains basic information about the station. Practice regarding LLM created articles seems to be that we prefer removal over editing. Redirect: to the new high-speed rail line to Hungary as described in the article, that has lots of coverage. This appears to be an historic building, but both the Serbian and Hungarian wiki articles either have no sourcing, or just timetable listings confirming a station exists... There probably are old articles about the structure itself, but none that I can find. Verdict: to Subotica#Infrastructure. I see a consensus to redirect, and so am implementing that result to the most explicitly supported target. Retargeting discussions may continue. Merged into another page.

02:50 List of New Taipei CTBC DEA head coaches. Nominated: I propose to merge List of New Taipei CTBC DEA head coaches. There were only three coaches so far, and the table with their names and achievements used to comfortably sit in article about the club by colleague . I see no reason for a standalone text for coaches when the club article is quite short. Predictably, the List was redirected here three times already by three different editors: in 2022, in 2025, and yours truly in 2026. Merge to New Taipei CTBC DEA: As per my previous redirect, list of 2 or 3 coaches do not require a standalone list article and fits nicely as a single section on the team article. 11:12 12Go. Nominated: Same issues as the 2025 AFD, which concluded the sourcing was all routine+promotional. This iteration of the article has newer sources, which are AI-generated promo pieces that do not count towards WP:NCORP. Looking over the 2026 sources, Elle India contains . The Korea IT Times article about the company launching ChatGPT integration contains The Manila Standard piece is also heavily promotional. I can't access this Manila Times piece but I note that the author has exactly one other published piece, which appears to be about a different product Yesim, suggesting the author is an SEO/PR worker instead of a staff member. Keep: The sources cited above establish 12Go's notability under WP:GNG and WP:NCORP. I see no reason why these sources should be considered unsuitable here. Earlier coverage should not be overlooked too. — Preceding undated comment added Keep: yes, it is concerning that LLM is used by some publications cited in this article and I think it should be brought to WP:RSN. On the other hand, as an expat living in Thailand, I think it is a very notable platform and anyone living in Thailand knows it is notable (:th: .). Promotional tone can be fixed and I'm willing to do it. It is notable enough to receive coverage in an academic book [<https://cn.technode.com/post/2014-06-27/this-startup-lets-you-buy-bus-tickets-from-your-laptop-20140620>] this and this article tilts me toward keeping this article. Delete: Unless there are new sources with independent SIGCOV since the last AfD, I am leaning towards deleting this. Not sure why we haven't salted this yet. Delete: sources read like promo pieces or advertorials, I'm not convinced there's enough for WP:CORPDEPTH. Weak keep: I think it meets WP:NCORP at least. 12Go has been covered for years and in many regions, and the newer sources above look like the significant, independent coverage WP:SIRS asks for. Delete: Reads like a WP:PROMO write up, fails WP:NCORP depth. Delete: per HyperAccelerated. Agree that Elle.in and The Korea IT Times are AI-generated and therefore unreliable per WP:RSML. I also searched a bit for academic/analyst coverage and did not find anything that would help with notability. Keep: I think the older 2014–2015 coverage gives a stronger NCORP case than the current discussion reflects, even without relying on the disputed 2026 sources. It also seems that the editors didn't bother too much checking media press in other languages, and this is the main reason I decided to bring my point here - the non-English sources should be evaluated on the same basis as the English ones. GNG allows sources in any language, and for a Southeast Asian technology company established by the Russian developers it is reasonable that some of the useful coverage appears in Russian, Thai and other regional media. Verdict: I think editors are justified in questioning the reliability of a source that is entirely generated by LLM. They're also justifiably unswayed by a 400-word missive claiming notability without citing a single source. On balance of P&G weight, I see consensus to delete. 13:10 Heart of Europe Bio-Crystallography Meeting. Nominated: Doesn't meet WP:NORG. The article is sourced entirely to write-ups by the organizers in the newsletter of a sponsor, and a book by two conference organizers. Keep: This is a 27-year international meeting series whose lectures have been given by Nobel laureates Ada Yonath and Venki Ramakrishnan has been covered by the International Union of Crystallography and the German Crystallographic Society (several times), which are the leading reliable bodies in the field, so it meets WP:GNG for a specialist academic subject. The population used to higher; many settlements have had population changes due to their conflicts.-- • Verdict: While we don't rely on census data to establish notability, we generally accept them as a source for verifiability - in this case, that there is or was an actual settlement there. And unlike some geographical features, where mere existence evidenced by census listing is... Merged into another page.

23:49 Tbilisi Medical Academy. Nominated: Fails WP:NSCHOOL and WP:NCORP. • keep: I tried the new XFD Vote script, doesn't seem to register my vote... Regardless, this and this [<https://link.springer.com/article/10.1186/s12909-025-08196-2>] that talk about the school, at least enough for a stub article. Delete: This page does not meet WP:NSCHOOL and there seems to be no significant coverage that write about the academy. It fails WP:SIGCOV as well. Not to mention, that the article has remains un-cited till date from 2023. I don't see the point of retaining this page as even a stub unless there seems to be more elaborate coverage.signed, Delete: Zero independent coverage page fails WP:NSCHOOL.

Redirect: to List of universities in Georgia (country) as an WP:ATD. The two papers listed above have authors affiliated with this school. The newspaper article is about Tbilisi State Medical University which is a different institution. I agree that inclusion requirements for schools shouldn't be high, but this is a for-profit entity which completely lacks independent coverage. Verdict: to List of universities in Georgia (country) #Private universities. Some of the !votes demonstrate a poor understanding of our guidelines. Discounting those, I see a rough consensus against retention as a standalone article, with the proposed redirect being a sensible ATD. Merged into another page.

06:56 Spanish Association of Families of Deafblind Persons.

Nominated: Notability has not been demonstrated. I could not find anything but passing mentions about this organisation. The articles on Diario de Sevilla, El País and 20minutos.es only include passing mentions. WP:ORG Keep: I have a direct affiliation with APASCIDE and disclose this conflict of interest here. I am therefore commenting on the sourcing and notability question rather than editing the article directly. Verdict: And no indication of any forthcoming input. Merged into another page.

15:02 Titanic (video game). Nominated: Incontrovertibly AI-generated article. Met the G15 criteria but was incorrectly declined, chatbot block in AbuseLog/45064544. ‑‑ Delete: There's a text game called "Beyond the Titanic" that I remember/have played (showing my age here, I'm old...). I don't see any review about this game... There are quite a few Titanic games over the years, I don't see any sourcing for this particular one. Keep: While it may have been AI made, I agree with ReconRabbit that it doesn't have anything immediately egregious about it and it does appear to be notable. After some cleanup it can probably stand on its own. Deleting it to recreate it would be bureaucracy. Stubify and rewrite: The LLM-generated article is entirely written and sourced from unreliable sources: writing a compliant article would warrant deleting, rewriting and resourcing practically everything in the article akin to WP:TNT. This is why nobody wanting to one-shot articles using an LLM should be let near editing. Deletion is the correct action on policy, but in practice some proactiveness could resolve this now. Given we've established it likely meets WP:GNG, the best outcome here is to remove it all now and start from scratch; if there is support for this, I will do that. Keep: following rewrite. Notable topic. Keep: per the Heymann Standard, following VRXCES rewrite. –  \lor Keep: following the rewrite by , unless they prefer the delete-then-recreate without the LLM version in the history. ‑‑ Keep: as the above editors have pointed out, the article has been rewritten without the apparent use of an LLM. I think it also meets WP:GNG. Keep: as others have reinforced, the article has underwent a huge rewrite by Vrxces, and should now meet WP:GNG. Verdict: The AI-generated content that prompted this nomination was rewritten and re-sourced to reliable reviews during the discussion, and there's clear consensus the article meets WP:GNG in its current form. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

15:03 Humma Humma. Nominated: I propose merging to Bombay (soundtrack) because there isn't enough content. Merge: per WP:SHORTTEXT. Verdict: to Bombay (soundtrack). (non-admin closure) • Merged into another page.

22:43 Kuknalim. Nominated: This article is a dictionary definition per WP:DICDEF and does not meet WP:GNG, also its largely drawn from a Medium (website) (which is user generated). also the other source Naga Journal does not really appear to be WP:RS. also a facebook post is def not a reliable source again Delete: I support @'s decision. This article should be re-written from scratch even if it passes WP:GNG. Delete: per above. Ping me if you add much more. Verdict: A fair amount of respondents expressed belief that this subject may well meet GNG, but that it nevertheless qualifies for WP:TNT in its current state, while others argued that it falls short of notability outright. signed, Merged into another page.

00:38 Sanjukta Parashar (police officer). Nominated: This has been deleted twice at Sanjukta Parashar. I drafted it and it was accepted at AfC but I think it needs broader discussion. Delete: Falls under G4. If a page had been deleted due to a discussion before hand, then it can be deleted again. Fails WP:RECENT and WP:BIO. Merge: with Commando Battalion for Resolute Action, at least, as an alternative to deletion. While she might not be independently notable, although that could also be debatable as her name has been mentioned in news reports for more than 10 years, as the first female leader of that unit that fact, alone, is probably worth mentioning in the article about the unit, as it is unusual to have a female commander for such an elite police unit. I think there was limited interest in the previous deletion discussions, which are also now outdated, as those occurred before her promotion to the rank of Inspector General in August 2026. So the article's recreation now should not be seen as gaming the system by recreating a previously deleted article under a new name, but as fresh consideration of the article given new information is now available. Consensus can change in discussions about an article if there are new facts that previous discussions have not considered. I think this is one of those situations. I would also support keeping the article and ask administrators to even consider re-viving previously deleted versions of her biography, especially if they were better than the current version of the article. Also, if the article is kept then the unnecessary disambiguation should be eliminated by moving the article to Sanjukta Parashar. KEEP: Indian express ,The Time of India is one of the reliable Indian publications that we accept at AFD. There are huge number of sources available upon doing a Google News search. Enough to get it Passes WP:SIGCOV / WP:GNG. Redirect: to Commando Battalion for Resolute Action as an WP:ATD. I think whether coverage is enough depends on the reliability of India Today, the same issue was brought up during the first AfD. Back then it was decided that it was not reliable enough to support this page, and I see no reason to overturn that consensus. Verdict: to Commando Battalion for Resolute Action without prejudice against selective merge, observing WP:DUE. Previous nominator withdrew, before beginning a wikibreak; please read first nomination for more info. Delete: Had the original nominator not withdrawn, this would have been deleted. Their source analysis checks out, time to get rid of this. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. 23:22 Scindia Kanya Vidyalaya. Nominated: Declined prod. Fails NSCHOOL. The 2 sources are its own website. and no sigcov in third party sources. Keep: Covered in these two papers and there is some coverage in this outlet. It has four notable alumni, so it can also be kept on this basis alone as having a navigational value. Finally, since it was founded in 1956, more coverage is likely to exist. Keep: per the sources linked by Kelob2678. The first two papers will be enough to warrant standalone notability. Remaining ones supplement them and can be used to expand the page. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: The consensus established that the sources demonstrate the school meets the threshold for notability (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

22:13 Paruhang and Sumnima. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Kiratism because they are the deities followed in the tradition. This extra page just creates unnecessary ambiguity. For disambiguation. Keep: The nomination does not provide any reason for deleting or redirecting this article; an article about the principal gods of a religion does not create any “ambiguity”, and many religions have standalone articles on their main deities. There have been academic studies about Paruhang and Sumnima. For example, Martin Gaenszle’s Origins and Migrations (2000), which is already cited in the article, researched these issues, and Gaenszle has also written a chapter called “Ancestral types: mythology and the classification of ‘deities’ among the Mewahang Rai”. The article lacks quality and proper citations, but this can be fixed by adding more sources, not by redirecting. Kiratism mentions these deities but gives no proper references for them, so redirecting would replace sourced information with something unverified. Also, this discussion was listed under “Fictional elements”, which does not fit deities of a living religion; Religion or Nepal would be more appropriate. Keep: No policy-based rationale for deletion/redirect is expressed in the nomination, but I assume the nominator may have been thinking in the direction of WP:CONTENTFORK and WP:NOPAGE. Paruhang and Sumnima are a subtopic of Kiratism, but that in itself is no reason for deletion/redirect one way or another. A redirect would be a step backwards with regard to coverage and referencing of that subject. So a merge could be considered on the basis of WP:NOPAGE, not based on any perceived ambiguity. But here I concur with : Having stand-alone articles on deities of religion in addition to having an article on the respective religion is common practice, in line with policy. And I believe there is enough coverage in secondary sources to support a full article, even if the current version is still sort. WP:ARTN applies. Weak keep: based on what’s available. I was able to verify at least one source with two clicks. Seems to pass WP:GNG. Was a search done before nominating the stub? Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

22:11 Mundum. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Mundhum because this one is just a misspelling I think. Redirect: to Mundhum per WP:NEWLLM. Verdict: to Mundhum. History is not preserved due to the LLM concerns. Merged into another page.

21:53 Madalina Rosca. Nominated: This should be deleted per WP:TNT and WP:LLM. The subject may or may not be notable, but the current version, choked in promotion, doesn't seem salvageable. Maybe draftify? The same probably goes for the article on her project, Little Syria (film). Draftify: per above discussion; this might be a notable topic, but this is a very poorly written article. I taught legal writing for almost 2 decades to paralegal students, and see a lot of common mistakes. To be honest, it needs a lot of work, but the Guild of Copy Editors will refuse to work on any article that is tagged as having notability concerns. So the only alternative to deleting it is to send it back to the creator to work on it, with or without any help, for a few weeks or months. My unsolicited advice is "less is more". Don't expect me to help, as I'm too busy in real life. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Ulug bek Sultonov. Nominated: The article has many citations, but most of them do not amount to substantial coverage of Sultonov himself. There are 14 citations, but only 12 unique sources. Only one source is specifically about him, and it is a brief announcement of his appointment. Another source is an event report that quotes him, while several others mention him only as an official or participant. At least two of the cited reports do not mention him in the text at all. Most of the remaining sources are reports about Youth Affairs Agency programmes, seminars, forums, financial assistance, or other events. The few more independent sources are therefore mostly short reports about his appointments or events he attended. I do not see the sustained, substantial independent secondary-source coverage required by the WP:GNG. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources. Delete: The article appears to be a résumé. Delete: per nom. Insufficient coverage in independent reliable sources to support an article. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Chris Agajanian. Nominated: American motorsports promoter (BLP). Sources are mostly about his possibly more notable father, or about motorsports; there is nothing here that suggests sustained coverage of the subject in his own right in reliable sources, as required for WP:BASIC. The article has been tagged for promo, notability and verifiability since May. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. I'm not sure if the sources are even reliable; only the Los Angeles Times is clearly reliable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Simon Rakoff. Nominated: This article only has one source: Simon Rakoff's own website. The lack of secondary sources makes the article unreliable and has also led to the tone being overly influenced by the promotional nature of Rakoff's website. For instance the line "is widely regarded as one of the quickest and cleverest Canadian stand-up comedians" is egregiously promotional. I haven't thoroughly looked into Simon Rakoff, but given this article's only source is his website, it seems plausible that he might not meet notability requirements. Delete: Plenty of performance listings found in 1980s newspapers but that's about all I can find. No reviews. Just appears to be a working comedian, not notable for our purposes. This from the UK [https://www.huffingtonpost.co.uk/liberty-forrest/post-9949_b_8143688.html] is an interview. Found one from a Windsor Ontario newspaper in 2013, but nothing about critical notice of this person. Delete: The article's only citation is his own website, and a newspaper archive search turns up performance listings from the 1980s but no reviews or profiles. Keep: This is just an old article that was written to old content standards, and then didn't get updated as those standards evolved as he isn't as high-profile as he used to be. But I've been fixing it up with more content and GNG-worthy sourcing, which he certainly does have if you search the archives instead of just casually eyeballing the Googles — Google is really only useful for topics which have gotten their coverage within the past few years at most, and is a complete failure at finding substantive older coverage of a person who's been doing notable things since the 1970s, but ProQuest and newspapers.com tell a very different story. Keep: per WP:HEY. (Dictum: There is a weird gap in the "surface of the Internet" between 1980 and 2006, where a lot of information about entertainers and politicians is difficult to find, so you have to "dive deeper".) Keep: per WP:HEY, thanks Bearian. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Badminton at the 2026 Asian Games – Women's team.

Nominated: I am also nominating the following related articles:
Keep: don't see how this is different than previous seasons such as :Category:Badminton at the 2022 Asian Games. Speedy Keep: tournament starts in two days and per practice we separate each categories into different pages for ease in viewing. Delete: Fails WP:SPORTSEVENT, especially . Only primary sources in references. Speedy Keep.: (no reason given) Keep: no different than Badminton at the 2022 Asian Games – Women's team. Keep: The event proved notability as it has significant international coverage with media outlets from multiple countries reporting on it, including Japan, Malaysia, South Korea, and Australia.Badminton is also a major sport in Asia, and the team event generated long televised coverage across multiple days. Also the more fundamental issue is consistency. Why are we now suddenly singling this event out for some odd reason? Why not past events? We really can't single out only 2026 women's team event for deletion when equivalent team events from the previous Asian Games are already long maintained as standalone articles; going back decades . Keep: There were some reliable sources that support the article. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:00 CarProperty.com. Nominated: Does not meet WP:ORG. The coverage in the article is routine; the founding of the company. I reviewed the sources offered in support of the article six years ago; the Chicago Tribune and NY Times and The Car Connection are interviews with the founder; Inman.com is a press release; Road and Track is very brief(if I'm viewing the whole thing, I'm not sure); HuffPo seems to have republished the Road and Track piece(though the link is dead). I'm amazed it was kept five years ago(though standards were different). Delete: or Draftify - Based on thread above. Additional source evidence and clarification:: I have completed a further search for coverage and located additional print sources and accessible archive links. My ownership and affiliation remain disclosed. The strongest newly located source is the Chicago Tribune article below. I ask that it be considered alongside the Toronto Star and New York Times coverage already discussed, while distinguishing the shorter and less directly applicable sources. Verdict: Undecided.

00:00 Libertex. Nominated: I don't see a pass of WP:NCORP for this company. The sources are limited to: Delete: References are entirely routine in nature release of product, ceo interviews, PR, press-releases, employment notices. Getting their licence suspended would likely fail WP:CORPTRIV. Its fails WP:NCORP, WP:-SIRS, and WP:ORGIND. Its also WP:DEL4, WP:DEL14. Redirect: to Forex Club, the parent company. I agree that the sourcing in the article falls short of NCORP standards. Redirect: to Forex Club per . Any sourced info can be merged editorially from the history. Verdict: to Forex Club. Merged into another page.

00:00 Creation Cinema. Nominated: Non-notable nonfiction book series. Most of the books in it are notable, but these kinds of editorial publisher series are, unlike fiction narrative series, not well covered together as they have little material in common. Delete: Why are we storing a list of book published by specific publisher. Makes no sense at all, at any level. Completely unencyclopedic and also promotional. Could be redirected but what is the benefit to the reader. There is already 49k redirects to be reviewed by NPP. Would a creation cinema, a totally generic name, be a good redirect. I don't think so. Redirect: to Creation Books, where it is mentioned. Verdict: to Creation Books. Merged into another page.

00:00 Doug Turner (TikToker). Nominated: This article appears to be about an individual tied to one significant event, and meets the three criteria of WP:BLP1E: Delete: This is a pretty unambiguous WP:BLP1E. All sources touch on him in the context of the party invitation and that virality, which is addressed verbatim in the first criteria of BLP1E. A search of my own yielded nothing outside of this coverage, and given his age and lack of pursuing virality or fame (part of the whole schtick here), he feels like someone who will otherwise remain a WP:LOWPROFILE individual. Verdict: under G7. Merged into another page.

00:00 Ají caballero. Nominated: I propose merging to Pique sauce. This article has only one source, which barely discusses the ají caballero. In the capacity that it is discussed in the book, it is only mentioned as a common name in Puerto Rico for peppers. My search online for other reliable sources have turned up a lot of results that seem to be clear citogenesis, and not much else. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Chief gaming officer. Nominated: Effectively unsourced since creation, doesn't pass WP:GNG. No qualifying sources found on a WP:BEFORE search but happy to reconsider if further sources are identified. Delete: WP:GNG failure, no set definition of the term. Uses a great deal of WP:OR. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. Borderline original research. Delete: per VRXCES. Sometimes game companies give their people fun titles. That doesn't automatically mean that's a real role within the industry, just that somebody with an existing job got some fun business cards. The sources don't really support the idea that this neologism is widespread or even has a specific meaning. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Kaliachak Chapter 1. Nominated: It Fails WP:NFILM and WP:GNG. Keep: The film has received multiple reviews from independent reliable sources, including Anandabazar PatrikaThe Telegraph which Clearly makes the Article meet WP:NFILMS and WP:GNG. Just because these reviews wasnt there from the article at the time of nomination is not a valid reason for deletion which likely indicates WP:DLC. Keep: as the article now has details of three reliable sources newspaper reviews for a pass of WP:NFILM so that deletion is unnecessary in my opinion, Verdict: Withdrawn. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

20:59 Keith Amemiya. Nominated: Businessman and former political candidate. Amemiya has become a bit more notable since his article was nominated and deleted back in 2020, but not by much. His biggest claims to fame are two runs for office and charging a state task force on sports in Hawaii, neither of which satisfy WP:NPOL. All the articles cited on the page are either routine campaign coverage or only mention Amemiya in passing. Normally I'd support a redirect, but given that 2020 Honolulu mayoral election and 2022 Hawaii gubernatorial election both have a claim to be the target, I don't think a redirect will work here.

Keep: Amemiya does not pass WP:NPOL, but there is enough for WP:GNG. The July 2020 Honolulu Civil Beat profile was part of a series on the leading mayoral candidates and goes in much greater detail than just routine election coverage, as it talks about his background, his twelve years as executive director of the Hawaii High School Athletic Association (HHSAA), his 2009 resignation from the Honolulu Police Commission amid an ethics investigation, political contributions and the condo he bought in a workforce housing project that his employer was involved with. The Hawaii Tribune-Herald published a lengthy column about him in 2015, well before he entered politics, when he was a candidate for University of Hawaii athletic director; it assesses his HHSAA record in detail, including the state tournaments he created and the “Save Our Sports” fundraising campaign. Civil Beat also cites earlier coverage: a 2009 Honolulu Star-Bulletin column regarding his work with the HHSAA and Honolulu Advertiser stories concerning his Police Commission resignation. Coverage continued after the elections (Pacific Business News and the Star-Advertiser in 2021, Civil Beat in 2023). Be mindful that the MidWeek article cited in the article is a paid campaign ad; it should not be counted. If the article is not kept, a redirect to 2020 Honolulu mayoral election (where he made the runoff) would be preferable to deleting. Keep: unlike the vast majority of such candidates, the subject appears to have a life outside of business and running for office, as covered significantly in reliable sources. Keep: per above. Sigcov on him from 2008 (from 2015), prior to his electoral career. Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:49 Elliot Salkow. Nominated: The article lacks sufficient significant coverage in multiple, independent secondary sources. Most available sources focus on Ellies Holdings rather than Salkow himself, while the biographical coverage appears to derive from a single TechCentral article which is written by a personal contributor. Merge: to Ellies Holdings, the company he founded. There is another obit from Moneyweb which looks reasonably reliableHe was also criticized by the press in 2014[<https://www.biznews.com/sa-investing/ellies-chairman-salkow-banks-r25m-profit-selling-shares-as-price-plunges>]. But both pages are rather short and I see no reason to separate them, as coverage of him was mainly because he was the founder. Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances. Verdict: to Ellies Holdings. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

10:12 2026-27 in Hong Kong football. Nominated: Article is unsourced, it has been moved to draft twice and restored without improvement. Delete: no evidence of notability due to lack of sources, really poor article. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Draftify: with compulsory submission through the AFC process. Not worth anything as it stands. Verdict: I see clear consensus against this article continuing to exist in mainspace, and no stated interest in editing it in draftspace. Merged into another page.

THURSDAY 17 SEPTEMBER

20:25 Noah Segsy. Nominated: Non-notable porn star where the only coverage relates to his recent death. Per WP:BDP, as a recently deceased person WP:BLP1E is relevant. His death in the future might make him notable, but the fact that a young person dies mysteriously and a GoFundMe do not raise to the level of notability. Especially for such a recent death. WP:NOTNEWS also applies. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

2026-09-10

16:56 Counter-Terrorism Strike Force administration in the Gaza Strip. Nominated: I propose merging to Counter-Terrorism Strike Force because a standalone page does not appear necessary, and can be sufficiently covered in the main article. A majority of the page, “History”, describes the group rather than the administration and largely overlaps with the main article. The use of a country infobox is an exaggeration of the extent of this “rival government” whose control mostly extends to a sole village. A similar merge exists at Shuja'iyya Popular Defense Forces Administration in the Gaza Strip. –Nice4What Merge: there is no need for a separate article. Furthermore, it should not be categorized as a government or a completely separate area from the Hamas-controlled territories. Merge: per nom. Merge: two very short articles that already need each other for context. Merge: per nomination. Verdict: to Counter-Terrorism Strike Force. Unanimous with no contrary comments following relist. Merged into another page.

THURSDAY 17 SEPTEMBER

20:18 Bikash Bista. Nominated: I think it fails WP:GNG. No significant independent coverages found as per my research. Delete: Not sure how it passed the WP:NPP in the first place and then managed to survive for over 12 years Delete: I would expect the head of a national statistics agency to have greater prominence in news coverage or in the statistics world (such as elected membership in the International Statistical Institute). But I couldn't find anything like that. There are a few publications in Google Scholar (which at least verify his status as director general, unlike our current references) but nothing with any significant citations. Even if we think him prominent enough that he should be notable, that's not the same as having enough sources to form the base of an article. Verdict: Merged into another page.

20:14 Elder Tunnels. Nominated: I propose draftifying because references are absolutely junk. Redirect: to Tunnels & Trolls. The nominator is right about the sourcing. The only verifiable independent source is Casus Belli (2012), which mentions it briefly in a survey about T&T. Everything else is either self-published or not independent: two posts on a personal blog, a blog post by Scott Malthouse (one of the magazine's own staff writers), another blog post, a forum thread, a YouTube video, Flying Buffalo's licensee list, and DriveThruRPG store pages. This does not meet WP:GNG.

Draftifying will not help, as the magazine ceased production in 2021 and more reliable sources are not likely to appear. A sentence about Elder Tunnels sourced to Casus Belli can be included in the Tunnels & Trolls article, with this title redirected to it. Merge: the History section, edited down a little, to a subsection of Tunnels & Trolls#List of Tunnels & Trolls publications alongside the other periodical there. I couldn't find any better sources either, and that only leaves Casus Belli in terms of reception. Verdict: Undecided.

20:08 Princess Purnika of Nepal. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Paras Bir Bikram Shah because the current biography doesn't have enough significant independent coverage to constitute BLP and GNG. A page of her sister was also redirected to their father's page, where they are mentioned. I don't want to say that because her sister's page, Princess Kritika of Nepal was redirected, we should do the same. But this is as a reference to show that both articles share a similar underlying background. Support redirect: to :Paras Bir Bikram Shah - this article is very similar in content to the already-redirceted article on Princess Purnika's sister Princess Kritika, and the same reasons for a redirect apply here too. Redirect: as suggested, and as reasonable in these circumstances. Verdict: to Paras Bir Bikram Shah. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

19:55 Útica. Nominated: Article is currently unsourced, and no sources could be found that are reliable sources that establish notability (only Tripadvisor, Airbnb, Facebook, etc.) - (she/her) Keep: per WP:NPLACE and source establishing legal recognition. Keep: the page has been made two decades ago. Second you can find it on google maps and has a spanish page es:Útica (Cundinamarca) if you want to add sources or more information. Instead of deleting the page why don't you just translate and add the information in. Keep: it is a legally recognized place. Verdict: Merged into another page.

19:51 Samant (Doti). Nominated: Completely unsourced article, could not find any sources besides Wikipedia forks. - (she/her) Delete: Didn't find anything, maybe someone can look deeper into the other names (like Sawant, Saud, etc.). Delete: per nom. Cannot find any coverage. Verdict: Merged into another page.

08:10 Infront. Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP, WP:CORPTRIV, WP:CORPDEPTH, WP:SIRS. Refs are routine business news. Keep: significant in-depth and analytical coverage in reliable, major news media, per references in the article, for instance [https://www.dn.no/bors/infront/britisk-oppkjopsfond-vil-kjope-norsk-borstjeneste-for-15-milliarder-kroner/2-1-930882] Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:34 2026–27 Washington Huskies women's basketball team. Nominated: Duplicate of Draft:2026–27 Washington Huskies women's basketball team. Delete: per nom. The article was created as a draft, submitted, declined, and created as a separate page directly into mainspace. Coverage needed for GNG is absent so far from what I see, but the season starts in autumn 2026, so it is very likely to appear. Verdict: Merged into another page.

19:02 Reza Espili. Nominated: Refs are WP:PRIMARY WP:SPS. No coverage whatsoever. Fails WP:SIGCOV, WP:BIO, WP:V. Potentially notable though if proper search could be done. Possibly draftify. Draftify: as the nominator suggested. The article's sources are almost entirely his own works, including his books and translations, articles on his own website Rouzgar, his poetry in magazines and library catalogue entries. I searched under his name in Persian (), and all I found were bookseller and audiobook listings for his translation of Candide, indicating that it is still in print, not coverage of him. The external links contain a 2007 ISNA item on one of his translations and a 2007 piece in the newspaper Iran. However, there appear to be no significant independent sources. Draft space would give someone who can read Persian time to find sources that could establish WP:GNG or WP:AUTHOR. Draftify: as per above discussion. Verdict:

00:21 Beau Bayh. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Evan Bayh because it was already settled in the previous deletion discussion that the page should be redirected. It was restored for, from what I can tell, no consensus or reason. Keep: It was not “restored”. I made a new page. This is the version that was redirected in November 2025. Since then, there has been enough new coverage to meet WP:GNG, especially this lengthy piece from Politico in April 2026. I also found old coverage on Newspapers.com to strengthen that case. An outdated “redirect” decision is not a valid reason to redirect again. WP:CCC. – Redirect: NOTINHERITED and doesn’t meet NPOL (he’s a candidate for a state secretary of state position). The sources here are mainly local “interest” stories about him and his twin brother doing normal stuff: being born, turning 12, going to college, joining the military. None of that is worthy of Notability. Even if he wins the secretary of state position there needs to be more than routine coverage/news for him to meet NPOL. Redirect: Not enough independent notability at this time. Possibly if he’s actually elected, but until then there’s really not enough here. Keep: Agree with . Bayh is the central subject of three full articles in Indiana Capital Chronicle, Politico, Indianapolis Star. Clearly meets WP:SIGCOV. Redirect: candidates for political office are not automatically notable, although a redirect might be appropriate to the election article. It’s not clear that he will win, but it’s not unprecedented. The 2026 United States elections could be a blue wave, diesel is close to $5.99 per gallon in Indiana, the Right (meaning conservatives) are split three ways in Indiana, he had over $2,000,000 to spend on the general election, and the incumbent was already defeated, so he’s got a non-zero chance to win with a plurality. (I have degrees in political science and law, and am a failed candidate for public office myself.) Redirect: per Bearian and per common outcomes for political candidates. No prejudice if the subject wins in November. — Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Redirect: to 2026 Indiana

Secretary of State election which is his only independent claim to fame. Other coverage is routine in the context of his notable father and not enough to justify a separate article. Keep: as a member of an influential political family, he has received coverage even prior to him announcing his candidacy, and for GNG the only thing that matters is whether the coverage exists, not editors' opinions on why outlets decided to cover him. Additional election related coverage makes him clearly notable. Keep: per Muboshgu, Jishara, CopyleftEverything, and Kelob2678. Subject passes WP:GNG.

Temporary keep: Make the decision after the election. Verdict: This discussion hinges on how we treat coverage of candidates for political office. As this is a matter under active community discussion I cannot give lesser weight to either side, and we are left with no consensus. Merged into another page.

00:21 Ouest 2901 and 2902. Nominated: Locomotives of no apparent notability under WP:GNG. Article has several unsourced passages and may include original research. The sole two sources are to self-published hobbyist sites (see RSN discussion). Nothing else came up in my WP:BEFORE search. Verdict: Merged into another page.

11:02 Emi Lo. Nominated: I've tried to find any sources, but found none. The giving ones are plenty, but 90% of them all are from VA databases or tweets. And the rest is WP:TRIVIALMENTION. Also, for the record, this and this edits' contributors claim to be Emi Lo themselves and removed article's lead image, as well as some more unnamed unregistered editors (like this one). Even if they are Emi Lo, I don't believe we have a policy for such case. So if this article will be kept, we should protect it, either for to keep the photo or, on the contrary, prevent its restoration, depending on future discussion's result. Keep: Clearly meets WP:NACTOR from being the lead role in various notable anime. You can meet the general notability guideline, or one of the subject specific guidelines, you don't have to meet both or the subject specific ones wouldn't have a reason to exist. WP:Notability clearly states this “It meets either the general notability guideline (GNG) below, or the criteria outlined in a subject-specific notability guideline (SNG)” Keep: WP:NACTOR is clearly met here. COI edits may be an issue, but the person themselves are clearly notable and we don’t delete articles because some bad-faith editors targeted them. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

22:05 Kevin McKeown (politician). Nominated: First saw this BLP after it was mentioned at Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Caroline Torosis. Does not meet either WP:NPOL or WP:GNG. (ping me in your reply, or I won’t see it) Keep: per WP:BASIC, WP:NPOL, and WP:HEY (and WP:BEFORE). Delete: per nom. From my own review, I agree with @ regarding the sources that have been provided, and I don’t otherwise see evidence of significant coverage that . If the consensus is to delete, I would also suggest blanking the discussion. If the anonymous comment above truly came from the subject, I can understand why the idea that you don’t meet Wikipedia’s guidelines for notability might be insulting or hurtful, so there’s no need to maintain this discussion for full public view in perpetuity. Redirect: to Santa Monica City Council. Fails GNG per nom and PA Uploader. I looked at the sources and am not convinced they add up to passing GNG. The Newsweek piece only contains a quote and that issue was not even addressed in the coverage of the subject’s retirement from council. The Daily Press coverage is better, but all it says beyond the surprise retirement is that “he had a special focus on renter issues, affordable housing, and environmental sustainability.” The three part series is fun, but for a profile, the series is very short. As to the subject I would recommend reading An article about yourself isn’t necessarily a good thing. Keep.: The sources provide sufficiently substantial, non-routine coverage to meet WP:NBASIC for a local politician. Delete: Most of these are “current events” and don’t take a step back to address the subject. I am looking for summary articles about the subject that describe their career. The closest is this one, and that one is borderline. Note: Google Books finds two academic books by the same author that cite a 1991 speech by the subject; however, I do not think this is enough to pass notability.

? Keep: WP:Basic is met. Maybe leaning more towards WP:SIG-COV. Verdict: In the case of a political bio NPOL is engaged and the keep arguments are not engaging this but there isn't a consensus to delete Merged into another page.

11:10 List of highest-grossing puppet films. Nominated: Fails WP:NLIST. The only source I can find that comes close to listing highest grossing puppet films is Guinness World Records <https://www.guinnessworldrecords.com/world-records/397770-highest-grossing-puppet-movie>. But GWR is not considered reliable for considering notability anymore. Merge: to puppet film. I can't find any source discussing the topic as a whole, so WP:NLIST is not met, but I see no harm in having this table of content at that article. Merge: to puppet film where the list will be actually useful. Verdict: to Puppet film. Merged into another page.

06:15 2026–27 San Diego State Aztecs women's basketball team. Nominated: Duplicate of Draft:2026–27 San Diego State Aztecs women's basketball team. 04:30 Mayor of Benazirabad. Nominated: Reposted soft delete. Still no clear evidence of notability -- none of the sources provide significant coverage. Redirect: to Municipal Corporation Shaheed Benazirabad as an WP:ATD. The target may also not be notable, but we definitely do not need separate articles on a mayor and a city council of a Pakistani city with a 300,000 population. 06:40 Fahmi Ibrahim. Nominated: There is no evidence of this American soccer player meeting the WP:GNG or WP:SPORTBASIC. The few independent sources don't provide any in-depth coverage of the subject. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: For lacking notability and I don't see any of the sources covering him. Delete: I cannot find any SIGCOV of Ibrahim. Verdict: Merged into another page.

06:50 Nico McMillan. Nominated: No evidence of this young footballer meeting WP:GNG or WP:SPORTBASIC. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: no SIGCOV in article, and I was also unable to locate any. Delete: non-notable footballer. GNG is not satisfied. 679 Delete: Fails WP:GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:22 Kamil Ślendar. Nominated: No evidence of this boxer meeting WP:GNG. It seems way too early in his career, especially considering his record. Delete: Fails to meet WP:NBOX and WP:ANYBIO. There's also no evidence that WP:GNG is met, since all the coverage seems to be routine fight coverage. Verdict: Merged into another page.

10:09 St. Joseph's Public School. Nominated: Fails NSCHOOL. The one supplied source is primary. Delete: Additional searches yielded some sources about a student's death in the school but that doesn't constitute significant coverage about the school itself. Besides it....there are some directories and routine reportages, none of which warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: Fails WP:NSCHOOL. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:09 Roger Nakasone. Nominated: I don't see any evidence of this Micronesian footballer meeting WP:GNG or WP:SPORTBASIC. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Redirect to Federated States of Micronesia national under-23 football team#Squad: Where he is mentioned. Redirect: as suggested, and as reasonable in these circumstances. Redirect: to Federated States of Micronesia national under-23 football team#Squad Lacks sufficient standalone notability under WP:GNG or WP:SPORTBASIC, but a redirect preserve his history within the team context. Delete: I am not sure how useful a redirect to the proposed page is, since it in any case contains no biographical data beyond the name itself and his age in 2015. With my BEFORE search I uncovered mentions of his name related to the 2015 tournament but virtually nothing else other than a personal/fan blog, which described him in a single sentence. I believe anybody using this name as a search term will find the Federated States of Micronesia national under-23 football team page in any case. 679 Verdict: Arguments made against the ATD Merged into another page.

09:43 Tristan Hübsch. Nominated: Page on a physics academic at Howard University who appears to fail both WP:NPROF and WP:NAUTHOR. His h-factor of 31 and citations of 4.4K are a bit low, around 250/year recently so no evidence of a quick improvement. No awards of note. He has one book which was reviewed in Physics Today, but the other reviews the page creators has added are either unreliable blogs or on the publishers page, so do not contribute towards NAUTHOR. I asked at WT:PHYSICS#-Tristan Hübsch books, notable or not? but no response, thus no evidence that the wider community considers his books to be notable enough. Page was previously draftified for improvement by ; creator moved it back to main without significant changes that address notability. Weak keep: Recognized national-level academies that cover all of the sciences, engineering, or the humanities generally count towards #C3. National-level academies on specific and specialized fields often do not. Anyone can make up a name of an academy and invite their friends, but achieving recognition for that academy is a different story. I am not at all convinced that the “Serbian Academy of Nonlinear Sciences”, as a non-bluelinked academy with a specialized name, should count. I did find three reviews of his Calabi–Yau manifolds: A bestiary for physicists () but that’s only one book and having reviews in MR and zbl is probably too routine to count towards WP:AUTHOR. But although mathematical physics is a high-citation field, I still think that having ten publications with triple-digit citation counts is enough to make a weak case for WP:PROF#C1. — Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Weak delete: DE has provided above that But it seems the question is whether the subject’s citation count is sufficient enough to warrant notability. And on that question, I think Ldm1954’s comment above is more persuasive, namely that I think that last part is particularly key; barring the citation count (and I’d be willing to change my vote if there are others who can point out his citation count as extraordinary), we are left to look elsewhere, and there doesn’t seem to be much else. -Wiki Delete: I don’t believe the Serbian academy discussed above, which is distinct from the Serbian Academy of Sciences and Arts, is sufficient for WP:PROF#C3, and I don’t think the citation count rises to the level where it would be sufficient in and of itself. There appear to be a some highly cited publications related to Calabi–Yau manifolds, which might just be sufficient to show an impact on the field. But what really decides me is our complete inability to write reliably sourced biographical content that is not a reworked CV. Verdict: Merged into another page.

19:06 Khosla Ka Ghosla 2. Nominated: Fails WP:NFF. Was moved to draft but objected to based on “production completed,” “release date announced” (not true), and “reviewed page.” NFF does not allow for inherent notability, especially for films that wind up in production hell or delayed such as this. The sources are mainly pre-release press and promotional copy. Keep: All sources present in the article are independent and provides non-routine coverage. Also nomination has no sign of WP:BEFORE. Keep: does not fail WP:NFF in any way. As a well sourced article on a finished film with numerous notable actors, it has its place on Wikipedia and would still have its place even if it somehow ended up never getting released. Keep: I'm seeing some decent coverage of the subject, for example, the Statesman article. So I don't think this fails WP:GNG. That WP:NFF doesn't allow inherent notability is beside the point. The article doesn't need inherent notability when it can satisfy notability through significant coverage in reliable secondary sources. The film's delayed release doesn't change that. 'Delete: Its a failure of WP:NFF. Its should be deleted. Verdict: Merged into another page.

13:58 Wangan Doro. Nominated: Fails WP:NFILM. PROD removed, but no significant citations added to support notability. Nothing but database entries found in a BEFORE. Delete: I see no reviews for this film (source 7 in the article is not a RS), so does not pass FILM. I can only find hits on the "Wangan Doro" that seems to be a roadway. Redirect: to Yōichi Higashi per until and unless more reliable sources, like a second review, have been found. Verdict: to Yōichi Higashi, Merged into another page.

15:20 John Kirowan. Nominated: Subject lacks much critical analysis or any significant coverage outside of his appearances in the modern conan the barbarian works (e.g.,). Checked ProQuest, Gnews, Gbooks, and newspaper.com. Support merge with The Dark Man and Others. Redirect: or merge due to lack of GNG (this is just fancrufty plot summary). Perhaps List of Cthulhu Mythos characters would be the best target? --| Merge: to List of Cthulhu Mythos characters. There is basically nothing about him right now, so a merge is needed. Redirect to one of the works would be arbitrary. Verdict: to List of Cthulhu Mythos characters. Merged into another page.

17:59 Thomas & Friends: The Adventure Begins. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Thomas & Friends (franchise)#Thomas & Friends films because most of the article is a plot section, there are only three sources aside from Box Office Mojo, there is a lot of original research in the lead, and the Reception section is only one sentence. For all of the reasons mentioned, I do not believe this article establishes notability. Signed, (-) Merge: Common Sense Media capsule review is a good start and should be preserved in the target. This can be restored when or if more sources are found, one capsule review is not enough to prove this is notable. --| Merge/redirect to Thomas & Friends (franchise)#Thomas & Friends films (with the history preserved under the redirect): per Wikipedia:Deletion policy#Alternatives to deletion. A redirect with the history preserved under the redirect will allow editors to selectively merge any content that can be reliably sourced to the target article. A redirect with the history preserved under the redirect will allow the redirect to be undone if significant coverage in reliable sources is found in the future. Verdict: to Thomas & Friends (franchise)#Thomas & Friends films. Merged into another page.

17:38 Basil Ezeanolue. Nominated: I just declined the A7 as that does not apply IMO (courtesy). While this likely did make use of LLMs, it also isn't a G15 and we could clean it up if sourcing was available, which brings me to the nomination. I'm having trouble finding sufficient sourcing to indicate he meets N:PROF or is notable as a doctor so bringing it here for discussion. Keep: Would likely pass academic notability being the editor of the first journal listed. Seems to have an h-index in the high teens , with almost 600 citations. Probably needs a rewrite though. Delete: If the only case to be made for keeping a puffed-up and likely-LLM BLP is editorship of a sketchy journal then I think we're better off deleting. WP:PROF#C8 asks for "a major well-established academic journal" which we often judge by whether we can support a stand-alone article on the journal; in this case the answer appears to be no. Nothing else in the article nor in his citation record looks like cause for notability. Delete: Citation counts are not high enough and the journal is not notable (which is the usual criterion applied to test whether it is major enough). Verdict: Merged into another page.

17:22 Grand Theft Auto VI: The Album. Nominated: I propose merging to Grand Theft Auto VI because this is clearly WP:TOOSOON I mean, we just started getting teasers for it I think we should just wait til its out in 62 days. Oppose merge: per others. Oppose merge: per others. Merge: per rationale. Oppose merge and strong keep: Per above. [[User:Vitorperrut555|Vitor-Friboquen :]]] Keep: The album's continued to pick up preview coverage over the last few days, and I think it clearly meets GNG based on the sources that are currently in the article. If there are further albums in the future then it might be better to cover them all together in Music of Grand Theft Auto VI, but for now this article is fine. Keep: Existing sources demonstrate enough coverage. Agreed with others that this would eventually be better covered at Music of Grand Theft Auto VI as that will undoubtedly be a notable topic, but for now it seems WP:UNDUE to merge this into the game article. Keep: It received substantial enough coverage when it was announced and one song was even reviewed. Maybe somewhat IARish, but I see no reason to draftify when this will be more notable rather soon. Verdict: I see clear consensus against merging, and only limited support for draftification. Due to the rapid pace sourcing is developing for this topic, feel free to renominate in three months, if still relevant. Merged into another page.

17:16 Lamont Harris Jr.. Nominated: This article is an apparent attempt at advertisement of an otherwise non-notable subject. It fails WP:GNG, WP:NOTADVERT and WP:SIGCOV. The author's edit history is limited to preparation for creating this article, which suggests WP:COI or WP:PAID Delete: Fails WP:BASIC. // Delete: entirely promotional Verdict: Merged into another page.

16:20 Ulmus parvifolia 'DavesStraightUp'. Nominated: Does not seem to meet WP:NSPECIES as a cultivar and does not appear to meet GNG. Basically all of the sources are nurseries and places trying to sell the tree. Can't see any other useful sources from WP:BEFORE Delete: Concur with nom - no or not enough valid refs to support notability. - In solidarity, Verdict: Merged into another page.

16:12 Waqar Zaka. Nominated: Highly promotional page for a Pakistani crypto personality re-created following deletion in 2024. The sources are South Asian promotional fluff, much of it with generic "News Desk" type bylines, based on his own social media claims (). I see nothing here to overcome the previous consensus of "delete" and I'd recommend SALTing the title. Delete: Delete and salt. Sources are obvious PR and NEWSORGINDIA. Previous discussions involved SPI so I will predict the same shows up here. Strong Delete: and salt. Unsourced BLP. WP:TNT. Refs above are absolute PR and fail WP:NEWSORGINDIA. Verdict: and WP:SALT. Merged into another page.

16:10 Nina Levine. Nominated: Does not appear to be a person of note. Only sources are bios from University. Delete: There is nothing to suggest notability. Keep: I've added her books and reviews of the books to the article. 2 single-authored books with 6 and 4 reviews each. 1 edited volume with 3 reviews. Meets WP:N-AUTHOR. Keep: per WP:AUTHOR. I was going to add the books and reviews but Jahaza got there first. Keep: per WP:HEY. Keep: The article has been updated, thanks to . Keep: Masses of reviews pass WP:NAUTHOR quite easily. Excellent work by Jahaza. That could be easily be a 200-300k article, or multiple articles. Verdict: (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

16:08 Vankleek Hill Collegiate Institute. Nominated: I propose draftifying because article is not of high enough quality for main-space. Draftify: Quite an old school, running for almost 140 years. Should be some coverage I'd imagine. Relist: for a greater consensus. It makes zero sense to draftify a 20 years old article. (WP:DRAFTNO) Draftifying this means nothing but deletion through the backdoor. So, this either stays or gets mopped off. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:25 Ravidu Mario Weerakoon. Nominated: Does not meet WP:GNG or WP:NBIO • Delete: The sources don't meet the criteria. The 2018 Daily FT article is an announcement of the launch of Surf2Ship. The page listing him as an author on the Entrepreneur Asia Pacific website is his own contributor profile, and the Ceylon Lodge website is his own business. The three Indian articles from 2026 (WION, DNA, and Daily Excelsior) seem promotional rather than journalistic pieces: the DNA article appears in its "Insights" section, quotes Weerakoon, links to his website, and uses the WION article to say that Indian media "have widely covered" his Ceylon Lodge venture; the Daily Excelsior article was published on September 16, the day before this nomination. See WP:NEWSORGINDIA. No independent significant coverage; it does not meet WP:GNG or WP:NBIO. Delete: The two sources that discuss this somewhat in depth are WION and DNA India, neither of which is reliable enough. The rest are not independent or are about businesses he was associated with. Verdict: Merged into another page.

15:52 Menegroth (band). Nominated: Topic fails notability test, has little to no sources and is scarcely mentioned anywhere. Can't see how this could be notable. Delete: it gets some hits, but not WP:MUSICRS. Delete: Searching can be a challenge because their name is a Tolkein reference, but a search in conjunction with album titles and member names reveals nothing that qualifies as significant coverage, and I can find little more than basic listings at retail and trivia sites. This article only tells us that the members have read some books, which is not notable or encyclopedic. --- (|) Delete: No indication of significance. Verdict: / Merged into another page.

15:41 Shuyuan Chen. Nominated: I propose draftifying because citation style is incompatible with wikipedia values. Delete: poor citation style and no new sources found. This fails WP:V. Verdict: I see valid concerns about verifiability and absence of secondary GNG-worthy sources. Merged into another page.

14:10 Narendra Chawla. Nominated: Per WP:NPOL, local government officials are not presumed notable and must pass WP:GNG. This Indian local politician (he has held office as head of the now-defunct South Delhi Municipal Corporation and as a council member of the corporation) only has WP:ROUTINE coverage based on his runs for office and is not independently notable separate from this. Verdict: Merged into another page.

THURSDAY 17 SEPTEMBER

15:21 Christian Muirhead. Nominated: Refs are routine announcement of job placements, profiles with some dup refs in a WP:BLP. Fails WP:SIGCOV, WP:BIO. Delete: Fails WP:BASIC. Sponsored and promotional coverage only. // Redirect: to WME Group. First, the claim above that this is “sponsored and promotional coverage only” is totally wrong, Deadline, Variety, THR, WWD, LA Times, Billboard are all legitimate. The problem is that all six ran the same story about his promotion. That’s one routine appointment reported six times, not six sources. The best of what’s out there is the THR Next Gen 2011, which give him a proper biography and it’s clearly where the early life section came from. I couldn’t find a second thing like it, the rest is list entries. Redirecting seems better than deleting since WME Group covers this ground already Redirect: to WME Group as an ATD plus by CHEAP. Redirect: as suggested, and as reasonable in these circumstances. Verdict: to WME Group. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

15:14 Eremia Cristea. Nominated: No evidence of notability under WP:GNG or WP:NBIO; article is based on a single primary source document and I don’t see additional coverage that would establish notability. Courtesy ping to , who endorsed the PROD before it was removed by the page creator. Delete: per nom. Not seeing additional coverage and he seems to have had a fairly mundane career. Keep: I think it’s actually the reverse. I think most of the career is probably hidden. He was given an old order of chivalry, the Order of the Crown of Romania, which is really heavyweight gong. In fact he has been given it twice, almost a decade apart, which is unheard of. He has more medals than you can shake a stick at. I don’t think what he has been up to, has been captured in the article, even at this very late date. He has been very busy. But definitely notable. Delete: even if everything is true, this is still a poorly sourced biography. One citation is not significant coverage for notability. We have a years-long backlog of such biographies with one or two sources. If he had won a Nobel Prize, Pulitzer Prize, or the highest military honor, then we could let it slide and move forward, but now's the time to clean up. The proponents waiting to keep this have had plenty of time and notice. Thanks for the ping, . Delete: per 's statement above. Verdict: Merged into another page.

15:09 Anthony and Theodosius. Nominated: As the article itself points out, we have Saint Anthony of Kiev and Theodosius of Kiev. Why do we need this one too? Anything not already in those two articles can be merged there. Keep: They're consistently mentioned together, celebrated on the same feast day, cited together, and depicted together on icons. If we didn't have an article on the saints, we'd likely have one on the feast. Keep: as notable as a pair as shown in the references already in the article and the fact they have a combined saints day, imv Merge: the joint commemoration into Anthony of Kiev and Theodosius of Kiev, then redirect to Kyiv Pechersk Lavra. Keep: This article meets Wikipedia's notability standards, and I believe this short stub has enough context to be kept, and hopefully expanded. Keep: I don't see anything wrong with this. Keep: this is a pretty notable article, and I don't see anything wrong with it. Verdict: Undecided.

14:36 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Doda. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Jammu and Kashmir — Found nothing with SIGCOV in additional searches to warrant standalone notability. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

14:22 Small Improvements. Nominated: Mildly promotional page for a non-notable software company. Sources are limited to the company's own websites, slide decks and videos; brief mentions in database pages listing similar companies; WP:CORPTRIV coverage and sources that don't mention the company. I don't see any evidence of the WP:CORPDEPTH coverage necessary to pass WP:NCORP. Delete: Fails WP:NCORP. // Delete: It was notable for a brief period of time for about a year, then there's just.... no in-depth news anymore. Too many trivial mentions since early 2016 ~ Delete: we are not CrunchBase. This uses Vimeo as a source. They're not even trying anymore to spam us. Delete: It's not an exotic software company, very common and it fails WP:NCORP. Verdict: / Merged into another page.

21:27 Lee "LJ" Fino. Nominated: Does not meet WP:GNG or WP:NMUSIC • Delete: only refers to Fino in passing: mentions of Fino occur in coverage of the J6 choir single, Kari Lake's song, Lara Trump's album and a fundraiser which was postponed. Arizona's Family quotes Fino as to a claim by Kari Lake. TMZ, Tél 7 Jours and Türkiye Today only refer to Fino here and there. The rest consists of his own company website, two press releases, Investors Hangout and YouTube. Chart positions belong to the artists, and association with the Trumps or French Montana wouldn't make him notable (WP:NOTINHERITED). Google searches for "LJ Fino" only yield his social media posts or his company's posts. Does not meet WP:GNG and WP:NMUSIC. Speedy delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources, yet relies on unreliable sources such as Fox News, TMZ, press releases, and Forbes. For a BLP, this is untenable. Verdict: / Merged into another page.

21:28 Bob Lindenmayer. Nominated: Does not meet WP:GNG or WP:NCREATIVE • Delete: Unable to find further coverage beyond what is on the page (sources like IMDb that do not meet WP:SIGCOV) to show WP:GNG. Delete: does not pass notability criteria Delete: for lack of significant coverage. The only decent source is Rotten Tomatoes. Delete: per nom the available sources are primarily database entries and fall short of significant coverage under WP:GNG leaning into WP:PROMO. Verdict: / Merged into another page.

13:50 Vasanth Gangeya. Nominated: Non-notable film editor. Article is entirely AI-generated, and there are no sources. Delete: per nom. Fails WP:BASIC and WP:NCREATIVE. // Delete: everyone should know that we don't source anything to our own articles, and we are not Grokpedia. Delete: Seems to be a man doing his own job. Fails WP:BIO. Verdict: Merged into another page.

13:41 František Kóša. Nominated: Non-notable Slovenian footballer; fails WP:GNG and WP:NSPORT. Sources are all routine match coverage that briefly mentions him or official league websites; no evidence of WP:SIGCOV and none found in my WP:BEFORE search. Keep: I think I found enough . Though it's a nitpick, he's Slovak so that's where people should be looking for sources. Keep: per sources above which (AGF!) appear to show notability. Speedy keep: in light of the found sources, and my apologies for typing Slovenia instead of Slovakia. Verdict: (Withdrawn by nominator) Merged into another page.

13:32 James Inedu-George. Nominated: Refs are landing pages, interviews, profiles, 404's and paid-for PR on a WP:BLP. No indication of significance. Delete: fails GNG -- (•) . Delete: spam, nominations for made up in a day awards, press releases, and paid editing. This is not a serious effort. Verdict: Merged into another page.

13:20 Brian Stollery. Nominated: References are event listings, profiles, small interviews after checking the first 8 refs. Fails WP:BIO, WP:SIGCOV. Delete: went through refs and did a fair bit of extra searching. Exclaim review is one real coverage and the GigCity and Calgary Guardian interviews are something, but everything else is his own site, festival performer bios, booking agency pages, tvguide and tvmaze listings and local event previews. Delete: support for deletion because no reliable media sources were found. Delete: I checked the article's references rather than counting them. The Exclaim! album review is useful independent coverage, but most of the remaining citations are festival or event listings, interviews, programme pages, cast databases, a booking or self-published site, or a SiriusXM announcement. The acting credits verify appearances but are not significant biographical coverage. Taken together, the sources do not show the multiple independent, in-depth sources needed by WP:GNG and WP:BIO. Verdict: Merged into another page.

10:50 CD price fixing. Nominated: Lacks notability or significant coverage as a widespread scandal with lasting effects. The gist of the article is already included in the individual labels' pages. Keep: Coverage over a four year period in three sources used, seems notable. Likely needs expansion, but the event is notable. Keep: There is coverage in Gbooks. It could expanded to 20k easily. I remember it. It just didn't happen in America. Its was the UK as well. The price went up almost overnight. Verdict: Consensus is that the article can be expanded and is not unsalvageable. Merged into another page.

11:29 Alph Lyla. Nominated: I propose merging to Capcom because its notability is not asserted. Only available sources are forums. Keep: Alph Lyla passes WP:NBAND #6 because it had 2 independently notable members, Yoko Shimomura and Yasuaki Fujita. Fujita's article has scant sources but he would appear to pass WP:NMUSICIAN due to his work as the main composer on a number of obviously notable games. Unless you can show that Fujita is non-notable, this article would pass the subject-specific guideline. Merge: semms very week on it's own, with hardly any sources doesn't meet WP:GNG, they were the house band of Capcom, so it makes sense. Keep: per WP:NBAND#6. The band dissolved in the 1990s, so it is unlikely that the coverage is online. I do not think it is appropriate to cover a band in an article on a business entity which effectively acted as its label, especially when we have no strong sourcing that tightly connects the two. Verdict: Merged into another page.

11:31 Konami Kukeiha Club. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Konami because its notability is not asserted. Verdict: to Konami. Merged into another page.

12:08 FRO Thizzle Reviews. Nominated: May not meet notability requirements, haven't tagged it for speedy deletion as I'm not completely sure Delete: Only sourcing I find is an Imdb post reviewing Scary Movie 3... None of the sourcing used is a RS and i don't find any. Lack of notability. Verdict: I will provide a draftspace copy if someone indicates an interest in working on it. Merged into another page.

21:29 Jumpable Plate Carrier. Nominated: Does not meet WP:GNG or WP:NPRODUCT • Delete: The sources do not establish notability. They are mainly Crye's own product pages and manual, retailer listings, and gear blogs that repeat the manufacturer's claims. None provides significant independent coverage. A redirect to Crye Precision would be a suitable WP:NT if the term is useful as a search phrase. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

11:01 Bricks builder. Nominated: I'm not going to disappoint the creator for this, but this very much fails WP:GNG and WP:N-CORP at its best. It's a company, yes, but the only sources are instructions on how to use the app. How is it notable to appear here? — ?/?/? Delete: The two reviews are personal blogs and not reliable so there's no case for notability, and, yes, LLM. Verdict: per WP:G5. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

21:30 Hochulization. Nominated: Does not meet WP:GNG or WP:NEOLOGISM0 • Keep: The article is not dedicated to a neologism. It is dedicated to a current technique bearing social and political significance. Delete: we are not Urban Dictionary. This is lacking any good sources. I don't think The Verge is a reliable source for this topic. Because it's a direct reference to a living person, WP:BLP is implicated; the burden of proof rests with the proponents of the page. The sources proffered are about the law, not the alleged computer program that is the subject of this page. Keep or Merge: The proposal to merge to DEFCAD makes sense. Merge: to DEFCAD per Helpful Raccoon. I do not buy that this is just a term and not a pun on the politician (BLP). Verdict: to DEFCAD. Merged into another page.

15:29 Integrated geography. Nominated: I propose merging to Environmental history, perhaps to section Related disciplines. Article is a stub and written in kind of academic puffery tone, loads of weird IP edits and a history of redirects and Talk topics on the same lack of distinction as an article. It seems nobody is interested in flushing out this article as most content is likely better suited to Evo history or maybe Four_traditions_of_geography, in fact most info here already exists in the former. Keep: Patently independently notable as a domain/field, and curiously this seems to be as explains another vastly underworked and under-expanded corner of the sciences on Wikipedia. An article can be start class waiting on growth. Vast resources for when one of us has the time. Easy keep. — (/) Keep: invalid reason to delete or merge. As long as there are a minimum number of sources (3 or 4), there is no deadline to complete an article. We just need to find some editor who has this as a special interest. Verdict: Merged into another page.

08:19 Sarah Khalifa. Nominated: In recent days, articles about this person appear on different language versions of Wikipedia. I don't see so much notability presumptions. Maybe some Arabist could articulate about this journalist and her recognisability in Egyptian media (or somebody interested in contemporary Egypt). In practice most sources, mention this person as sentenced to death. But being submitted to death penalty is not factor for notability Keep:

She is not just notable because of her death sentence, because 12 others got the same death sentence but those names are not known. She is a television anchor well known in Egypt, specializing on crime reporting, then herself got suspected of crime. Major Dutch news media like NOS Dutch News Media found her notable. Also, a death sentence makes a lot of ordinary people notable, e.g. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Christa_Pike Christa Pike, because most death sentences are very controversial. Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Keep: <https://www.bbc.com/news/articles/c5y7gk9knnlo>. Delete: Can't see the notability here. I had a look at her Arabic article (which did have sources from before 2026), and she seems to only be known in relation to this drug case and a brief marriage (which then fails WP:INVALID-BIO). Seems like a glorified influencer to me. Keep as creator: Not BLP1E at all; she worked for two major Arab-language channels. As for notability, most American weather broadcasters' articles would be deleted then... And they have their narcisso-like stubs on here... Mew Keep: Sources 1-3 are RS, in different countries, I see notability. The crimes are perhaps non-notable, but the articles do mention quite a bit about this person's career. Keep: Prior to this case, she also received coverage in Al-Masry Al-Youm related to her unsuccessful marriage to a notable footballer. Keep: WP:BLP1E is conjunctive: it says an article should generally be avoided only when each of three conditions is met. Condition 2 requires a low-profile individual, and that essay says people who actively seek media attention are not low-profile. Khalifa's public career does not fit that prong: The Guardian, 5 September 2026 calls her a well-known television presenter best known for Mission Impossible, while a pre-case Al-Jaras interview, 30 April 2020 profiles her years presenting programs on ART, Al Sharqiya and Al Mehwar and interviewing celebrities. A Youm7 report, 14 November 2016 also contemporaneously identifies her as an Al Mehwar presenter. , that is pre-case coverage separate from the criminal case, and it supports the narrow point that she did not remain low-profile. These sources need not prove WP:NTV to defeat BLP1E's separate low-profile condition. Since all three BLP1E conditions are not met, it is not a sound basis for deletion. Keep: as general notability met by this, this and this. Since WP:BLP1E issue isn't raised properly by nominator, it should be superseded as the conviction just happened, not too long back. Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:49 List of video games featuring Miis. Nominated: I'm not seeing a single source here that describes "games featuring Miis" as a topic to pass WP:NLIST, and about half of it appears to be unsourced WP:OR. Discussion of Miis overall certainly exists, and that is appropriately covered at the main article on the avatars, but all the sourcing here is reviews of individual games, which does not establish collective notability. Possible selective merge to Mii as an AtD. Keep: Searching for "Mii support" gets many many articles from RS, such as this and this. I suggest a rename to List of video games with Mii support, as the name seems to be throwing things off. Keep: I don't remember creating this page, but apparently I did like 8 years ago. And I see why I did now: Per Talk:List of video games featuring Miis, looks as though I was getting a bit tired of their being multiple articles with the same information. So yeah, keep to retain everything that was merged here. Delete: Zxcvbnm's sources are news articles about specific games and do not prove LISTN. – (c) Delete: Only reliable source I found that discusses Mii games as a set is The A.V. Club: Others are WP:VALNET sources that shouldn't be used to demonstrate notability: . Keep: As stated above, there are many reliable sources noting Miis in individual games, which should count for something. More importantly, this PC Games article discusses not only Miis as such, but also the history of games featuring Miis. "Making Mii: studying the effects of methodological approaches and gaming contexts on avatar customization" mostly discusses Miis and personal avatars globally, but also has some commentary on video games featuring Miis as a group. Together with the mentioned A.V. Club article, I think these fulfill the minimum requirements of WP:LISTN's suggestion of a list topic being discussed as a group or set. The list could still be merged into the Mii article for WP:PAGEDECIDE reasons (and should be, if a consensus should emerge that WP:LISTN is not fulfilled after all, based on WP:PRESERVE), but I think keeping those separate is the better option based on size and readability. Keep: I feel like the analysis of whether the concept of Mii games is notable entirely misses the point. Whether the concept is notable or not, the page's tables are worth keeping and merging onto the Mii page. But doing so would make the combined Mii page extremely long and hard to read, which will inevitably lead to a split discussion about moving the tables to a separate page, which is what we have now. Verdict: Undecided.

03:09 Crank 2. Nominated: At best, WP:TOOSOON. Fails WP:GNG and WP:NMG. | Delete: as a clear case of WP:TOOSOON. The majority of singles never get enough coverage to warrant an article, and while this one very well could, it definitely does not have it yet. Regardless of the outcome of this deletion discussion, though, my bigger concern is with this title taking over the redirect to Crank: High Voltage. That film is nearly 20 years old and referred to as Crank 2 extremely frequently, so if this article is kept, I strongly believe it needs to be moved to Crank 2 (song) for the indefinite future. We could just add a hatnote to Crank: High Voltage in the interim. Strong keep: Not even sure why this article is nominated for deletion. There're more than three reliable citations supporting this song's notability, and the song was already released two days ago. Keep: No longer WP:TOOSOON as the song has been out for two weeks. Handily passes WP:NSINGLE. Keep: as multiple reviews are present in the article. WP:TOOSOON isn't applicable here as the song is released and recieved multiple reviews. Keep: The article is supported by good references, which is reason enough to preserve it. Verdict: (non-admin closure) • Merged into another page.

02:57 AMC Dental College. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Keep: per this this this and this. More than enough to save the page and warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Keep: Sources clearly exist to improve this article. (Also, note that Higher education should have been notified of this AfD "Schools" covers primary and secondary institutions, and this is a college. Also, WP:UNI is on the TalkPage, so is following this article). Delete: Per my comment above, the sources above, being primary news reporting, do not meet GNG. Nothing better has been found. Verdict: Merged into another page.

THURSDAY 17 SEPTEMBER

21:31 Baba Sadiq Abdulai Abu. Nominated: Does not meet WP:NPOL or WP:GNG. • Keep: the subject is the current Ghana's High Commissioner to Nigeria and that makes him qualify for WP:POLITICIAN. If for nothing the article needs to be improved further. Delete: Subject should not even be judged with WP:NPOL in mind because it doesn't qualify at all in that field, but then it fails the criteria critically. Speaking with WP:GNG in mind, subject has no source that satisfy the substantial coverage in multiple independent reliable sources criteria. Delete: as per . He appears to be more of a diplomat than a political figure. Verdict: Merged into another page.

04:39 Tim Kidd. Nominated: Fails WP:NBIO. The OBE is not sufficient to claim notability; the only independent coverage I found was this brief feature in the local newspaper upon the granting of the OBE for his work in Scout leadership. Redirect: to The Scout Association, as an alternative to deleting, and as reasonable in these circumstances. Redirect: to the brief table of Chief Commissioners/Chief Volunteers in the Chief Scout (The Scout Association) article. Redirect: to Chief_Scout (The_Scout_Association)#Deputy chief scouts, otherwise UK Chief Commissioners; later UK Chief Volunteers per above. Not enough independent, reliable coverage for a separate article. Verdict: to Chief Scout (The Scout Association)#Deputy chief scouts, otherwise UK Chief Commissioners; later UK Chief Volunteers. Merged into another page.

00:51 Julia Carrie Wong. Nominated: Does not appear to meet currently meet WP:GNG or WP:NJOURNALIST notability standards. While Wong has a commendable career writing for numerous outlets, nearly all of the sources in this article are articles by Wong, or podcast appearances by her, and the few reliable independent sources are routine business briefs (and/or more about subjects Wong wrote about (e.g. Sophie Zhang()) A WP:BEFORE check of Google News found no significant coverage in reliable sources independent of the subject, thus it appears it is at least too soon for a Wikipedia biography. And while there are around 100 incoming links, spot-checking suggests most are merely reference links to articles Wong wrote in The Guardian or other newspapers. Notability is not inherited by writing for notable publications. Delete: Mainly because the stronger of the two sources is about her being harassed, which is not the best from a BLP standpoint. Another source is basically a review of her work; while this contributes to notability, more than one is necessary, similarly to how we would not have a page on an author who received only two reviews. Keep: I agree with Jishara's opinion. I disagree with Kelob2678's opinion that a BLP issue will result from the two mentioned sources. As long as we report on it neutrally, it should be fine. It could also be balanced out with more positive reporting in the future. It needs work and improvement, but passes WP:BA-SIC. Curation tags are the solution here, not deletion. Keep: while I agree with most of these things, this journalist passes GNG. AfD is not for cleanup. Verdict: Merged into another page.

09:31 Supreme deity. Nominated: Duplicate article. Looking to return to redirect over constant edit warring. Rename: I agree with @ that this is a list instead of it being an article. Rename: to List of supreme deities or something similar. It is a very short article that acted more like a bulletin anyway, and contents I contributed are already transferred to other articles such as Conceptions of God, after Supreme deity's first merge with God. Keep: rename is fine, redict to the list. Merge: per the article being redundant and essentially unsourced. Multiple other much better pages touch on this topic. If a list is intended, then it's better as a category. Personally, I think the recently added masonry part is the only part of this article of quality. This article has been up for years, and I only recently added a bare-bones, low-quality citation for even a definition of what qualifies as a supreme deity. This article seems to mostly be bait for edit warring, built on an incoherent concept that isn't consistently defined in academic literature. Keep: This is indeed a duplicate of Conceptions of God, but a good one. Per WP:DIFFORK, (The article is/was labeled as "List-class" on the talk page). Another reason is that this article contains African and Chinese deities that are absent from the target. Verdict: but rename to List of supreme deities and edit appropriately. There is a consensus below that this page is appropriate and just needs regular editing not deletion. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

04:56 Hul (biblical figure). Nominated: Fails WP:GNG. Minor biblical figure, without WP:SIGCOV. Keep: based past outcomes such as Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Blastus. Noting that this precedent is 16 years old, and possibly outdated, I suggest that we redirect as per , as a reasonable alternative to deletion. Keep: there appears to be a tradition of debate over the identification of the nation represented by this geneological entry, such that it has been referenced by both ancient and modern sources. See, for example, August Dillmann's commentary, where he references several different scholarly views on the question. Redirect to Aram, son of Shem: I do not think this Biblical figure passes WP:NPIO due to the lack of significant coverage from reliable sources. There is coverage, but it's shaky and minimal, and would be better served someplace else, perhaps in List of minor Hebrew Bible figures, A-K. Not all Biblical figures are eligible for a standalone article, nor should they be. (•) Keep: The subject surely does meet WP:GNG. The article cites three different reference works that have an entry dedicated to him, and this reference contains references to additional earlier works that apparently discussed him. It would be good if the article were supported by sources that were a bit more scholarly and/or up-to-date, but there's enough here to show notability. (|) Redirect: to Aram, son of Shem where mentioned or keep. The 1880 Cyclopedia source is not a reliable source in this context; we need more recent scholarship to assess it. While the nature of a reference work is such that I could conjure an example where an 1880 text would actually be fine for establishing notability, in this case, given the many shifts in biblical scholarship since the 1880s, the source's apparent credulity of the text of Genesis itself, as well as the Hul entry's focus on identifying the character with a real-world geographic region, largely based on the similarity of names attested hundreds of years after the writing of the Hebrew Bible, seem like grounds to treat this source and its references to prior scholarship with skepticism. signed, Verdict: Improvements in content and sourcing may have addressed some of the concerns mentioned earlier in this discussion, but not to the point of consensus. Feel free to renominate in three months, if still applicable. Merged into another page.

18:32 Olivia Rodrigo: One Night Only at Warsaw. Nominated: I propose merging with You Seem Pretty Sad for a Girl So in Love because the topic fails WP:GNG. The information contained on the page can easily be condensed and incorporated in the album promotion section. The sources talk about the performance in the context of the album. Keep: there's plenty of dedicated sourcing already present in the article, and the ones I spotchecked mentioned she released a new album, but the coverage was not focused on that aspect. Articles noted the set list featured a mix of music not on the album either, so this wasn't one of those "let's play the whole album live" type situations either. There was not the overlap I expected to see after reading this nomination. Keep: per Serge-cross73. Keep: WP:NEVENT is met as the coverage and sourcing is primarily about this performance and not the album or the tour. Merge: None of the sources support that the concert is actually called "Olivia Rodrigo: One Night Only at Warsaw". The Hollywood Reporter just describes it as an intimate "One-Night Only"

Brooklyn concert and mentions it alongside her Daisy Chain Fields concert and her Unraveled Tour, so it would make more sense to include it on one of those articles or the album article as background information regarding concerts. Keep: The concert should be treated not as an event, but as a creative work. It has received coverage. The last two are even labeled as “reviews”, so it passes the 2+ reviews standard typical for books/films/albums. A merge seems inappropriate as the concert happened two months after the album was released, it was not part of its promotion. The sources only mention that she performed some songs from the new album during the concert, which is not enough to make the concert a subtopic of the album. Verdict: On balance, the Keep arguments strike me as more solidly anchored in P&G, with some of the Delete/Merge ones mainly relying on the fact that we don’t normally keep articles on individual concerts, or some irrelevant dispute about the name of the concert. WP:LASTING can... Merged into another page.

05:47 Hog Island (Petaluma River). Nominated: A insignificant island that fails WP:NGEO. Almost of the sources are merely passing mentions that feature nothing significant or noteworthy of this island in the river. Merge (selective): to Petaluma River Strong keep: Some years ago I created a number of stubs about islands; I did not create this one, but of the ones so expanded, all meet WP:GEONATURAL as named natural features (islands) and all pass WP:GNG with multiple pieces of additional sourcing that meets WP:SIGCOV. Okay, that is the WP:UPPERCASE; onto the articles themselves. These island stubs, in basically every case, have strong potential for expansion. For example: Island No. 2 (currently a GA) started as this; Fox Island (also a GA) looked like this. The same (including GA passes) is true of Fordson Island (original version), Spud Island (original version) and about a dozen others. Perhaps most relevantly, the current FA Powder House Island also began as a stub virtually identical to the ones here nominated. These are not mass-created database stubs; they are individual articles created after a specific evaluation of sourcing. Moreover, they were created some years ago, and Web searches have gotten considerably better in the intervening time, so I would estimate that they are now even easier to expand than they were at the time of their creation. xg Merge: to Petaluma River. OK, the island exists, but what is notable about it? What can be said about it that cannot be said under Petaluma River? Where are the books or newspaper articles that discuss it? What important events are associated with it? Delete: The article says of the island “it is mentioned in a newspaper article from 1914,” and that pretty much is our significant coverage. GNIS and maps are not sufficient for WP:GEOLAND. If someone does find real coverage, ping me. Verdict: to Petaluma River as WP:GEONATURAL appears to describe such a case: “For example, a river island with no information available except name and location should probably be described in an article on the river.” So the policy arguments seem much stronger and could not be... 23:25 Yuzuki Miura. Nominated: Article as of nomination has two primary sources and one independent source. Doing a search on all names returned no independent sources, however a deeper search is needed for Japanese articles. More independent reliable sources with significant coverage on the driver is needed. Fails WP:GNG. Delete: WP:TOOSOON to warrant serious notability, being supported by a car manufacturer is not a warrant for notability on Wikipedia. We should stop handing notability to drivers of lower tier championships like candy. Keep: I searched deeper and found lots of news articles. Delete: I’m not finding the WP:SIGCOV needed to meet the WP:GNG here, either in the article or elsewhere. Of the current sources in the article, #1 and #3 are from his team and are not independent, while #2 has only a quick mention of the subject and as such is not significant. 07:18 Tunde Adelakun. Nominated: No reliable independent sources show that the subject meets Wikipedia's notability guidelines. The article mainly relies on primary sources and social media, which are not enough to establish notability. Delete: Keep; there are several sourcing issues (like noted with primary & user-generated sources) However, there are some reliable sources demonstrating notability. Though the article could use work, it seems to meet GNG. I changed my mind after seeing WP:NEWSORGNIGERIA and WP:SYO. Delete: fails GNG -- (•) . Keep: Being him as the chairman of the Nigeria Diaspora Sports Council (NDSC) could establish notability plus independent reliable sources from are enough to establish notability. Thus pass WP:GNG and WP:SIGCOV Delete: Even aside from the question of notability, this looks AI-generated; cf. WP:AIN#User:Sadam-Shk. Delete: while the BBC Sports is a reliable source, the article is about the team of which he is "assistant coach and head scout". Neither a head scout nor a chairman of a sports association for diaspora clubs are notable per se. The remaining sources are blogs and local news outlets that might be less reliable. Therefore, there is a lack of significant coverage. It might just be too soon in his career for notability. Delete: per , fails NOLLM. ‑‑ Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:11 David Litschel. Nominated: No demonstration of notability per WP:N. The article lacks independent, reliable secondary sources providing real coverage of the subject. Without such sourcing, we have no basis for including this biography in the encyclopedia. The existing references appear to be primary sources or passing mentions at best Keep: per NARTIST 4(d). Here are sources for UMMA and the Toledo Museum of Art [<https://emuseum.toledomuseum.org/objects/74223/self-portrait-1976>]. However, searching the Crocker collection site found nothing. I think three notable museum collections is enough. Verdict: No support for the nomination. Merged into another page.

07:07 Hey! Hey! Tampa Bay! Nominated: No independent

sources of substance here. The only coverage appears to be routine game recaps and promotional material, none of which establishes notability under WP:N. Verdict: If there is need for revdel that should be filed separately, signed, Merged into another page.

06:24 Fluid Truck. Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP, all sources are related to funding or bankruptcy filing, with none being non-routine coverage. ~ Weak Keep: there is a lot of coverage prior to the financial issues in 2024-2026, it's just not incorporated in to the article. Keep: bankruptcy generated good amount of in-depth coverage and analysis. This, this, this are enough to clear the notability bar. There is no concern of promotion as the company is dead already. Delete: While there is coverage in sources, it is all generally about the same thing. There's no substantial coverage about what the company is or what they did. The (possible) AI smapvertisement nature of the creation doesn't help either. Delete: All sources are routine corporate events, raising capital, declaring for bankruptcy, and being acquired by another corporation. The article does not meet WP:CORPDEPTH. Verdict: Undecided.

05:59 Save Our State (Australia). Nominated: The sourcing of this article does not cover enough of the information that is provided. The sourcing is also inadequate as there is only one footnote which is a primary source that is not in-depth, significant coverage is required by the general notability guideline. An editor in the previous deletion discussion claimed that sources exist on this topic, but when I search on Google for this topic, I find very little coverage that would be suitable for use in this article. Keep: I searched in Google Books, and this 2023 academic book covers the group on page 69, 2002 paper about it. I cannot preview the book from 2006 linked in the previous AfD, but see no reason to dismiss it. Also, it should be mentioned in contemporary newspapers. Verdict: Undecided.

05:31 Dee Diggs. Nominated: Single interview then passing mentions. No indication of significance. Fails WP:SIGCOV. Verdict: Merged into another page.

THURSDAY 17 SEPTEMBER

04:21 2026 Kobani prison riot and fire. Nominated: Fails

WP:GNG. There doesn't seem to be much significant coverage from reliable, independent sources to establish that this meets GNG. The ones that do mention it is fairly brief. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

04:21 Dixie Whatley. Nominated: Poorly sourced BLP for 14 years. Fails WP:BIO. The only coverage I could find is of her taking a photo that went viral. Delete: Clearly does not meet WP:NJOURNALIST; even the page for Entertainment Tonight, her 'claim to fame,' is little more than a stub + listicle. (/) Keep: per Cunard. He also expanded the article and verified that she co-hosted two notable programs. Verdict: WP:HEY thanks to Cunard. Merged into another page.

04:00 List of spurious works of fiction. Nominated: Fails WP:N-LIST as no sources discuss the concept of spurious media as a topic, so this is synthesised from a few sources. There's only six entries across all mediums and four of those relate to video games, so the article doesn't quite demonstrate its cross-medium premise. Further, the entries themselves don't meet the scope of "works of fiction": it includes a non-existent episode of a game show. Lost Media Wiki is WP:USERG and shouldn't be relied on here. There's maybe a list one could write about video game urban legends, but List of urban legends and List of creepypastas means notable entries like Polybius have plenty to call home, so deletion is a low-impact outcome here. Delete: This is too brief and too random to be worth keeping in its current state. (Stuart Kelly's The Book of Lost Books (2006) would be one potential source for this article, but it wouldn't be enough on its own.) Keep: added some more examples. Delete: Without reliable sources establishing a clear topic, I don't think memes, urban legends, and in-universe works of fiction are sufficiently cohesive. Merge: to List of hoaxes and List of urban legends (or List of creepypastas) as appropriate:

I believe the individual entries are either notable (and most likely already covered as suggested further up), or they are referenced. It seems to be hard to find secondary sources treating “spurious works of fiction” as a group, although there might be a different phrasing I cannot think of myself, so this likely fails WP:NLIST. This does not mean that content not present elsewhere should not be WP:PRESERVEed, and merging is the obvious way to do that here. Keep: with more references and connection to Literary forgery, Fake memoir, and List of imaginary books. There appears to be a wealth of connections to be made here, with a rich history in the literary world. However, the list as it is right now is confusing and random, focusing more on current internet memes rather than something that is thoughtfully and carefully curated/organized. Perhaps even merging the “list of imaginary books” backwards, into a broader “list of imaginary media”, with sub-categories for books, television, movie, games, etc. I will see if I can find some more sources on the broader category that this list purports to be, where fictional, metafictional, and recursively metafictional works are reimagined by audiences and communities. Delete: The number of examples is not the issue here, the issue is that this combines multiple vaguely similar, but fully distinct, concepts together (rumors, urban legends, outright hoaxes, pieces of fiction) into a single article without any sources that actually cover these disparate items as a single topic. As mentioned several times above, there already exist multiple lists covering the distinct topics being combined here - there are no sources supporting or justifying combining them into a random super list. Delete: as per WP:NLIST, WP:OR: looks like a number of random topics forced together but don't really belong in the same category. Keep: First off, WP:NLIST notes that “Lists that fulfill recognized informational, navigational, or developmental purposes are often kept regardless of any demonstrated notability” This one appears to be actively helpful for informational purposes to people in the wild (see for instance this Reddit thread), so I think we should error on the side of retention here. Second, there do appear to be some sources which discuss the topic as a whole, though groupings are different across articles, and vary in scope. See for instance this published article (this source in particular is really helpful), this Tedium read, this (not in English, but the abstract seems promising), this, this one, and this one. A useful keyword for further source-finding here are the terms “unfiction,” as well as “parafandom,” which may deserve articles in their own right. I think there’s enough valid sources here to keep the list, though I would also be sympathetic to a restructuring of the article to construct a cleaner definition. Merge with List of Hoaxes: I don’t think there’s enough sources and detail to make a standalone article, but the examples already there could easily be moved across. Merge with List of hoaxes: (no reason given) Verdict: Undecided.

03:59 Israel First (political party). Nominated: Fails WP:GNG. While officially registered for the upcoming election, this is a minor, very likely short-lived party that has only received baseline transanctional reporting rather than significant, independent secondary coverage proving lasting encyclopedic notability. Per Wikipedia’s approach to minor electoral vehicles, verifiable details are appropriately covered via the main 2026 Israeli legislative election article rather than maintaining a premature standalone stub. Keep: The SIGCOV is very much out there.. Sole responder only claimed they couldn’t find sources. It happens. The nomination makes strange, crystalballing assumptions by which the sources should be discounted. They shouldn’t. This nomination should be discounted. Keep: involvement of a former MK and Pollard makes it notable even if the party doesn’t win seats. Keep: per above, the party has received coverage on multiple occasions. The article is also rather extensive, not a stub. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:39 Cait Conley. Nominated: I propose redirecting to 2026 United States House of Representatives elections in New York#District 17 because article subject currently fails WP:NPOL. All of the sources are about her political candidacy. Outside of her candidacy she does not appear to meet WP:GNG. As in similar situations, we should redirect for now, and of course recreate if/when she wins office. Keep.: First, Conley is subject of an AP article and a very long CFR interview for her Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency role, and is cited in two dozen articles about 2024 election security. Clearly not WP:BLP1E. Second, the election coverage is substantial: Profiles of Conley & comparisons with competitors in The Nation, NYTimes, CBS. The election (in one of 3 Harris-voting districts represented by a Republican, NYTimes) will make it moreso. Meets WP:NBASIC and thus meets WP:GNG. Keep. Keep.: Full disclosure that I'm the original author of the article here. I agree with the nominator that this article fails WP:NPOL easily and completely understand at first glance why this would be nominated, but as mentioned above, I decided to create it when I found her substantial coverage around 2024 election security and other earlier newspaper hits. I think she clearly exceeds WP:BLP1E and also meets WP:GNG, superseding NPOL. If I were to pull WP:THREE, with only one source from the campaign this year: the AP article that talks about her appointment to the CISA role which is significant coverage and not routine, this extended profile from the NYT when she announced her campaign, and probably this story from NextGov about election security. I can provide more if needed but don't want to ref bomb. If it's decided this should be redirected to the election page instead, I'd recommend that we WP:DRAFTIFY in case she wins her election in November. Redirect: (with a Draftify possible) - candidates for political office are not automatically notable, although a redirect might be appropriate to the election article. Disclosure: I follow her on Instagram. Redirect: per nom. No prejudice against recreation if the subject wins in November. As for the sources, the AP article is fine, the NY Times piece is normal campaign coverage, the CBS article is normal campaign coverage, the Next Gov story about election security is a reprint of a press statement, so if those are the best coverage, I do not see how this coverage is more than routine and the information should be best added to the page about the election. Keep: per CopyleftEverything. The coverage shows that the subject meets

WP:BASIC and WP:NPOL. Redirect to 2026 United States House of Representatives elections in New York#District 17: Political candidates are not inherently notable and there is no clear coverage outside of the congressional campaign. Fails the WP:GNG otherwise and even the article creator notes there is no WP:NPOL pass at this time. Verdict: An additional relist seems unlikely to result in a clearer consensus at this time. signed, Merged into another page.

00:03 Tina Vidal-Duart. Nominated: Promo puff piece on a healthcare exec. It seems like the only source approaching WP:SIGCOV is from the WP:IBTIMES. Other sources like this are basically just interviews. Draft: Reader's Digest is about the best source I can find, although I'm not sure that's a RS in this day and age. Most of the other sources are very PROMO; there could be notability here, but the sourcing doesn't help. Delete: or draftify. Sourcing is promotional and unreliable. Not enough independent coverage to support an article. Delete: The sourcing is not independent or unreliable. No need to keep the promo page in draft, only for some random UPE to move it back. Verdict: Merged into another page.

01:26 Zhang Lifang. Nominated: This subject lacks notability. The sources I can find are generally pretty short. Of the ones included in the article, two don't have significant coverage and one is considered only marginally reliable by the Chinese language Wikipedia. I can't find much else out there in the way of significant coverage, and the Chinese Wikipedia article doesn't either. Keep: per and , in this case, government press in the PRC is sufficiently reliable to support notability. It has to be used with caution, but there is no reason to ignore it, especially for non-political topics. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

01:13 Sanaullah Khan (Punjab cricketer). Nominated: I cannot find any evidence of notability for this subject. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. signed, Merged into another page.

01:57 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Thiruvananthapuram. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Delete: as per nom. This is part of the series of ROTM JNV articles. Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala — Found nothing with SIGCOV in additional searches to warrant standalone notability. 01:54 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Yanam. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Delete: as per nom. The info on the page is less about the school and more the management and the area. Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Puducherry — Additional searches yielded nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. 01:53 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Wayanad. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala — Additional searches yielded some sources about a food poisoning incident, but only those aren't sufficient to sustain a standalone page. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: there has been repeated conversation surrounding how there are stricter standards for school, etc. article Delete: Fails NSCHOOL. Verdict: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala. Merged into another page.

01:53 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Kottayam. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala — Found nothing with SIGCOV in additional searches to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: ROTM JNV, has no standalone notability. Fails WP:NSCHOOL. Delete: Only primary sources provided. Fails NSCHOOL. Verdict: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala. Merged into another page.

21:39 Nifemi Oguntoye. Nominated: AI-generated article on a journalist not shown to have met the WP:GNG. It seems like the most coverage he has received was when a politician told him to shut up in an interview. He's also won some awards, none of which I believe are "well-known and significant" enough to meet WP:N-BIO. Delete: Fails WP:BASIC. // Delete: per WP:TNT - possibly notable topic, but this is a page poorly written by AI. Verdict: Merged into another page.

01:52 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Palakkad. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala — Additional searches yielded two The Hindu pieces but they are about the beginning and ending of a NCC camp at the school premises....nothing in-depth about the school itself. Ping me if useful sources are located. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: the standards of school articles are stricter than they were. Fails WP:NSCHOOL. Verdict: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala. Merged into another page.

01:52 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Thrissur. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala — Found some trivial mentions and two-three liners in additional searches but nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#Kerala - soft close. Merged into another page.

2026-09-09

10:08 Bondage corset. Nominated: This article fails WP:GNG and WP:RELIABILITY. The only source is a bondage store which doesn't actually refer specifically to a "bondage corset", and my searches haven't revealed specific information about the topic and its significance. Delete: searches on Google Books and similar turned up casual uses of the term but nothing coherently about it in a way that would be useful for writing an encyclopedia article. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. This is basically a dictionary definition. Verdict: Merged into another page.

10:24 Ziyad Halab. Nominated: Not a ranking officer. No indication of significance. Fails WP:SIGCOV. Delete: for lack of sig- nificant coverage. I think a person could be notable for the circumstances of their death (contra). I concur that the sources are mostly unreliable. Only the AP News is clearly reliable and with significant coverage. Verdict: Merged into another page.

19:34 Alonso Pérez de León. Nominated: No sources. I can find a brief mention of him in the Texas Historical Society article about his son (who is not even mentioned in the article) but nothing else but genealogy websites, which are unreliable, and a wiki page. Verdict: to Alonso de León. I see some agreement that the merge would alleviate the paucity of sourcing for a standalone article, without any loss of content. Merged into another page.

20:36 The New English. Nominated: Very short-lived band, and over-stated article relying partly on youtube, a non-RS. Delete: I have tried all the usual avenues and simply can't find any evidence that would contribute to meeting WP:MUSICBIO. To the article creator - I recommend publication of the band's history better suited to their discogs page.esonant Keep: The sourcing could be improved, but I don't think deletion is necessary here. Keep: a performance on BBC's Network East and a mention in the Wokingham Times are thin, but they're more than nothing for a 1980s indie band whose coverage would mostly be in offline local press. Weak keep: A Network East appearance suggests some profile, and coverage of a 1980s indie band would mostly be in offline regional press. I accept the cited Wokingham Times and BBC refs don't name the band, so this really needs those offline sources turning up before close. Delete: The sources would not be hidden, they would likely be found at britishnewspaperarchive.com. Being "an artefact" is not a reason for inclusion in Wikipedia - it comes off as "since they are so unknown, they need a Wikipedia page so people can read about them". Verdict: "There might be offline sources" is not enough - you need to actually find and cite them. Merged into another page.

THURSDAY 17 SEPTEMBER

01:33 Eví Siskos. Nominated: Repost of previously deleted and salted material: Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Evi Siskos Delete:

(and salt) – Not seeing any WP:SIGCOV in the links provided above. Doesn't seem to qualify for WP:NACTOR. Cheers, ~~Delete~~: This is in need of some seasoning. Of 's sources above: the first three don't even mention her (just photos), the fourth is an interview, and the fifth is just a passing reference. Following onto the second comment, the Emmy document is a passing mention, and none of the Univision sources are independent (being a TV channel). All of the things mentioned appear to be either an interview or a passing reference. This falls a long way away from passing from WP:GNG or WP:NACTOR. ~~Delete~~: Fails WP:GNG sources are garbage, IMDb, Instagram etc. ~~Delete~~: As likely AI-generated, which is pretty obvious from looking at the article creators comments in the AfD. Verdict: WP:SNOW. Discounting the large language model generated text, nobody else wants to keep the article, and the discussion has got disruptive. Merged into another page.

08:29 Moneypenny Group. Nominated: A previous AFD was challenged at DRV and the outcome was to relist. I am implementing this relist outcome with no opinion. ~~Delete~~: Personally the previous nom should've been a soft delete because the votes by DankJae and Farhanansari1994 were WP:ILIKEIT votes that should've been discounted as irrelevant to the actual merits of the article; the previous WP:GAMENAMEing is the obvious red flag for me, though. The article fails to talk about any actual operations and instead loads it down article with pointless asides about office branch openings and in-house perks that are irrelevant to the layperson (and no, having King Charles cut the ribbon doesn't clinch invincibility for WP:GNG/WP:N purposes), acquisitions, charitable efforts used not to inform but to merely pad the the article, and WP:PEACOCKing because their executives got damehoods and knighthoods and other irrelevant details that should be limited to infobox mentions. • Keep: I did not actually vote in the previous one as claimed above, I expressed no opinion then, Sionk was the one that voted. Although now as I have been claimed to have picked a side, might as well make my point. The company has had significant coverage from the BBC. So surely can meet WP:THREESOURCES? They have sufficient depth (WP:CORP-DEPTH) that is more than one sentence (that's not in an article on another topic) and is not trivial or incidental, therefore meets WP:NCOMP and WP:GNG. They have significant coverage in which no OR is needed to fill in any gaps, and is either the main topic of each source, or for one at least half of an article about the sector generally. There are also biography articles of the founders by Forbes and FT, and Charles ribbon-cutting of course, although yes those specifically should not hold weight under CORP-DEPTH. Happy for the article to trim some promo, it had a bit of it when I first came across it. Delete: I am amused that DankJae has described the three BBC articles as containing "significant coverage", when they are just routine coverage of a company. I am not sure they are familiar with WP:CORPDEPTH or how companies are evaluated under WP:NCORP. Keep: Good finds by DankJae. The sources provide a clear basis for WP:CORPDEPTH and, WP:GNG. Keep: I don't think the BBC coverage moves the needle, but the coverage in The Independent, FT, and to a lesser extent WalesOnline and The Guardian is enough to demonstrate notability. signed, Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-09

04:19 D.A.V. Public School, Thane. Nominated: Since the last AfD we are now much stricter on school notability. The 2 sources are just routine coverage. Fails NSCHOOL. Keep: The school passes WP:GNG, when their investiture ceremony gets reported (HT 2019), when their academic felicitation ceremony gets published (HT 2019), when their pre-primary & primary students take to stage for dance and HT reports it (2020), when they organize inter-school competitions and that gets reported (TOI 2022), when their toppers are quoted (TOI 2019) and get interviewed (FPJ 2024). Reports seem to be spanning many years; and this is excluding any non-online and Marathi local publication sources. $$$$ { / } Redirect: to Thane#Education. There is nothing particularly notable; coverage is just typical promotional or statistical information. Delete as a close second choice. (/) Keep: I think coverage of various ceremonies should contribute to notability. The only additional coverage I was able to find is that some schools lack books and uniforms, and DAV was among those listed. There is a list of newspaper clippings about the school from the 2018-2019 year. Keep: per 's statement. The newspaper clippings are from notable newssppers like The Hindu. Keep: per the sources linked by Kelob2678. The Maharashtra Times piece and the multiple newspaper clippings are good enough to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: Merged into another page.

22:20 Richard Taite (businessman). Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:BIO • Delete: promotional article about a non-notable person wrote by a sloppy paid editor who mischaracterizes non-significant coverage as significant. Delete: per the source analysis provided above. Merge: to Cliffside Malibu - His notability is inherited from Cliffside Malibu, which already has its own article. He has one Los Angeles Business Journal profile, other than that his coverage consists of a promotional-style Newsweek feature, routine business-journal and LA500 items, and passing mentions in celebrity stories, so this should be merged into the Cliffside Malibu article under WP:NOTINHERITED. Delete: paid work for WhiteHatWiki on the subject's behalf, disclosed on talk, written in a sandbox and moved to mainspace the same day. Beyond the four sources analysed above the refs are an LA500 list entry, a review of his own book, and two pieces about other people (Matthew Perry, Jax Taylor) where he is named in passing. One arguably independent profile does not carry a BLP; not a redirect either. Verdict: Merged into another page.

16:46 The Special Purpose. Nominated: Was PROD'd by LastJabberwocky, but the article is ineligible for PROD as it previously went to AFD. Rationale was . I found zero results on Newspapers.com and fewer than 10 Google hits. Not sure if it meets A7, but I definitely see signs of WP:SNOW. Ten Pound Hammer (they/them) • Delete: Ditto-ing my PROD statement. Delete: No WP:SIGCOV to justify inclusion. Delete: Not able to find significant coverage of this - mostly passing mention in sources. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-02

07:20 Wray Serna. Nominated: old article, draft, declined. Moved to mainspace. Fails WP:BIO, WP:SIGCOV. Refs are PR. Delete: All sources are promotional pieces. Delete: She fails WP:BASIC and WP:NCREATIVE because the only source about her is a Q&A on the blog of a retailer that sells her clothing. Her remaining citations are brief brand mentions (Refinery29, Vogue), celebrity-outfit spotting, an unreliable Forbes contributor post, and home-tour features about her former husband, while Recognition and Personal life sections are unsourced. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:55 Montezuma Island. Nominated: Another insignificant island in NorCal. Fails WP:NGEO. Other than bride who was murdered here in 1947, which was covered by local news, nothing noteworthy has happened on this island. Strong keep: Some years ago I created a number of stubs about islands; all of them pass WP:GEONATURAL as named natural features (islands) and all pass WP:GNG with multiple pieces of additional sourcing that meets WP:SIGCOV. All were made after being specifically evaluated as viable candidates for expansion to B-class or GA. Okay, that is the WP:UPPERCASE; onto the articles themselves. These island stubs, in basically every case, have strong potential for expansion. For example: Island No. 2 (currently a GA) started as this; Fox Island (also a GA) looked like this. The same (including GA passes) is true of Fordson Island (original version), Spud Island (original version) and about a dozen others. Perhaps most relevantly, the current FA Powder House Island also began as a stub virtually identical to the ones here nominated. These are not mass-created database stubs; they are individual articles created after a specific evaluation of sourcing. Moreover, they were created some years ago, and Web searches have gotten considerably better in the intervening time, so I would estimate that they are now even easier to expand than they were at the time of their creation. Note that a rather large number of island articles I created have been nominated at the same time, to which the same considerations apply, so I will raise the same issues at each (would recommend a bundled nomination in the future to avoid this issue). Weak keep: It is at least mentioned in sources beyond maps etc., and of course simply having the article isn't harmful in any way. However, most of the sources appear to be just mentions of the place name. This kind of citation overkill should also not be used to show notability, especially when most of the sources are, indeed, just mentions of the place name. Some of the citations should be removed if they do not provide any value beyond a mention of the island. Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:59 ICAC Investigators 1998. Nominated: There are no sources in the article, and I couldn't find any sources online either. I checked the Chinese Wikipedia article to see if it has any sources we could use, but it's also unreferenced. I don't think this meets our notability policy. Redirect to List of TVB series (1998)#Other series (with the history preserved under the redirect): per Wikipedia:Deletion policy#Alternatives to deletion. A redirect with the history preserved under the redirect will allow editors to selectively merge any content that can be reliably sourced to the target article. A redirect with the history preserved under the redirect will allow the redirect to be undone if significant coverage in reliable sources is found in the future. Verdict: to ICAC Investigators. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

15:54 Cecidology (disambiguation). Nominated: WP:ONEOTHER. Delete: per nom. Delete: per nom. WP:ONEOTHER applies here extremely clearly. There's Cecidology and Cecidology (journal). Nothing else. Delete: reasons already stated. Verdict: Merged into another page.

16:03 Aventis Graduate School. Nominated: I'm not convinced this meets WP:NSCHOOL (or WP:NORG in general). There's a lack of independent coverage (no, the two CNA sources in Google News are sponsored content, so they're not independent), and NewspaperSG only gives me two results; I don't have access to the 2012 source, whilst the 2022 source can be found here... It's an in-depth coverage of the organisation, sure, but there's not enough sources for the subject to have its own article. So my opinion is that this article should be deleted. Delete: Fails WP:NORG. The article rests on its own website and bare homepages, with no independent coverage. Verdict: Merged into another page.

20:04 Mary Landers (disambiguation). Nominated: invalid disambig page: only 1.5 relevant intris. Clarification: WP:A-POENTRIES guideline say Support Delete: I proposed this page for deletion; the PROD tag was removed by . Keep: Although it has only 1.5 exact matches, it also has several relevant near-miss see-also links, making it useful as disambiguation. WP:ITSUSEFUL is not a good argument for keeping a content article, but I think it should be valid for disambiguation pages, because the entire purpose of a disambiguation page is to be useful. Verdict: Merged into another page.

19:18 CT Corporation. Nominated: This company does not meet WP:NCORP on its own. The public trade notation is for its parent company Wolters Kluwer. A search for sources did not reveal anything that supports independent notability. I did locate an article about a building it operates, Corporation Trust Center, which has its own issues. At best, merging the two would favorable to two separate articles. The edit history shows multiple attempts by editors with apparent WP:COI to add promotional content. Its creation appears to be an attempt at advertising rather than an organic article written by a neutral party. Merge: or Redirect per nom to Corporation Trust Center. Doesn't meet WP:NCORP, pretty much all of the sources are non-independent or non-significant coverage of the org. As the nominator noted, there is a related parent company, but per WP:NOTINHERITED notability of the parent company doesn't imply notability for the child. The one article which is independent and secondary covers the Corporation Trust Center, not the CT Corporation itself. Merge: to Corporation Trust Center per nom. Was attempting to improve the article first, but it doesn't seem notable to me either. Merge: to Corporation Trust Center as per nom, this topic isn't notable. Verdict: to Corporation Trust Center. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

20:09 William George Owen. Nominated: Am unable to find any sources that show notability, and does not appear to meet WP:N-BIO Keep: per WP:HEY. Keep: D22 has de-stubified it, and there's plenty of contemporary and later coverage of him in references. Keep: As it stands there are several good biographical sources. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

22:58 Ephraim Hatfield (1765-1855). Nominated: This fairly obscure progenitor of the famous Hatfield family does not pass WP:GNG or WP:N-BIO for lack of WP:SIGCOV in independent reliable sources. Instead, this page appears to be an exercise in OR that relies on primary sources, genealogical records and passing mentions in secondary sources. Normally I'd suggest merging to a page on the notable Hatfield family, but the page creator has Draft:Hatfield family in draft so that option is out. As an alternative to deletion I suggest that we draftify this page to allow the page creator to merge relevant details to the family draft page, then later redirect this title when the family page is in mainspace. Verdict: Merged into another page.

09:22 Dhudgus. Nominated: This article has no major realible critics review. Only 1 reviews not enough for established Wikipedia guidelines. It's should be merge or delete. Fail Wikipedia guidelines. Should be merge or delete.— Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Redirect to List of Marathi films of 2008: I think you mean that that the Article must be redirected instead of merge, If that is the case then yes. Looking back a year ago I was not familiar, with the WP:NFILMS policy. So a redirect would be a better option. Also make sure to sign your comments next time on a discussion. Redirect: to List of Marathi films of 2008

— Although this film is not mentioned on that page, it's still the best ATD-R target. So, I will suggest the closer to add this film to that page before/after closing this discussion. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: to List of Marathi films of 2008. Merged into another page.

00:45 Concurrency (computer science). Nominated: I propose merging to Concurrent computing because it's the same concept. Merge: it seems to be a content fork with a less practical focus. Merge: of the two articles sounds reasonable to me (as a former concurrency researcher). The proposal is consistent with how Parallelism (computing) redirects to Parallel computing, although I'd be equally happy with a merge in the other direction too. Merge: per WP:DUP Verdict: to Concurrent computing. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

12:48 2023 U-12 Baseball World Cup Americas Qualifier. Nominated: All cited sources are non-independent. Couldn't find any significant coverage in reliable secondary sources. Tagged for notability by . Delete: non-notable sports for elementary school children. Delete: Fails WP:SPORTSEVENT. Baseball being a global sport doesn't mean an U12 tournament is notable. Nor does "many sport event at junior or youth level have independent pages. " that's WP:OTHERSTUFF. Verdict: Undecided.

22:40 Matula (disambiguation). Nominated: This disambiguation page only consists of the following: Matula, the primary topic, a mention of a "matula" uroscopy flask (which doesn't have an article about it) and a link to another disambiguation page Matula (surname). Thus it is pretty much redundant with Matula (surname). This should be deleted or redirected to Matula (surname). The film and the uroscopy flask can be mentioned there. | Keep: per WP:TWOOTHER. Regarding the primary topic, the surname page was created in 2020, so it is not surprising that it has fewer pageviews since 2015. In 2025, the surname had 689 and the film 435, so I do not see a primary topic here. The dab page should be moved to Matula. Verdict: I see no consensus to do anything, at least until we have an article about the second film of the same name. Feel free to start a move discussion to resolve this outside AfD. Merged into another page.

00:13 2026–27 Wisconsin Badgers women's basketball team.

Nominated: Exact duplicate of Draft:2026–27 Wisconsin Badgers women's basketball team with no marked improvements. As a note, the author has a habit of creating similar season articles with only a single source, then recreating it should the original be draftified and/or declined upon resubmission. Keep: and expand. High level teams like Wisconsin inevitably generate plenty of sources. For example, . It is better to simply improve the existing article than start over. Drafty: for article is new and can be improved from there. Keep: for now and note that the originating author is doing yeoman's work building the framework for 100+ articles that ultimately will include much more detail and many references. The only debatable parts of the article are timing and a minimum number of references to start. I have seen some suggestions on the author's talk page about what might be more acceptable to the admins. Keep: I added a couple sources. Topic is notable but with no citations. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

09:17 Jai Kanhaiyalall Ki. Nominated: This article has no major realible critics review. In basically 2 reviews require for show notability. Thos are looks paid articles and are from non realible major sources. No establish Wikipedia guidelines. It's should be merge or delete. Fails WP:NFILM and WP:GNG.— Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Redirect: to List of Gujarati films of 2026 — Fails in WP:NFILM. I agree with the nominator....neither of the reviews present in the article are from RS nor are they bylined. And my additional searched didn't yield any other reviews or anything else to satisfy any other parameters. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: to List of Gujarati films of 2026. 23:42 James Collins (songwriter). Nominated: Delete this page as this page don't meet WP:GNG or WP:SINGER The article is ugly and only sourced blocked source in my country (Brazil), IMDB and YouTube. Independent, reliable and secondary source is required for this page still existing, per WP:V [[User:Vitorperrut555|VitorFriboquen :]] Weak keep: I checked the RPM collections at the library and archives. The Collins/Pickell Project, with Collins as one of the two performers, charted on RPM's national Adult Contemporary chart with "Since Tomorrow" (#46, 16 March 1998) and "I Wish You Were Here" (#52, 8 February 1999). The inquiry into "Collins Pickell" yields 22 entries in the weekly charts. In terms of fulfillment of WP:MUSICBIO #2, this is indeed positive, but the ranking is low on a 60-position chart and I haven't seen any independent sources for Collins as required by WP:GNG. Other arguments in favor of the nomination (poor article quality, a source blocked in Brazil) are not valid causes for a deletion. If this article remains, it has to be cleaned, as the discography is unsupported and consists of a lot of YouTube links. Delete: poorly sourced; one citation is not enough for a BLP. Ping me if you add more, especially about the charts. Verdict: Undecided.

15:57 Charlotte Bishop. Nominated: A non-notable local government official from Wales. There is no independent, secondary, reliable source WP:SIGCOV in the article, even after the page creator removed a notability tag left by in an edit that did not add any significant coverage. The coverage here is limited to non-independent coverage from her political party). No additional qualifying coverage was found in a WP:BEFORE search, and local government officials do not qualify under WP:NPOL and must pass WP:GNG. Keep: The assertion that this article lacks independent secondary coverage under WP:GNG overlooks the substantive coverage provided by multiple reliable, independent Welsh news outlets. Keep.: The sources cited in the article establish that the subject meets WP:BASIC and WP:NPOL. Delete: doesn't meet WP:NPOL as a local councillor and I can only see routine or local coverage common for election candidates and local councillors, which doesn't sufficiently demonstrate notability. Keep: easily enough different reliable sources to be worthy of an article per Notecardforfree (, contributions) Keep: squeezes by notability with non-routine sources, I'm in agreement with notecard. Delete: I'm coming up a bit short on the sources. Caerphilly Observer might be the best, but it's still really thin on actual coverage about Bishop. Nation Cymrus description of her as a group leader isn't nothing, but it's not much, and I don't see enough to meet GNG between them and the rest of the cited sources. There might be something worth writing about Bishop at Caerphilly County Borough Council, but that article isn't currently written in such a way as to make merging easy. signed, Delete: Clearly not notable, especially at a beyond-local, like international, level. For instance, searching up her name pops up the Bishop of Charlotte (which doesn't have a Wikipedia article either, proof: Bishop of Charlotte) first. Other queries like "Charlotte Bishop politician" quickly wield unrelated results, especially Charlotte politicians with "Bishop" in their name (like Dan Bishop, who actually has an article). Even more specific queries like "Charlotte Bishop from Wales" quickly pops up unrelated results, like someone with that name from the 19th century. (On the first page even!) Delete: At best there are two sources for notability: nation.cymru and Caerphilly Observer. I am assuming their reliability. The coverage is not extremely detailed, and I down weight changes in town council party leadership as significant coverage. More than two sources are wanted, especially when the depth of coverage is lacking. ? Delete: per PacificDepths' source analysis. Verdict: I am setting aside LLM-generated arguments and invocations of NPOL, which does not apply here. Among the remainder of !votes, there is a consensus to delete, even allowing for reasonable disagreement on what constitutes routine coverage and thereby giving full weight to some keeps. Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

23:23 Pierre Gage. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:SINGER. [[User:Vitorperrut555|VitorFriboquen :]] Delete: Unable to find any coverage on this person, let alone WP:SIGCOV. Does not meet WP:GNG from what I can tell. Keep: Good find, that's automatic notability per NMUSIC. Keep: passes GNG. I added some great sources found above by Timd21 to the article. I also found a new one from Le Soleil from 2005 on the BANQ website. I updated the article as well -- (•) . Keep: I think initial concern about the lack of sources have been resolved during the discussion. Multiple independent sources have now been identified, Pass WP:GNG. Keep: Though consensus may have been already established (making this comment unimportant), I do think the problems brought up have been solved in the course of this discussion. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:18 Doll fetishism. Nominated: Merge to Agalmatophilia - not clear to me what makes this a distinct topic. Agalmatophilia article defines it as "a paraphilia involving sexual attraction to a statue, doll, mannequin, or other similar figurative object." Doll fetishism would fall under this umbrella (which even the doll fetishism article admits) Merge: per nominator's rationale. WP:DUP. Verdict: to Agalmatophilia. Merged into another page.

23:18 Dunstan Guba. Nominated: Ghanaian cybersecurity expert (BLP). The sources are a routine bio, a few brief mentions, and a primary source (news coverage of a medal he received). I see no evidence of sustained coverage in reliable secondary sources independent of the subject, as required for WP:BASIC. Keep: I recently contributed to the article, but I have no personal, professional, financial, family, or organisational connection with the subject and have not been paid or asked to edit it. Delete: The article (most likely) fails to meet WP:GNG or WP:BASIC; significant coverage from multiple reliable sources is required to establish notability. I did search for sources on my own and found nothing. It is possible that someone else will find sources (remember WP:NEXIST), but as of now I would advocate for deletion. Keep: The issues raised are not consistent with the policies guiding our operations on wikipedia. The issue raised by the nomination are not factual; stating that the sources are a 'routine bio, a few brief mentions, and a primary source (news coverage of a medal he received)'. Delete: The article subject fails to meet fails to meet WP:GNG. No significant reliable third coverage also exists. And Dunstan Guba is not a similar profile to Albert Antwi-Boasiako, Divine Selase Agbeti or David Asante-Apeau. The scale of rank is very different. Guba's rank within the Ghana police is that of a middle level police officer at best. Delete: I'm not seeing serious third party coverage for this individual. Note that the B&FT On-line article looks a press release (no author and contains a short 'About' section at the bottom), and GBC Ghana Online is a very close paraphrasing of the said article. Delete: per above. Even if we wrongly assume that some articles discussed above are actually legitimate, they still rely on him as an expert, which is not helpful for writing his biography and usually not considered contributory to notability. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:08 Entrepreneurship in the music industry. Nominated: this article appears to be on a notable subject, but I believe it was generated with LLMs, so WP:TNT. the phrasing in it is frequently odd (). Looking at the edit history, the creator frequently made new edits with about a paragraph of content cited to a new source, about 3 or 4 minutes after making a previous edit that did the exact same thing. I see-saw'd between starting this AfD or patrolling this as legitimate. The on their user page says a lot of the right things, but, especially given the 120 odd edits that created this article, I am not confident enough to review this article without getting more eyes on it. Verdict: Merged into another page.

22:16 John Crout. Nominated: Redirect to Battelle Memorial Institute: Only apparent notability is playing a small part in the Xerox story which may not have even been consequential. (|) Redirect: I find a few mentions in books or stories about Battelle but he gets a sentence - not more. Redirect: as nominated, i couldnt find any mentions of him other than his meeting with Chester Carlson and supporting his Xerox initiatiev. And he's already mentioned in the Battelle Memorial Institute Verdict: to Battelle Memorial Institute. Merged into another page.

22:10 Adekunle Ibraheem Israel. Nominated: Does not meet WP:GNG, WP:NBIO or WP:NPOL: coverage is profile and interview pieces in Nigerian outlets of the kind described at WP:NEWSORGNIGERIA. • Delete: A non-notable businessman doing business, we are not LinkedIn (•). Delete: (do not reply to this my comment, especially if you've already been WP:BLUDGEONING, there's no point) There's no chance in hell that this subject passes WP:GNG. We've seen several chairmen of chapters or public agencies and they're mostly doing their job as chairmen, so no, the subject is not notable. Read WP:Notability (people) to understand what it takes to be notable in the Wikipedia sense, not generally. And of course, there's not a chance in hell that he meets the requirement for WP:NPOL either. Delete: an unelected senatorial candidate fails WP:NPOL, and the rest is trade-association appointment notices and profile pieces about his company (WP:BASIC). Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

22:00 Susan Rowe Harrison. Nominated: Does not meet WP:GNG or WP:NARTIST. • Delete: I checked the usual sources, including newspapers.com and EBSCO, and did not find any sources about her. The sources in the article are minimal: gallery listings, mentions (NY Times article), and personal web sites (Cadence Giersbach), and art sales/support web sites (Netvrk). Delete: Unable to find anything that shows WP:SIGCOV to meet WP:GNG. The current sources on the page are primary sources and do not show that she is meeting the standard for a page right now. Delete: for lack of general notability (no awards) and coverage about her. Delete: as there's not enough SIGCOV. Delete: The current sources consists mainly of gallery listings and passing mentions rather than the independent, in depth coverage needed to clear WP:GNG or WP:NARTIST. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:57 Lamont D. Harris Jr.. Nominated: Does not meet WP:GNG or WP:NBIO. No independent significant coverage. • Delete: I can only find social entries like LinkedIn and 3listings of his company on professional sites. Not mentioned in the article (because not worth mentioning?) is a self-published a 34-page ebook. Two of the sentences on this article make claims that are not in the sources: HousingWire doesn't mention him, and the #2 AIME does not list him as an inductee, but in a long list of "also rans." The source about his soccer league is a press release written by him. Delete: maybe someone got confused with the notable Lement Harris, couldn't find enough coverage to meet wp:gng, mostly small trade coverage. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:52 VOdds. Nominated: Does not meet WP:NCORP. No independent significant coverage. • Delete: Unable to find any sources to show WP:SIGCOV. Reads as like an advertisement rather than an encyclopedia article. Delete: Looks like WP:PROMO. Delete: per nom article fails WP:NCORP due to a lack of independent significant coverage. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:37 Face of Nepal. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:ORG. Couldn't find any significant independent coverage. Delete: Fails WP:NORG. // Delete: couldn't find WP:SIGCOV Delete: Those associated with the organisation are not notable as well. Delete: Fails to establish organizational notability under WP:NORG, lacking significant independent coverage to pass WP:GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:36 Abdulla Ziyar. Nominated: Fails WP:SPORTSCRIT and WP:GNG. • Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: Fails in WP:GNG. Delete: not seeing any significant coverage of this individual, which leads me to believe the topic does not meet WP:GNG. 679 Delete: fails WP:GNG. Delete: Subject fails to clear the bar for WP:SPORTSCRIT. A thorough look at the reference list shows it relies almost entirely on tournament databases and local sports write ups rather than the independent in depth coverage required to sustain a standalone database. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:13 Budhanilkantha School. Nominated: There are not enough independent sources WP:SIGCOV to constitute WP:GNG. I also think the organization is solely based on their Notable Alumni section; I want to make it clear that notability is not inherited, WP:NOTINHERIT. Also, it doesn't qualify for WP:ORG. Keep:

Covered in this paper. Some controversiesArticles written by alumnis, but published in mainstream Nepali press that treat the school rather critically. Verdict: Undecided.

13:21 2026 Ahmad Shah Abdali 4-day Tournament. Nominated: I propose redirecting because, No WP:SIGCOV on independent reliable sources other than the WP:ROUTINE coverage; fails WP:GNG for a standalone article.. Delete: a tournament of non-notable teams that clearly fails WP:SPORTSEVENT. Delete: No evidence of notability for the WP:GNG or any other notability guidelines. The sources are either databases or are primary to the event. Redirect: to Ahmad Shah Abdali 4-day Tournament. Verdict: to Ahmad Shah Abdali 4-day Tournament. “Sources will come later” is not enough, you need to find and cite them. Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

00:00 Bradmoor Island. Nominated: Another island in the Sacramento River delta with nothing significant notability wise about this island. Fails WP:NGEO like the 2 other Islands I nominated for deletion: Merge: to Suisun Bay or List of islands of California#Suisun Bay as appropriate. Strong keep: Some years ago I created a number of stubs about islands; all of them pass WP:-GEONATURAL as named natural features (islands) and all pass WP:GNG with multiple pieces of additional sourcing that meets WP:SIGCOV. All were made after being specifically evaluated as viable candidates for expansion to B-class or GA. Okay, that is the WP:UPPERCASE; onto the articles themselves. These island stubs, in basically every case, have strong potential for expansion. For example: Island No. 2 (currently a GA) started as this; Fox Island (also a GA) looked like this. The same (including GA passes) is true of Fordson Island (original version), Spud Island (original version) and about a dozen others. Perhaps most relevantly, the current FA Powder House Island also began as a stub virtually identical to the ones here nominated. These are not mass-created database stubs; they are individual articles created after a specific evaluation of sourcing. Moreover, they were created some years ago, and Web searches have gotten considerably better in the intervening time, so I would estimate that they are now even easier to expand than they were at the time of their creation. Note that a rather large number of island articles I created have been nominated at the same time, to which the same considerations apply, so I will raise the same issues at each (would recommend a bundled nomination in the future to avoid this issue). ×g Delete all: with no prejudice against re-creating once significant coverage is found. JPxG is an accomplished editor whom I respect, but their rationale is wrong. WP:GEONATURAL states plainly (emphasis added). What county an island belongs to and whether it's in a conservation district are all derived from coordinates, which is a statistic (and being part of a legal jurisdiction is inherently un-notable, otherwise every speck of dry earth outside Antarctica would deserve an article). This means we need WP:SIGCOV, and we have none in any of the articles. Keep: Bradmoor Island, which I have destubbed, per WP:GEONATURAL. Sure, there's not a lot out there on it, and perhaps it is not that interesting, but I've done harder destubs than that (if you want some true un-destubbable geography articles to delete, I recommend taking a look at :Category:Antarctica geography stubs). Have not taken a look at the rest yet, will come back once here once I have. –  \lor Verdict: Undecided.

00:00 Virgin TV. Nominated: ;Merge to Virgin Media Verdict: Even with a third relisting, no consensus exists to merge. Merged into another page.

00:00 10th Manipuri Film Awards. Nominated: Performing the second AfD step on behalf of as requested at . I have no opinion on the actual proposal and won't watch this discussion. Delete: e-pao reprints and YouTube clips do not establish notability for the ceremony (WP:GNG). Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 List of Meitei-language films of 2025. Nominated: Performing the second AfD step on behalf of as requested at . I have no opinion on the actual proposal and won't watch this discussion.

Merge: to List of Meitei-language films. Worth having a table there but there aren't enough to need annual articles. Merge: all entries. There is no point having a very truncated list as it will only disappoint the reader who is seeking this information. Not every entry on a list has to be notable providing the topic of the list is notable itself as per WP:NLIST Verdict: to List of Meitei-language films. Size issues can be addressed via editing should they occur. Merged into another page.

00:00 WDC 65C21. Nominated: I propose redirecting these five Western Design Center products because I was unable to find independent WP:SIGCOV for any of them. Of the 9 products listed on the WDC page, 4 seem clearly notable and these 5 seem clearly not notable to me. Redirect: per nom – both citations are the manufacturer's own product page and datasheet, and the articles were created by a representative of the company (WP:PRIMARY, WP:ORGIND). Verdict: to Western Design Center. and other targets as discussed (I'll leave fixing the redirects to interested editors). Merged into another page.

00:00 Hiaiwatha Playfield and Community Center. Nominated: The topic has no significant coverage in independent secondary reliable sources. It is mentioned significantly in documents published by Seattle local government organisations, but these are not independent or secondary. Similarly there is coverage in blogs, but these are not reliable. As such, does not pass WP:GNG. Has sat in NPP backlog for 18 months with no reviewer approving. Keep: I think it is clear the subject is a historic site and the entry needs to be expanded, not deleted. Keep: per WP:HEY. I think coverage from an NGO, "Friends of Seattle's Olmsted Parks", and a book used as sources are enough for this page. While the NGO is a biased source, I do not think they are financially tied to the park, which makes them independent enough. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:00 Zhao Pan. Nominated: Assistant professor in Mechanical engineering with an h-factor of 15 and 1K cites, no major awards. As such while he has made a good start to his career, he has a long way to go before he comes close to a pass of WP:NPROF.

PROD was contested on the basis that he was first author on a paper that received an Ig Nobel prize. While in a year or so there might be sufficient significant coverage of him for a qualification via WP:GNG, currently there is none. The Ig Nobel prize is not one that we recognize as a major award. Fails WP:Sustained, WP:BLP1E and WP:TOOSOON as well as others. Delete: The specific piece of research that won the Ig Nobel might become independently notable for that, and if so we could redirect to it, but as a cause for notability for its author it fails WP:BIO1E and we have no evidence of other WP:PROF notability. Delete: I don't see that Pan meets the criteria for WP:NACADEMIC or WP:GNG. I'm not super keen on using h-index or citations as a marker because of how they vary across (sub-)fields, but otherwise agreed with nominator on reasoning. Maybe in a few years. Delete: doesn't meet WP:NPROF. Delete: Fails WP:NPROF, and fails WP:GNG. His has some independent coverage (Ars Technica, C&EN, CBC, The Conversation) but they concern a single piece of research and the resulting 2026 Ig Nobel Prize, and covers the work rather than him. His other sources are his employer's pages, a university press release, and his own papers. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Geoffrey J. D. Hewings. Nominated: I created this article nearly ten years ago and, in retrospect, I recognize that I was too closely involved with the subject at the time, relied on information given by the subject, hence creating a potential conflict of interest. I am therefore nominating it for independent community review. Much of the biographical content relies on sources affiliated with the subject or organizations with which he has been closely involved, and several claims are not readily verifiable through reliable, independent secondary sources. I believe the limited independent sourcing warrants review of whether the article satisfies Wikipedia's requirements for a standalone biography. Keep: The nominator's desire to rectify past COI editing is admirable but I think he passes WP:PROF as president (#C6) and fellow (#C3) of a notable scholarly organization. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:00 International Workers' Day. Nominated: So, there was a previous discussion on this at Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Labour Day that got quite messy and complex. I believe it was prematurely closed and that no consensus had been reached. , and they suggested that a fresh discussion rather than a reopening of the previous discussion would be better, so as to more productively provoke a consensus. Option 3: International Workers' Day#Origin is written incorrectly and misleadingly. For example "1 May was chosen to be International Workers' Day to commemorate the 1886 Haymarket affair in Chicago" is simply wrong – the date was chosen to support workers rather than this name. "International Workers' Day was formally recognized as an annual event at the International's second congress in 1891." is cited to May Day: A Short History of the International Workers' Holiday, 1886–1986, a book that doesn't mention this term once. This dates to this 2025 edit that improperly removed references to "May Day". A Google Books search suggests the name "International Workers' Day" dates to the 1970s, and it seems clear to me that this name that doesn't need a separate, duplicative article from Labour Day, which is the name of the public holiday observed in most countries (or simply Workers' Day), and the name should reflect that in a single article. Option 4: Though I think the article names should be workshopped a bit as compared to what nominator said. I think each holiday definitely deserves its own page, hence not 2 or 3, and a separate page that treats the idea of a workers' holiday conceptually and links to all the specific instances (in a WP:SUMMARYSTYLE seems like the best-thought organisation for this content. Don't merge Labor Day: I don't care that much about the other nuances. But US Labor Day is a different holiday, not just on a different day but with a rather separate political context. As for Option 4, this seems like a DABCONCEPT sort of article, which I'm generally not very fond of but I suppose it could work. I wouldn't think of it as an "overarching general article" though; I think DABCONCEPT is the right way to think of it. Option 3 then Option 2: I initially proposed #2 as merge proposer, but found the arguments persuasive from people, that the name Labour Day is more succinct. And looking at the views, Labour Day got far more views, despite being wiki-linked only to 15 other language editions in contrast to IWD. In the end, since they are full mergers, I think the final name is a not about content, but the article title, and can be fixed with a page swap. The final content is going to require more effort to fix anyhow. ~ In solidarity ? Option 3 then Option 4: I don't have a ton to add other than going with the Labour Day name is just more notable and encompassing. But International Worker's Day should still have its place. Sorry for missing the initial ping. Option 3 then Option 4: Something needs to be done, we can't keep all these overlapping articles, and this seems like the best proposal. Option 3: seems like the best option for now. Verdict: to Labour Day. There is rough consensus for Option 3. Merged into another page.

00:00 Transculturation. Nominated: ; Merge to (or from?) Cultural homogenization Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Sinsy. Nominated: ; Proposed merge Keep: These two sources barely establish notability of the subject. Adding every notable project done by the faculty to the university page would be undue and, in general, unusual, so I am against a merge, stubs are not bad. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Edifi. Nominated: Does not pass NCORP - only secondary sources identified on a WP:BEFORE search were articles reporting on BBB actions. Two of them are now in article, but they don't have much detail on the company mostly allegations of customer disappointment, and some of the others (e.g., seem dead but are likely to be repetitive as they are BBB-based reporting. There was a lawsuit by a former employee which I don't think counts for much. Delete: Source 2 is fine, but I don't find any others we can use. The Better Business Bureau isn't quite the level of sourcing we need. Delete due to a lack of RS. Delete: Fails WP:NCORP. No sources with in-depth independent coverage of the company. // Delete: This is a company therefore GNG/WP:NCORP requires at least two deep or significant sources with each source containing "Independent Content" showing in-depth information on the company. “Independent content”, in order to count towards establishing notability, must include original and independent opinion, analysis, investigation, and fact checking that are clearly attributable to a source unaffiliated to the subject. I’m unable to identify any references that meet the criteria for establishing notability. Verdict: Merged into another page.

17:06 Inkakai. Nominated: Fails WP:BAND, of the sources, its a mix of blogs, interviews, databases, profiles etc. WP:SOLIDARITY Keep: EARMILK and Obscure Sound provide independent, non-trivial coverage of Inkakai. Blabbermouth also provides substantial historical coverage of the same group under its former name, Fireal. Delete:: No coverage in reliable sources. Meets no element of WP:BAND. Deletion is a slam dunk here. Delete: the most reliable source is Allmusic, and that link doesn’t mention the band. Fails WP:NBAND. It also appears to be AI content. (CC BY-SA 4.0) Verdict: Merged into another page.

08:23 Death literacy. Nominated: Despite a slew of references this term is a non notable neologism. It is not a term in the public parlance. Fails WP:GNG. ??‍?? ??‍?? Delete: per WP:T-NT - potentially notable topic, but this is mostly original content, with a new title. Delete: per WP:NEWLLM. The topic is notable, but this article is AI-generated. Weak keep: The phenomenon seems notable with sources such as 1 covering it but the page is unscientifically return and definitely needs to be rewritten. signed, Keep: The article has been covered by several, independent, reliable sources. These sources have been cited. The topic is notable. Verdict: Undecided.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

17:10 Launceston Leisure and Aquatic Centre. Nominated: Just a run-of-the-mill community swimming centre; neither the article or any references I can find demonstrate its notability beyond its local area. (the ABC sources I can find are also all local). There are no special notability guidelines for sports venues, so that sort of thing isn't in play here. Delete: Doesn't seem to meet WP:GNG just based on what it is, but also only has local coverage, no WP:SIGCOV, therefore a page is not needed at this time. Delete: Fails GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

17:21 Stitches (rapper). Nominated: Fails WP:MUSICBIO, and nothing of significance to suggest this individual meets WP:GNG. Keep: has been reviewed by WP:RSMUSIC / WP:RSPS sources such as Rap Reviews and New York Times, and there's also this in-depth profile from Miami New Times from 2014. In addition, there's a huge amount of coverage available about his arrests in 2017(e.g.and again in 2022 (e.g.). If it were just those latter news stories, I'd say he's a WP:BLP1E, but given that there's also music reviews from noted reliable sources and a profile puts this over the notability line for me. Keep: Before his arrests and charges, he received his own New York Times article in 2014, which that's really good. Having an article or obituary from the NYT is good to help establish notability. Verdict: Trending towards keep, but limited discussion. Merged into another page.

16:57 List of Yu-Gi-Oh! Zexal II episodes. Nominated: I propose merging to List of Yu-Gi-Oh! Zexal episodes because in Japan, Yu-Gi-Oh! Zexal is the "first season" while Zexal II is the "second season". Weak Support:: While Zexal II is considered a subseries of Yu-Gi-Oh! Zexal, they can technically be treated as the same series. While I would've hesitated to support a merger in the past, the splitting out of the seasons into separate articles renders what would've been a major size issue with the list article moot. If the lists are merged, the last 3 season articles for Zexal II will have to be renamed as well. LightandDark2000 ? Support: A merge makes sense as long as the season articles are named clearly and linked appropriately. Verdict: to List of Yu-Gi-Oh! Zexal episodes. Merged into another page.

15:24 Doug Allen (meteorologist). Nominated: Biography that doesn't make any real claim to notability. The person is evidently a competent guy who did a good job and was known and appreciated locally, but all sources are very local and there is no significant coverage of him in them (from what I am able to tell – the two references to wgal.com are not available in my part of the world, but since that is a local news website it wouldn't count towards notability anyway). Delete: Purely a local personality, not meeting our requirements for notability. Had a long career, retired, very routine. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

16:54 Hunterian Professorship. Nominated: This source was the closest I could find to any significant coverage of this title. Every other source I could find were either passing mentions, routine coverage of winners, or primary sources. Clearly doesn't meet WP:GNG. Keep: Basically this is a list of recipients (all of whom are notable) of a notable title. It needs expanding, but I don't see a problem with it. Keep: One way (though by no means the only way) to meet WP:NLIST is to demonstrate there are WP:GNG sources covering the Hunterian Professors as a group and/or Lectures as a set. In my view, the following sources should be sufficient for this purpose: Verdict: Undecided.

2026-09-11

07:01 Princess Marie Luise Charlotte of Hesse-Kassel. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG. Keep: In the 20th and 21st centuries, royalty get notability for the charities they patronize and the scandals they find themselves facing. Before the Great War, royalty actually ran countries: they were the government. Even consorts ran things behind the scenes. The subject is notable because of the power she had. Keep: per Bearian. The previous AfD was hardly a ringing consensus to delete. Merge: to Prince William of Hesse-Kassel her father (as that makes more sense for people tracing ancestries). The only info in the article is genealogical data and the only source is a biographical dictionary. A review of sources in other language wikis reveals various listing in genealogy databases but not additional biographical coverage that I could find. She was neither the daughter nor husband of a sovereign monarch. IMO, there is no indication that she had a role that would implicate the spirit of NPOL as a state leader. Redirect or merge: to her father, WP:NOT a genealogical database; no indication from article that she was in any way politically important or otherwise notable through coverage in sources. Verdict: to Prince William of Hesse-Kassel. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

16:32 Pakistan Flying Disc Federation. Nominated: This group has no significant coverage in independent reliable sources to establish notability. All of the sources in the article are either primary or from the World Federation web site. I could not find any coverage that would support notability. Delete: No independent sourcing in article, no independent reliable sources found. Delete: as it fails WP:SIGCOV. Also, I support 's suggestion. Verdict: Will protect recreation. Merged into another page.

16:27 Orthodontic mini-implants. Nominated: AI generated article, WP:AISIGNS are present, created almost entirely in one diff with a 100% rating on GPTZero. Delete per WP:TNT, WP:NOLLM. (•) Delete: per WP:NOLLM. I suspect sources are not properly cited, either, but the LLM use alone is disqualifying. Delete: per WP:NOLLM, and I do not think it looks like a scientific topic. Verdict: per WP:G7 (blanking, and the below conversation with the author). Seeing the LLM concerns here, I would advise the author to seek help at WP:REFUND if they wish to restore the other article which has also been deleted, however after looking at this in combination... Merged into another page.

16:21 Generative adversarial networks for medical and dental education. Nominated: AI slop article of a topic that probably does not require a standalone page. Several WP:AISIGNS, with 100% on GPTZero, created almost entirely in the first diff. Delete per WP:TNT, WP:NOLLM. (•) Delete: per nominator. This article's subject matter belongs on Generative adversarial networks#Applications, not on a standalone page. I checked said section and it looks like the same editor who created the page under discussion added some unsourced material to the parent page, which I have removed. I have given the user a warning. Delete: Supporting deletion for the reasons outlined by the nominator. The page also reads much more like an essay rather than a balanced article (re: WP:NOTESSAY). Also, agreeing with what @ mentioned concerning this material being beter suited for the already existant Generative adversarial networks#Applications. Delete: Article was LLM at the start; fix-up edits made by the author were also LLM; there is nothing here to be salvaged, and the topic can be adequately handled at Generative adversarial networks. Verdict: Merged into another page.

13:09 Savarkar (book). Nominated: The page subject lacks notability, as shown by weak citations and coverage. This is a page about a two-volume book that was published in 2019-2021. The book is covered under the page of the author Vikram Sampath, and that coverage is adequate. That book made some small impact at the time, but was not especially important or revolutionary. Most of the citations on this page are from the publisher of the book or reviews from its publication years. There have been numerous books published since then on the same topic, none of which have Wikipedia pages. A smaller problem is that the page reads like an advertisement for the book and does not mention the plagiarism allegations and other criticisms of the book. Still, the main reason for proposing deletion if lack of notability and adequate coverage elsewhere. Delete: From a cursory look at the sources, the subject doesn't appear to be notable by itself and coverage seems to be tied too much with Sampath. All important information given in this article is already covered in our article on Sampath. Keep: neither the nomination nor the above delete !vote explain which policies required deletion, the rationale provided is akin to WP:IDONTLIKEIT and supports a merge rather than deletion. In any case, there is enough independent coverage of the subject (i.e. the book) in both media and academic sources — thanks partly to the plagiarism accusations and defamation suit — and not enough overlap between the two subjects (the book and the author) beyond the ordinary expected overlap in such a case. If anything, given Sampath's own notability and literary output, more content should move from his article to the book's, rather than the other way round. Keep: per WP:HEY, the nominator has added enough reviews to the article, so the notability is clearly established. Even if the book was widely criticized, this is not a reason to delete. Speedy keep: Looks like a well-sourced article about an important and controversial two part biography of a notable individual. Also meets WP:HEY as pointed out by Kelob2678. Keep: Apart from the points mentioned by . The citations are not weak contrary to what the nominator has claimed. Passes WP:GNG and WP:SIGCOV. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

2026-09-11

15:37 Onke Mazibuko. Nominated: Non-notable author, or should I say not-yet-notable. His book The Second Verse seems to have multiple independent full-length reviews, and thus would pass WP:NBOOK, but I didn't find any independent reviews of his book Canary or his forthcoming book The Kings of Goat Hill. Should multiple reviews emerge for either of these books, he will become notable under WP:NAUTHOR in the future. However, he doesn't pass it now, and the coverage of him doesn't support a WP:GNG pass as it's a mix of non-independent sources like official bios, his own writing and Q&A interviews. weak keep: Some coverage here , which appears to be a RS. The sources above as well help. Should be enough to show AUTHOR. Verdict: Merged into another page.

08:26 Lotkhow. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Upper Chitral District because this is a long-standing redirect and TAs keep restoring this unsourced article. Delete: the subject is not mentioned at Upper Chitral District, so that alone would make it an less-viable alternative to deletion for an unsourced article. Based on the history this was a former title for , which was blanked and redirected to Upper Chitral District in 2024 (with completely different content than this article)... but more pertinently, only spent two weeks at this title in September 2023 because it had been moved there by a sock. This should never have even been a redirect for that reason alone, especially if all it is doing now is encouraging TAs to create articles (and unsourced ones at that) in circumvention of TAs not normally being able to create mainspace pages. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

15:50 Aster (cryptocurrency exchange). Nominated: Fails notability check. Of the given sources, only CNYes and RBC.ru are mainstream non-cryptocurrency websites. Googling doesn't bring up much. Perhaps, someone could check traditional Chinese sources? Delete: on the two non-crypto outlets the nominator asks about: the RBC link sits in its РБК Крипто vertical and asks which exchange is the next Hyperliquid, and the cnyes item compares trading volumes across perpetual DEXs. Both are market round-ups rather than coverage of this company. The rest is Chinese-language crypto media, a PitchBook entry, two YouTube interviews and 21Shares, an issuer writing about its own sector (WP:NCORP, WP:ORGIND). Delete: another pump-and-dump crypto scheme. Coverage is in crypto-focused publications we don't trust. — Preceding unsigned comment added by Delete: for lack of significant coverage. RBC.ru is not a reliable source, in my opinion. Verdict: Merged into another page.

15:43 Joanna Wietrzyk. Nominated: This is a textbook case of WP:BIO1E. Keep: Textbook case of assuming someone in the news is not otherwise notable. Given she's a world record holder, there's a lot of pre-diarrhea coverage of her. (textbook case of WP:BEFORE) Combine that with the plethora of media coverage about diarrhea incident and this article is a textbook case of meeting notability guidelines, and BLP1E doesn't apply for people notable for many things. (|) Keep: per above. Even if the reason this article was created boils down to "lol poop", there is at least some earlier coverage (as opposed to just recent coverage), suggesting that the subject is notable to some extent. Keep: No-notability exists outside of the poop race (what a sentence that is). Keep: per above, BIO1E does not apply here considering she also has significant coverage for her races in Hong Kong, Arizona, and Poland. Keep: While the pooping event might be her biggest claim to notability, it's not her only one. (•) Keep: per Acebulf and the additional coverage found showing previous notability. Although, I do think the recent event coverage could be condensed on the page, that is just my opinion and does not take away from her notability. Verdict: Erpert Merged into another page.

2026-09-02

13:57 T20 Mumbai League. Nominated: Regional tournament with no WP:SIGCOV on independent reliable sources other than the WP:ROUTINE coverage, fails WP:GNG for an article. Keep: I think these sources are good enough. Keep: Multiple news sources provide detailed coverage of the league's founding, teams, ownership structure, financials (e.g. [<https://timesofindia.indiatimes.com/sports/cricket/news/t20-mumbai-league-abhishek-nayar-to-join-as-mentor-of-mumbai-south-central-maratha-royals/articleshow/120645216.cms>, and legal disputes, not to mention the COVID and IPL-driven season cancellations (the league didn't run during 2020–2024), attempted relaunches, and schedule changes. There's non-routine coverage in Cricinfo, as well as by both papers listed by WP as traditional Indian newspapers of record. That's very clearly SIGCOV. Some sections are insufficiently sourced, and my initial review did identify a handful of errors, e.g. while they're both South [Bombay men's teams, SoBo Mumbai Falcons (2025–) should be considered a separate team to the SoBo SuperSonics (2018–2019), but what I've seen so far is generally pretty good, certainly easily fixable in the course of normal editing: the article's clearly not TNT-worthy. Verdict: Even disregarding the multiple !votes from the creator here, there's no consensus Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

15:39 Adoption of the euro in Portugal. Nominated: Another article in a series of 'Adoption of the euro in ...' by the same author (now blocked). All articles use the same template, which looks to be generated by an AI (see sentences like "This included the modification of financial software, recalibration of ATMs, and widespread distribution of new euro banknotes and coins."). Verdict: Merged into another page.

17:49 Vistula Land. Nominated: I propose merging to Congress Poland because they are essentially covering the same thing. Even if you can argue they're technically separate topics the content overlap is nearly total. Merge: per nom, per WP:OVERLAP. At the same time, I do not really see how the subjects differ substantially, Vistula Land is just a name applied to Congress Poland by the Russian bureaucracy following the second uprising; and the presence of this article is no more meaningful than a separate article on the Kingdom of Poland as it was officially known earlier. Merge: WP:OVERLAP and Wikipedia:COMMONNAME; Congress Poland and the Vistula Land are two names of one entity, regardless of the degree of autonomy. It can be clarified further in this article. Merge: per WP:OVERLAP. Merge: per nom due to the overlap. It should be said however that other language wikipeias have separate articles for the territory and the entity's lands. Merge: As someone already pointed out: Congress Poland and the Vistula Land are two names of one entity, regardless of the degree of autonomy. Verdict: to Congress Poland. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

15:33 Twimight. Nominated: Twitter client with a "disaster mode" feature. The feature could have some notability, but the client itself likely not. Delete: the two conference papers are by Hossmann, Carta and Legendre, who are the app's own developers, so they are not independent of it (WP:ORGIND). The other links are the SCAMPI project page and a Google Play listing, and I can find nothing independent covering the client itself (WP:NSOFT). Verdict: Undecided.

14:29 Xcel-Arc. Nominated: Company does not have coverage to satisfy WP:NCORP. Delete: Seems non-notable. Delete: fails WP:SIGCOV. Delete: Sourced to retailer listings and a blog post that copies the company's own marketing copy. Delete: Fails to establish WP:NCORP, lacking WP:SIGCOV to satisfy WP:GNG Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:13 Kirati Khambu Rai Sanskritik Sansthan. Nominated: An active local organization but found no SIGCOV in RS, and fails WP:NORG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:10 Terrells Creek (Haw River tributary, right bank). Nominated: Much like the left bank tributary of the same name, I'm not seeing evidence of passing WP:NATFEAT, which states that features like rivers are often notable. The article consists of that (including sourcing to GNIS, which while reliable is not an indication of being a notable natural feature), and I'm not finding much in a search. Delete: I wasn't able to find any information beyond statistics. (it/she) Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:08 Mingle Media TV Network. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG. All of the references are either reviews, PR launderers, or don't mention the company at all. Additionally, it seems that the website itself leads to a gambling company. Delete: the only citation that resolves is an award-nomination announcement on the now-defunct Indie Intertube; the remaining links are a personal blog and the company's own site (WP:NCORP). Verdict: Undecided.

14:07 Hamid-Reza Ashtianipour. Nominated: Fails WP:NFILM-MAKER. Found some Iranian news on a quick Google search, but not sure about the reliability of the local sources. Would be happy if someone points out some SIGCOV with RS. Or else, it fails GNG either. Delete: filmography databases and profile pages are not the significant coverage WP:BASIC asks for. Verdict: Undecided.

13:43 McMurtrey Aquatic Center. Nominated: Just a run-of-the-mill community swimming centre; neither the article or any references I can find demonstrate its notability beyond its local area. A solitary Guinness Worlds Record entry doesn't cut it. There are no special notability guidelines for sports venues, so that sort of thing isn't in play here. The article was created and largely contributed to by , who has a conflict of interest in this matter per their username and user page edits. Delete: definately WP:PROMO, the article seems fishy (no pun intended) with the aquarium staff likely being the editors of the article. Verdict: Merged into another page.

13:21 Helical extrusion. Nominated: Wholly unsourced article, that does not prove it's notability. I would've gone for CSD, but I do have a little faith in this article, so I propose it be draftified. | was here. ? Delete: unless someone does a WP:HEY rescue. The topic might make a decent article, but this is not it. I see no reason to draftify as the page creator has not edited since 2009. The logical place for this is a redirect and merge to Extrusion if someone adds sources. Otherwise it is TNT. Delete: per . I know there is no statute of limitations on sourcing an article, but this and similar articles are bait for those who want to use this as an excuse to wreck us. Of course a redirect is acceptable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

13:16 National Urban League v. Trump. Nominated: I propose merging because this specific lawsuit doesn't seem to have caused any coverage after its initial filing. Redirect: per the nominator's rationale. Verdict: to National Urban League#Lawsuit with the Trump Administration. Content can be merged from history. Merged into another page.

12:31 Kanyana Hole. Nominated: Fake dead source. No place as such exists. Blatant hoax. Verdict: Merged into another page.

12:29 Kalnad Hole. Nominated: No source. Seems like a blatant hoax article. Verdict: Merged into another page.

12:24 Hartmuth Behrens. Nominated: Delete per WP:GNG Redirect: per :WP:ATD-R to :East Germany at the 1980 Summer Olympics#Fencing, unless significant sources can be located. I've done the usual online searches and checked the online DDR press at DDR-Presse via ZEFYS and could only find brief match reports. Redirect: to East Germany at the 1980 Summer Olympics#Fencing, where this person participated. Verdict: to East Germany at the 1980 Summer Olympics#Fencing. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

11:47 Klaudio Krasniqi. Nominated: Fails WP:NSPORT - no significant coverage in reliable independent secondary sources Draftify: not currently notable, but might be in future. Draftify: no SIGCOV, but seems plausible that some might exist in future (active player at a League Two club). Verdict: (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

11:41 Tom Dean (footballer). Nominated: Fails WP:SPORT. No significant coverage in reliable independent secondary sources - one brief BBC article about his loan signing, otherwise mainly club reporting (primary) Draftify: not currently notable, but might be in future. Draftify: As WP:ATD. Verdict: (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

11:36 Vernon Masara. Nominated: Fails WP:NSPORT. No significant coverage in reliable independent secondary sources. Only references are club websites (primary) Draftify: not currently notable, but might be in future. Draftify: As WP:ATD. Verdict: I am willing to provide a draft copy upon request, but not without . Merged into another page.

11:09 Townhouse. Nominated: Short article with few references. Is this different enough from a Terraced house to warrant its own article? Seems like the word is used in several different ways different places. Maybe replace with a disambiguation page? Keep: Townhouse is a distinct term, not just a secondary name for Terraced house. It's the standard term across much of North America for connected single-family homes. It also covers meanings that terraced housing doesn't, including the British town/city residence, which already has its own article, Townhouse (Great Britain). That article points here for the North American usage, and notes that even in Britain the two terms can carry different connotations. Buildings and architecture of New Orleans also links here for the city's "American townhouse" style. The varied usage the nomination mentions is a reason to keep this as a broad-concept article rather than a disambiguation page. Yes, the article is short and needs expansion, but that's more of a cleanup issue. Separately, updating the lead in the Terraced house article could help clarify the difference. (Side note: As an American, I had to research "terraced house" before replying.) Verdict: Undecided.

19:57 Anna Sparks. Nominated: Subject fails to meet the WP:GNG because of a lack of WP:SIGCOV. The best I could find was https://tucson.com/sports/local/for-anna-sparks-el-tour-is-about-the-camaraderie-not-where-she-finishes/article_01cee-da9-f958-53c9-a28d-94346962880f.html, but it was written by a special contributor and as such may lack independence. Delete: Lacks independent WP:SIGCOV. Agree with nom's rationale. Verdict: Merged into another page.

20:07 Oriol Cortes. Nominated: I was unable to find any of the needed WP:SIGCOV to meet the WP:GNG for this subject, who only played in lower level leagues without any notable stats. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: does not meet WP:GNG. 679 Delete: Subject fails WP:FOOTY as his career spans only lower tier divisions and college soccer. Verdict: Merged into another page.

12:45 Champz. Nominated: Tried to quick delete and add undisclosed paid tag, both were removed. The subject of this article does not appear to pass GNG. No valid secondary sourcing, no WP:RS, and WP:NEWSORGNIGERIA. Sources are promotional, some appear AI-generated, and some are interviews. They also all talk about him being the son of a notable artist, but as we know, notability is not WP:INHERITED. This also appears to be WP:SYO from the new contributor who wrote this article. Courtesy ping to who seemed to believe this article passes GNG and who didn't like my patrolling of this page. Also worth noting that the same contributor who wrote this article also recently wrote Khamari, which I have also nominated for deletion for essentially the same sourcing issues (•) . Delete: This is a clear case of WP:TOOSOON. The subject is still an up-and-coming artist who is primarily known for being the son of Wizkid. His music career has not picked up yet, and the two EPs he has released are not notable in my opinion. Champions Arrival is the only EP that was critically reviewed, but the two sources that reviewed it are not notable. Weak Keep: I think this is on the borderline, but just on the notable side. The problem isn't notability, but de-promo-ing the article, which would be far better off if some of the fluff, in the sourcing were cut out. I'll also note that there's no such thing in WP:NMUSIC as automatically notable. The bullet points of WP:MUSICBIO are indicators that the subject not . Delete: The subject passes the SNG, but taking into account that he is 15 years old, COI concerns, and promotional coverage in Nigerian media, deletion is preferable. The article can also be deleted per WP:G5, the block log of the creator says . Gladysgab was globally locked in 2024. Verdict: Undecided.

12:46 Khamari. Nominated: The subject of this article does not appear to pass GNG. Although there are numerous references, none of them are valid secondary sources WP:RS. It's either blogs or interviews. I also noticed that at the bottom of source #15 from "blacksoundwave" it says; "Let me know if you want this adapted into social copy, a newsletter snippet, or embedded with media/links for publishing". Therefore, it appears that this is a conceited paid effort to get this person a wikipedia page so they can self promote. The contributor in question who wrote this page is new to Wikipedia but seems very well-versed in its policies and procedures. They also did not appreciate that I put a notability tag on this article. But after reading all the sources and the context, here I am. I would like the community to decide. Also worth noting that the same contributor who wrote this article also recently wrote Champz, which I have also nominated for deletion for essentially the same sourcing issues. Thank you -- (•) . Keep: there is non-trivial coverage from WP:RSMUSIC sources cited in the article such as Billboard (magazine), Clash (magazine) and Allmusic (staff bio). Passes WP:MUSICBIO#1 and also WP:BASIC. esonant Verdict: I should've checked the sources better. (•) Merged into another page.

09:54 Kane Taylor. Nominated: Fails WP:NSPORT. One brief BBC report about Taylor signing for Rochdale, but otherwise article is based almost solely on club content and database entries Draftify: not currently notable, but might be in future. Delete: Considering that this boy plays in small clubs at this moment, he is unlikely to receive SIGCOV in the future, so I don't think a draft will work. Delete: Lacks significant independent coverage relying on routine database entries and club sources rather than meeting WP:GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

09:50 George Lock. Nominated: Fails WP:NSPORT criteria - insufficient significant coverage in published reliable independent secondary sources with reputations for accuracy and fact-checking (so excludes local football sites, club reports, databases, routine listings, stats, etc) Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: all coverage is either not significant, not independent or not reliable, hence does not meet GNG. He has not played above step 4 so also seems unlikely that will change. Delete: this fails GNG and most likely NOLLM as well: . ‑‑ Verdict: Merged into another page.

09:45 Edward Hatt. Nominated: Fails WP:NSPORT. Lacks sufficient significant coverage in published reliable independent secondary sources with reputations for accuracy and fact-checking. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: Fails in WP:GNG. Delete: this fails GNG and most likely NOLLM as well: . ‑‑ Delete: Fails WP:GNG, as local non league appearances do not provide the coverage required to establish notability. Verdict: Merged into another page.

09:25 Eiravato. Nominated: Non-notable small (7- to 10-person?) startup company that doesn't meet WP:NORG or WP:GNG. In terms of the general coverage, most of what is offered (and seemingly available based on my own WP:BEFORE) is the type of passing mentions in general tech-industry/start-up outlets about funding/incubation/etc. Several of which are in the article. EG: "of 220 companies that applied for this start-up program, 15 were selected” (chronicle.lu and siliconluxembourg.lu), “several Irish start-ups help with waste management - here’s 2” (Irish Examiner), “10 small startups got a grant of €50,000 at a local event - Eirvato was one of them” (luxinnovation.lu), etc. Of the coverage which does deal with the company as a primary topic, it is relatively ROTM business coverage (on funding/etc) similar to what we might expect for any other similar startup: “small company raises enough to pay 6 or 7 people for a year” (Irish Times) or “7-person company closes Blanchardstown office due to slow uptake in Ireland - moving instead to 1-person office in Luxembourg” (TheJournal and Fora.ie), etc. The claims to notability in the “recognition” section are incredibly weak: “company was one of 237 finalists (in 26 categories) that didn’t win anything at a niche industry awards do” (GreenAwards.ie), “company was one of 1000+(?) others who applied and were selected for a proprietary label” (solarimpulse.com). The text of the article itself describes an otherwise ROTM small <10-person start-up company. Comparable to millions of such small companies globally. While it is great that the creating COI/SPA editor declared a connection, that doesn’t override the fundamental notability concerns. (Frankly this is such a clear case that I’d have PROD’ed. Only that this has seemingly been through AfC....) Delete: Lacks coverage required by WP:NCORP, for example, The Irish Times source is about raising funds. The article was likely created with AI assistance. Oppose draftification, as the draft was declined in 2024. Verdict: Undecided.

04:15 Merit Leighton. Nominated: There is no evidence of this young actress meeting WP:GNG or WP:NACTOR. The few sources available are seemingly dead links, blogs, and interviews, but nothing approaching WP:SIGCOV. Delete: No WP:SIGCOV. In solidarity, Verdict: No comment on the NACTOR argument, which may overrule SIGCOV. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

03:29 Sentinels of Magic. Nominated: I propose merging to List_of_teams_and_organizations_in_DC_Comics because the team itself doesn't pass WP:GNG. They have less than 20 appearances and rarely appear or are referenced. Keep: or merge with List of teams and organizations in DC Comics in the spirit of WP:ATD-M. Merge: as nominated to List_of_teams_and_organizations_in_DC_Comics since its a weak wp:gng on its own. Verdict: to List of teams and organizations in DC Comics. Merged into another page.

19:19 Chung-Ang University Hospital. Nominated: Fails WP:N-CORP, WP:SIRS. Refs are company material. Fails WP:GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

01:08 Warlock's Daughter. Nominated: I propose merging to List of DC Comics characters: W; page is just full of plot summaries and completely fails WP:GNG as it currently stands. Merge: to the corresponding list, List of DC Comics characters: W, seems the best course of action here with regard to WP:GNG and WP:ATD. Merge: to List of DC Comics characters: W per nom – the only non-primary citation is a single page of The Essential Batman Encyclopedia; the other nine are the comics themselves (WP:GNG). Verdict: to List of DC Comics characters: W. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

09:07 Scott Logic. Nominated: Ordinary company with WP:ORGTRIV coverage. Delete: Fails WP:NCORP. The sources are routine or incidental corporate coverage only. // Delete: Regular, non-notable company sources: personnel changes, opening branches. Just things a regular company does. Delete: Decently clear failure of WP:NCORP. Non-notable. Delete: non-notable company. Delete: No coverage in independent reliable sources that would establish WP:N. Delete: The sources are just standard corporate announcements and office openings, which don't add up to actual notability under WP:NCORP. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-10

13:52 'The Kings of Nuthin' / The Briggs. Nominated: I don't see any evidence of passing WP:NMUSIC for this split record; I can't find any independent full-length reviews, evidence of chart performance or anything else that would indicate a notability pass. Normally we'd redirect to the band's page or a discography page, but since two separate notable bands released songs on this split record I'm not sure how to handle that. Regardless, it doesn't appear to meet notability requirements for a standalone page.

Keep: The article has been substantially improved since its nomination. The most important change is the addition of a detailed contemporary review of the split single published in Maximum Rocknroll. Therefore, independent, reliable coverage of the release is now available. The current version also documents the specific history of the release's creation, Duane Peters' involvement, and an independent mention in the Czech music magazine Kids & Heroes. Songs from the single received international radio airplay more than ten years after its release. As this is an underground punk release from 2004, much contemporary coverage is likely to have appeared in small print zines and specialist publications that are poorly digitized or not searchable today. The lack of other easily accessible, detailed reviews does not therefore necessarily mean that no further independent coverage exists. Nevertheless, the criterion for substantial coverage in an independent, reliable source, as defined in WP:NMUSIC, is now met, and I think Keep is the appropriate outcome while further sourcing can still be sought.

⦿⦿ Delete: Three sentences in MRR is not enough ("The BRIGGS bring that street punk with SoCal undercurrents that Disaster records is so famous for—picture lots of sing-alongs with one tall boy raised in hand at their shows. The KINGS OF NOTHIN' have that swing punk thing going, but picture more swallow tattoos than zoot suits. Not bad, but I don't see myself going out to purchase it.") and the subject spectacularly fails WP:PAGEDECIDE. The rest of the article is just padding with bad sourcing. Furthermore it has an air (as does the above reply) of LLM usage. No redirect since there is no clear target, but the MRR review should be found in both band articles. Delete: fails WP:NSONG, no charts, only one review. I agree that the Keep vote is AI-generated. Verdict: Merged into another page.

09:11 Shaan Patel. Nominated: I'm not seeing the kind of sourcing needed to satisfy WP:NBIO, nor any evidence that Patel satisfies WP:NPROF in relation to his medical career. All of the sources I can find on Patel are either unreliable, non-independent, or do not demonstrate significant coverage. ? (|) Delete: appearing briefly on a reality television program is basically getting 15 minutes of fame. Keep: There is substantial independent coverage of Shaan Patel in multiple reliable sources. Inc. has published several articles specifically about Patel, including coverage of his appearance on Shark Tank, his business Prep Expert, and its growth. Forbes has also profiled Patel and his work in entrepreneurship, while Business Insider has covered his background and career. These are more than passing mentions and provide significant coverage of Patel as an individual. I think the existing article can be improved by strengthening the sourcing and removing any promotional material rather than deleting it. Verdict: Merged into another page.

THURSDAY 17 SEPTEMBER

18:57 Larry Richert. Nominated: Entirely promotional and appears to fail WP:NBIO. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

2026-09-03

11:10 Petar Dyaksov. Nominated: Fails WP:NBIO or WP:GNG. The sources exist but the sources mentioned are mostly promotional releases. Nothing cited in the article counts towards actual notability, just an average entrepreneur. Delete: 1. Video, so I cannot evaluate, but based on the title, “Petar Dyaksov on the EC’s new rules for online shopping”, it is a commentary by him. 2. Interview. 3. Interview 4. Coverage by a local Plovdiv outlet, quote-heavy, but overall borderline. 5/6 List of publications by him and his company on what looks like a blogging site. 7/8 About his company 9. Company site 10/11/12. Cannot access, but looks like a promotion of a seminar by him (one is titled “First Steps in Business – free entrepreneurship seminar in Plovdiv”) 13/14 About his book, but reads more like a plot retelling than an actual review. He also has many hits on Google News, but mostly interviews. Delete: Fails WP:NBIO and WP:GNG. The article is essentially a promotional resume. // Verdict: Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

08:42 Aarón Torlà. Nominated: Article about a second division Spanish footballer who has not received significant coverage. Can only locate passing mentions and stats pages without independent, detailed reporting. 679 Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: Lacks WP:SIGCOV. Delete: I was close to nominating it myself. Delete: Lacks WP:SIGCOV, as the subject’s career consists of passing mentions database records without independent detailed reporting. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-03

17:23 Krantikari Yuva Sangathan. Nominated: The article has clear tell signs of being written by AI. Violates WP:NOLLM. Delete: according to my search, this is partly AI, but the bigger issue is lack of significant coverage. Keep: or Draftify, is a major student’s union covered at length in – {{cite book |last= Chandra |first= Paresh |editor-last1= Kumar |editor-first1= Ravi Verdict: See Krantikari Yuva Sangathan. Giving a chance for editors to rewrite the article with better sourcing. Merged into another page.

20:37 Fortune's Run. Nominated: I'm not seeing any long-term effect of this article as it never even released and the article itself is extremely short. Delete: While neither of those are rationales for deletion, this is an odd one as the lion's share of coverage is from PC Gamer, which counts as a single source per WP:GNG despite making numerous articles about the game. It arguably got trivial coverage from literally every other website besides PC Gamer (their articles were mostly about the controversy surrounding the game rather than its content), and had no time to get more extensive coverage before being cancelled, so one can argue that it fails WP:GNG. Keep: I don't see the value in deleting this article. It's not misinformation, just currently lacking in detail. This is one of the last chances to document what will inevitably become lost media. Steam developer posts could be used as sources for deeper information if few articles from gaming media exist. But beyond documenting the drama and the lead developer's jail time. What this article really represents is a small, underserved genre of video games and the forms it takes now that it is far out of the mainstream. Focusing on the game design, aesthetics, and what we had before development rather than the controversy of the developer going to jail would provide much-needed substance. We gain nothing in deleting this article; all we do is lose what little evidence there was of its existence before it's even gone. Delete: I agree with VRXCES's analysis. PC Gamer provides solid secondary coverage, but is the only source doing so. Reading through all the other sources, they mostly directly repeat the developer's announcements. ~ Keep: Meets minimum notability threshold, previews by Multiplayer.it: and PC Gamer: [https://www.pcgamer.com/amid-a-legendary-autumn-for-pc-gaming-a-team-of-three-developers-quietly-released-one-of-the-best-shooters-you-can-play-right-now-into-early-access/. Both reliable sources per WP:VG/S and are significant coverage. Keep: I'm leaning towards keep here - I'd say it passes GNG, has sustained coverage across multiple years, and the fact of it not being released doesn't mean it can't have an article; plenty of things that haven't been finished have articles. he/she/it (•) Keep: With Multiplayer.it, PC Gamer, and Rock, Paper, Shotgun, plus additional supporting source, I see the requirements of the notability guideline as well as WP:SUSTAINED as fulfilled, and therefore see no policy-based grounds for deletion. Weak keep: I've struck my !vote above. Looking past the WP:BLUDGEON-ing that formed most of the discussion, this seems a simple case of having found one additional in-depth source from Multiplayer.it in a borderline case, and that makes it narrowly defensible to keep where the PC Gamer coverage was substantial and long-term. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

14:28 Residential education. Nominated: I propose merging this article into Therapeutic boarding school, given its limited size and substantial overlap it has. Delete: Residential education is an umbrella term or can refer too Redirect to Residential school: as an alternative term to “residential school” and where the proposed targets are all mentioned already. Redirect to Residential school.: Wikipedia is not a dictionary. (They•Them) Redirect: to Residential school. Multiple possible meanings, as shown by both the article and the DAB page, and no way should we pick one and merge to Therapeutic boarding school (and for that matter, Therapeutic boarding school isn't even one of the examples listed in Residential education). Redirect to Residential school: Agree with Dclemens1971 and Meters - has multiple meanings and merging to Therapeutic boarding school is too narrow. Verdict: to Residential school. Content can be merged at editorial discretion. Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

07:38 Tap Global Group. Nominated: Doesn't appear to meet the notability threshold yet. Only one source can be considered an independent RS with significant coverage (The Standard). Googling didn't bring up better sources. Delete: Fails WP:NCORP. Routine coverage under WP:CORPTRIV only. // Weak keep: WP:LISTED company and has received coverage that is already cited in the article. Verdict: Undecided.

07:23 FalconX. Nominated: Nearly all of the 13 refs used are made up (Bloomberg, CNBC, TechCrunch, Forbes, Reuters, Fortune, WSJ). It's either a result of AI hallucination or the author making this up. G15 delete: The sources being hallucinated should be a quick G15, added the tag. Verdict: G15 Merged into another page.

07:03 Lorenzo Chiavarini. Nominated: Single line stub about an Italian sailor who competed at the 2024 Summer Olympics where he finished 9th. Fails WP:NOLY. Procedural keep: these are 7 sailors who have very little to do with one another and even have different potential redirect targets. Nominate them separately. About Chiavarini, in a few seconds I've found a Corriere della Sera profile and an ANSA profile [https://www.ansa.it/vela/notizie/vela_olimpica/2022/02/02/chi-e-lorenzo-brando-chiavarini-nuovo-velista-azzurro_f72f0be8-0a19-4b89-aeb1-c4a38db09952.html], so he's probably notable per GNG and NOLY. Keep: Lorenzo Chiavarini - Helensburgh Advertiser and The Herald seem decent press coverage over the years for the subject; there is other press coverage too, so enough for WP:GNG I think. No opinion on the other articles yet, but I agree that the bundled nomination is a little peculiar. Cheers, Keep: Chiavarini, as per Cavarrone and SunloungerFrog. Procedural keep for the rest - they are not related to Chiavarini and each needs separate consideration. No more of this sort of nomination. Procedural keep: unrelated subjects need to be evaluated separately, and it has already been shown at least one of them is clearly notable. Keep all: Unnecessary mass nomination bundling sportspeople of different notability. Keep all, reluctantly: As coverage has been found for Lorenzo Chiavarini, it lends credence to the idea that more of these subjects may be notable. That being said, I commend the nom for the bold action of nominating poorly sourced Olympians in this way and encourage them to continue doing so in the future with the proper care. Keep: Lorenzo Chiavarini per SunloungerFrog. Procedural keep others as they do not share a similar redirect target. Verdict: WP:TRAIN-WRECK. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

06:56 D N Himatsingka High School. Nominated: First 2 sources are merely 1 line mentions of the school and not sigcov. Fails NSCHOOL. Redirect: to Kokrajhar#Education it is already listed there. Agree on sources, two mentions in cricket tournament reports and a district website listing former headmasters, who are all redlinks anyway. Couldn't find anything else. 15 year old article and still three sentences. Redirect: to Kokrajhar#Education — Found nothing with SIGCOV in additional searches to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: to Kokrajhar#Education. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

05:57 Sabrina Weill. Nominated: Declined prod. I don't think she meets WP:JOURNALIST or WP:AUTHOR. Not seeing any major awards or recognition. A mere 4 google news hits which is very low for a US based writer/journalist. Keep: google news count is misleading here, her career was 1996-2006 before most of that got indexed. She was actually editor in chief of Seventeen Keep: Given that she was editor-in-chief of Seventeen, she seems to meet WP:AUTHOR; I would also like to note that WP:AUTHOR and WP:JOURNALIST point to the same thing. Verdict: Merged into another page.

05:26 Rangeli \(film\). Nominated: I propose draftifying because currently fails WP:NFILMS. No reviews, nothing. Routine coverage proves it exists but no indication of significance. DRAFTIFY: fails WP:NFLIM Delete: Draftification would be kinda unusual for a 2 years old page. (WP:DRAFTNO) I searched for reviews.... found one promotionally written plot piece and one non-bylined review....that's it. If someone discovers any reviews in the future, the article can be refunded. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: Merged into another page.

05:14 Ape Principal. Nominated: Fails WP:NFILM. Refs are routine coverage of special event listings, director interviews, clickbait and 404's. Redirect: to List of Sri Lankan films of the 2020s as an WP:ATD. The source linked above appears to be an actual review, but there is nothing more. Verdict: Undecided.

18:59 Harry Hedström. Nominated: Page on a Swedish academic. I cannot find any evidence for a pass of WP:NPROF; the paper (ref 5) the author claims as an achievement has a total of 62 cites in Google Scholar which is not enough for notability. I cannot find any well cited papers in Google Scholar (except a few by others later), and Scopus has nothing on him. The sources included do not show any awards or SIGCOV for any other class of pass of notability. If someone can find sources I will reconsider. Delete: I also drew a blank when searching for academic notability. Additional searches for general coverage in EBSCO, Internet Archive, ProQuest plus a few others were fruitless too. Delete.: My efforts to find useful information were also fruitless. The article itself contains little to suggest notability, and Google Scholar likewise. Keep: I've been able to find one of Hedström's obituaries, and he was evidently a prominent scholar in his field with some 50 scientific publications and a large number of assignments within various government inquiries, boards, and committees. I have started to expand the article and will continue with this, though I can not promise a time schedule for this work due to numerous other commitments at the moment. / Delete: The first ref is the best, but it's a very brief biographical entry. The others listed are simply names in a list/directory... I'm unable to find additional sourcing, no h-factor found, not seeing a pass at BIO or academic notability. Keep: Hedström is notable, not only through the discovery of Nebularine but also in his veterinary bacteriology studies. There are many verifiable sources showing that Hedström conducted research and made discoveries in multiple fields. Furthermore, it was previously assumed that he lacked enough publications to be notable, however it is important to acknowledge that notability does not rely on a raw number of publications, but rather the subject's impact. Weak delete: Seconding Ldm1954's comment above. Even if , that notability is best demonstrated through some measurable metric here, which seems to be lacking. -Wiki Verdict: The arguments to delete are stronger: WP:PROF#1 requires sources attesting to a person's impact in their field. Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

03:22 Pyrsos Grevena F.C.. Nominated: Non-notable. Sources are largely blogs. Delete: no evidence of notability. If it truly played in 2nd league as claimed, likely notable. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Redirect to List of football clubs in Greece: as alternative to deletion. But also support delete. 679 Keep: Article meets WP:FOOTY as the club has history playing in the second tier of Greek football (Beta Ethniki), satisfying professional league criteria. Verdict: to List of football clubs in Greece. Merged into another page.

03:19 Buddy Fuller. Nominated: Non-notable wrestler. Most sources are DBs. Delete: seven of the eight citations are fan-maintained title and result databases: wrestling-titles.com, Cagematch, Wrestlingdata, Online World of Wrestling and Oklafan. The eighth is a single page reference to Mick Foley's autobiography, which is not significant coverage of Fuller (WP:GNG). Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

03:04 Ahmed Ali Dinar. Nominated: Fails GNG. I literally found zero useful citations from a Google search. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

02:57 Ranchi Women's College. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Keep: per this this this this and this. Looks just enough to save the page. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Keep: per above, sources exist. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

02:57 BMM English Medium School. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Delete: Additional searches yielded nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: The article lacks WP:SIGCOV to clear nota- bility guidelines. Verdict: Merged into another page.

02:57 YMCA Brown Matriculation Higher Secondary School.

Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Delete: Additional searches yielded nothing with SIGCOV to warrant stand-alone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: Merged into another page.

02:56 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Puducherry. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Weak keep: per this this this and this. Just borderline enough to save the page. This article's case looks a bit different from the other JNV school articles that have been getting deleted through AfD over the past few weeks. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: There are over 600 of these schools, each should not have a separate page, if specific reference to 1-2 schools is notable, they could be included in the main article on Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya Keep: per Bhikhari Informer. Also, there was a false report of a bomb planted in the school prior to Modi visiting the district. Verdict: Undecided.

09:33 Huang's law. Nominated: Fails WP:SUSTAINED. Also fails WP:PROMO in its current state. The article reads as one long puff piece extolling the virtues of Huang and Nvidia's products. This fact aside, the topic itself has no sustained coverage or notability. The article cites only a single WP:RS, the Wall Street Journal (the other references are blogs or news aggregators), which has used the phrase "Huang's Law" just one time in a single article (the very article which coined the phrase!). I cannot find any evidence of the use of the term or reference to the "law" in any third-party reliable source in the 6 years since 2020, when it was "coined", let alone the "significant and lasting" coverage required to warrant an article. Even Nvidia seems to have given up on it, the last occurrence on their website being a 2023 blog post. This is in contrast to Moore's Law which is widely discussed and has an extensive Wikipedia article dedicated to it, featuring the section Moore's Law#Other formulations and similar observations in which dozens of equivalent or related statements (such as this one) are listed.

Keep: Meets WP:GNG. For PROMO I don't see it and anyway that is an editorial issue not AfD. Notability does not expire, if something was notable at one time it still is. It does not need to be true or accurate, only notable. For sustained coverage, here are a few recent, there are more: Verdict: It seems the concern about WP:-SUSTAINED has been adequately met. Merged into another page. 16:53 ICBRR. Nominated: Not notable Merge: to Indonesian Red Cross Society per WP:NOPAGE. The program is notable based on these papers, but I see no reason to cover the Red Cross and the program funded by it separately. Verdict: to Indonesian Red Cross Society. This solution seems to be address everyone's concerns. Any promotional material can be omitted during the merge. Merged into another page.

18:34 Michele Fitzgerald. Nominated: Should be re-directed to Survivor: Kaoh Rōng. Almost nothing has changed from its prior AfD (diff), aside from huge copyediting of her Survivor gameplay. As I see, she is supposed to appear in another upcoming Challenge season Cutthroat 2. ...I'm now worried about the reliability of this source. Without reliable sources verifying her notability outside her Survivor win, this "restored" article would be an attempt to circumvent and defy the last AfD decision. ; edited, Weak keep: just barely makes it, per WP:BARE. Weak keep:

Probably a wait and see, considering her upcoming appearance on The Traitors. Don't think she's as well known to non-Survivor/Challenge fans, but definitely more notable considering the multitude of Entertainment Weekly, Parade (magazine) and local news articles. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

22:20 Indurent. Nominated: Still fails NCORP and only has WP:ROUTINE coverage. delete: Mostly self-published sources and routine PR coverage. Delete: Lacks in-depth coverage required by WP:NCORP. Verdict: Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

02:17 Dibrugarh Hanumanbux Surajmal Kanoi Commerce College. Nominated: Article was PROD by . PROD was removed by who is known to use LLMs (see WP:AINB#User:AjayDas). While AjayDas' edits claimed to add reliable secondary sources, they were in my opinion trivial fact verifications which do not contribute to notability. Since PROD declined, taking to AfD. Delete: one google news hit. Fails NSCHOOL. Redirect: to Dibrugarh University#Affiliated colleges as an WP:ATD. The article was created in 2018, so it contains non-LLM history. Verdict: to Dibrugarh University#Affiliated colleges. Merged into another page.

02:10 Mahapurusha Srimanta Sankaradeva Viswavidyalaya.

Nominated: Article was PROD by . Tag was removed by , known to use LLMs (see WP:AINB#User:AjayDas) with an edit summary that said reliable secondary sources were added: however one source was the institution's website, another was a promotional sounding Times of India report. I don't believe this likely LLM edit helps with notability. Since PROD was declined, taking it to AfD. Keep: This university was founded via legislation by the Assam Legislative Assembly in 2013 and is acknowledged by the UGC to offer programs from graduation right up to Ph.D. level, which is in line with the criteria mentioned in WP:NSCHOOL. The establishment of the university was covered by The Times of India and The Assam Tribune, whereas The Sentinel reported on the commencement of its Jorhat branch. The nomination concerns the way this article was written rather than the notability of the subject; the usage of an LLM is a reason to check the sourcing, not a reason to delete this topic. Verdict: Merged into another page.

02:03 Patrick Amofah. Nominated: Suspect LLM use here. There is one source with utm=chatgpt.com in the link and another with a nonsense source date unlikely to have been added by a human. Verdict: Merged into another page.

01:55 Ghosts in Bengali culture. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG, not opposed to a selective merge to Indian folklore. This article violates WP:OR and WP:RS by relying on unreferenced, in-universe descriptions of mythological entities. Also clear violations of both WP:INDISCRIMINATE and WP:TRIVIA. Keep: per GNG, i believe this article meets the Wikipedia General Notability Guideline GNG... Keep: The page can certainly use more citations however it is a decent written article with credible sources. Passes WP:GNG. Keep: per above. I had added a more citations needed tag but the topic is notable enough. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

01:48 Akhil Kirat Rai Sangh Sikkim. Nominated: Seems WP:LLM with various WP:AISIGNS such as WP:AILEGACY, WP:AIWEASEL, and WP:RO3. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-10

16:39 Stanikzai. Nominated: This article is a challenge on WP:V grounds. That a tribe known as the Stanizai or an alternative spelling existed is confirmed in this 1934/5 source, p. 72, but it doesn't give us much information. The other books referenced are unavailable in English and thus impossible to validate the claims made here. This article was previously deleted in 2024 for similar failure of WP:V after persisting without adequate sourcing for many years. I see no way to keep this in mainspace without some level of WP:V-passing sources for its claims, particularly in a CTOP area where it was created by a non-EC editor. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Ineligible or not, no one is arguing to retain or shoes any interest in participating. Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

20:58 Angry Birds Slingshot Stories. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Angry Birds#Television because this article barely establishes any notability; it has very few sources, multiple unsourced sections, and no Reception section. Signed, . (-) Support redirect: per nom and @. Clearly not notable. Redirect: as suggested to Angry Birds#Television this article feels more like an episode catalog and doesn't meet wp:gng. Verdict: to Angry Birds#Television. Merged into another page.

17:16 List of short-lived states and dependencies. Nominated: This list appears to be a recreation of the previously deleted List of shortest-lived sovereign states, and the reasons for deleting that list haven't changed. This article lacks citations that calls most of these quasi-entities states (a high threshold to meet). From the previous deletion: –Nice4What Keep: I think these sources are good enough for WP:NLIST. Inclusion criteria for lists can be established via editorial judgment, the only thing necessary is that passage of the criteria is backed by reliable sources, and this page has 434 references that back its content. Delete: The inclusion criteria is useless ands need to be majorly tightened and the list substantially cleaned up to just be actual sovereign states. I didn't see the previous deleted list, but this is still horrendous, and I'd call it "unfocused" and synthesis of wildly different concepts rather than "comprehensive". I just removed Capitol Hill Occupied Protest, which in no world had "control over a territory" or "some sort of governance". It was literally just a protest encampment that spanned a couple city blocks for a few weeks, and its inclusion here is honestly embarrassing and degrades its validity. I see a lot of other provisional governments (which are not necessarily a distinct state from predecessors and successors) and separatist movements that were also not actually state entities (as much as they wanted to be), as well as made-up micronations like Republic of Rose Island. Others like Kherson and Zaporozhye are provinces that are occupied/annexed by invading forces, not their own entities, "short-lived" or not. This is way too all over the place to make for a valid encyclopedic list or a specific comparative concept. The sources above have literally no connection to most of the actual contents of the page. Verdict: This does not preclude a merger Merged into another page.

FRIDAY 18 SEPTEMBER

00:56 Radio Dunyaa Vision (RDV). Nominated: Unsourced, no evidence of notability. Delete: agree with the above reason — Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Keep: This is a television page, not something for deletion Redirect: to Television in Senegal#Main channels as an WP:ATD. Found this source, but nothing more. Verdict: Undecided.

00:45 Supna Zaidi. Nominated: Last AfD had minimal participation. I don't think she meets WP:JOURNALIST. Out of the 3 google news hits, 2 are articles by her. A very low number of google news hits for someone based in USA. Delete: as the absence of in-depth coverage about her in reliable and verifiable sources means that she does not appear to meet the notability guidelines. Delete: there needs to be secondary sources covering her and I don't see that. — Preceding unsigned comment added by Delete: for lack of significant coverage. Who's Who is deprecated. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:45 Mahyar Khodadadi. Nominated: Fails WP:N (Especially WP:GNG) - All of the refs (which are not linked, but can be found by searching his name in Persian) are self-authored. Delete: per WP:NOLLM, this is clearly AI generated and clearly has undergone little to no review (among many other indicators, they didn't bother taking out the part...) Verdict: Page has been deleted by Pppery for being a WP:G15 violation. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

00:33 As (tribe). Nominated: I propose merging because this appears to be the same ethnic group and "Az people" is more in line with other similar articles. Merge: HOWEVER it should be merged the other way around, As (tribe) is more substantial than the suggested article, and should remain the main article with all the relevant info inside: have Az people merged to it. Merge: supporting merge in either direction Merge: to Az people since they are the same group and "Az people" is the more established title. Verdict: to Az people. Merged into another page.

00:19 The Little Mermaid Pinball. Nominated: Contested WP:PROD. Fails WP:GNG. Current sourcing only reflects WP:ROUTINE press-release style business coverage: I did not find independent and in-depth secondary coverage about the game. Redirect: to List of video games based on Walt Disney Animation Studios shorts and features#The Little Mermaid. Redirect:

per above. I also found nothing. 19:11, September 18, 2026 (UTC)
Redirect: I have searched for sources but come up short. The proposed redirect looks to be a good place for it. (|) Redirect: to List of video games based on Walt Disney Animation Studios shorts and features#The Little Mermaid article lacks sources to establish standalone notability, but a redirect preserves the target context for readers. Verdict: to List of video games based on Walt Disney Animation Studios shorts and features#The Little Mermaid. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

00:08 List of referred Indian Standard Codes for civil engineers. Nominated: Fails WP:INDISCRIMINATE and WP:NOTDIREC-TORY. Merely a long list of building codes with no obvious encyclopedic purpose or navigational value. Only a single source to an Indian government website. Delete: I agree there's no apparent encyclopedic use for this list. None of these correspond specifically to Wikipedia articles, and there don't appear to be any independent sources with non-trivial coverage of this topic. Delete: per WP:NOTDIRECTORY. Verdict: Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

23:42 Action Hero (video game). Nominated: This appears to not meet WP:GNG. There is no Reception section, which convinces me that this is not notable. I did a WP:BEFORE search and only got results for Last Action Hero (video game), a recently released game for Steam with the same name, a 2024 video game... well, it's a mixed bag, but other than that it fails the general notability guideline. — ???/? Verdict: G7 Merged into another page.

21:05 United States war crimes in Iran strikes. Nominated: I propose to merge this page into 2026 Iran war because this article covers one UN fact finding report from September 2026. That can be covered in a short, attributed paragraph in the main war article. A standalone title that presents "war crimes" as established fact is a Wiki voice problem. Merge: to 2026 Iran war per nomination. Merge: to 2026 Iran war as per all of the above. Merge: to 2026 Iran war. Verdict: to 2026 Iran war. WP:SNOW. Reclosing after improperly formatted NAC. Merged into another page.

22:49 Franchising Company. Nominated: nothing here that seems to meet WP:NCORP. Only sources that strike me as amounting to anything are from Forbes, so of suspect reliability. La Nacion and El Cronista refs are not directly related to the company, and this article has been refbombed extensively (“[16][17][18][19][20][21][22][23][24][25][6][9][8]”. Creator previously removed PROD and notability tags. (their user page also looks AI generated)

Delete: the reference list is padding: its own website, five links to a franchise directory and several write-ups of its own Franchising Trends event. The Forbes Argentina, La Nación, Ámbito and El Cronista pieces are industry trend articles in which the company is a quoted source, not the subject (WP:NCORP, WP:ORGIND). Delete: as per . In particular, Forbes is no longer reliable. The link to the United States government website is for franchising generally in Argentina. Verdict: Merged into another page.

22:35 Reflection (C++). Nominated: the only secondary source discussing it, wholetomato, seems to be a self-published blog. doesn't appear to be notable. Keep: The C++ 26 standard is very new and it is just now getting into software releases, programming books, and articles. See the 2026 version of C++ for Dummies, page 380-382 and this case study which considers (ahead of release) whether it will be useful for their project. Verdict: consensus to keep. Editors have agreed that the topic is a notable feature of C++26 supported by sufficient references. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

22:23 Venalex. Nominated: Pure WP:PROMO for non-notable topic, with only trivial and non-independent sourcing. Delete: per nom. No evidence of notability. I also agree with @'s assessment that it is promotional. Delete: the citations are the manufacturer's own pages and an FDA filing, which is WP:PRIMARY and fails WP:NCORP. Verdict: Undecided.

21:19 Yusuf Ahmed (footballer, born 2006). Nominated: Fails WP:NSPORT. Lacks sufficient significant coverage in published reliable independent secondary sources with reputations for accuracy and fact-checking. Delete: Very obvious failure of WP:NSPORT and WP:GNG. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: Fails in WP:GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 2026 Women's European Volleyball Championship final round. Nominated: I am also nominating the following related articles: Verdict: Undecided.

00:00 2026 Men's European Volleyball Championship final round. Nominated: I am also nominating the following related articles: Verdict: Undecided.

00:00 Chess at the 2025 ASEAN Para Games. Nominated: In March 2025, a user created a series of articles relating to groups of events at the 2025 ASEAN Para Games, which I will list below shortly. They are universally sourced only to primary sources. I personally lack the linguistic and sporting knowledge to effectively search for possible WP:SIGCOV in southeast Asian languages. However, currently I strongly suspect they do not pass WP:GNG. I am sure that other reviewers share my doubts, as all the articles have remained on the New Pages Patrol backlog for 18 months. Delete: per Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/Alpine skiing at the 2012 Arctic Winter Games - very obscure events that don't need this kind of detail. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request undeletion of these articles for any reason. Merged into another page.

00:00 River (software). Nominated: No indication of notability. All sources in the article are primary or user-generated. (e.g. Arch Wiki, Codeberg) Keep: Found the second source from LinuxUser magazine. Merge and redirect: to Wayland (protocol)#Wayland compositors. There's not a lot of meat here to justify a standalone article. Keep: The source provided by @ justifies it. Merge: to Wayland (protocol)#Wayland compositors. Even with the LinuxUser source, I don't think it meets WP:NPRODUCT. The useful information can be covered in the Wayland compositor section. Weak keep otherwise merge: per the above. Keep: per , the presence of coverage in LinuxUser establishes sufficient under WP:GNG and WP:SOFTWARE. Merge: to Wayland (protocol)#Wayland compositors. The sources are extremely limited. A report of a presentation at FOSDEM (Free and Open Source Software Developers' European Meeting) and a very short description of a test in Linux User. GNG says "there is no fixed number of sources required since sources vary in quality and depth of coverage, but multiple sources are generally expected." These two are insufficient (and this should also be meeting WP:NPRODUCT). Further, we must consider WP:PAGEDECIDE. As we have so little to say about this product, this is better contextualised on the proposed merge target. Everything we say can be covered there, and if better sources emerge, the subject can be spun out at that point. I know deletion is not for clean up, but we do not serve readers well by linking people to a page of further information, where the page contains no further information. A merge is not deletion. A merge is an editorial decision to cover the information on a relevant page that contextualises the information. That is appropriate in this case. Merge: to Wayland (protocol)#Wayland compositors. One good source is a enough to include the item on a list (i.e., at Wayland (protocol)#Wayland compositors), but not for an independent article. Verdict: to Wayland (protocol)#Wayland compositors. Merged into another page.

00:00 List of fictional prisons. Nominated: I understand a lot of work had been put into this, but after doing a search I'm not convinced that these fictional prisons meet WP:NLIST, as they are not discussed as a group (or set) of prisons by any of the sources I could find on the Internet. At present, this list is little more than just that - a list, with very little prose or arguments made that would establish notability. It relies on a single source that only covers one soap opera as well. Delete: per nom - The article as it currently stands is entirely devoid of any kind of source that covers the topic of the list - there is a single source regarding one of the locations, that is not even about the fictional prison but where it was filmed in real life. Like the nom, I was also unable to find any reliable sources that discuss the concept as a group or set - the best I found were a few listicles from less-than-reliable places like WP:VALNET sites. Only three of the entries here actually link to dedicated articles on a fictional prison (the rest of the blue links either just redirect to the article on the piece of fiction the prison appeared in or, in the vast majority of the cases, just other lists) making it useless as a navigational list as well. Keep: and improve, possibly rename/rearrange: I do believe, as stated above, that those two sources discuss fictional prisons as a group, not only works featuring prisons. Additionally, the whole book Narrating the Prison mostly focusses on the fictional prisons (starting out with Charles Dickens' representations, but then broadening the scope) as a group, rather than the works. Additionally, The Oxford Handbook of Prisons has a full chapter/essay which is called "The Literature of Confinement", but according to Information Sources in the Social Sciences, p. 194, is about "the depiction of prisons in fiction". With this, I see the WP:LISTN requirement as fulfilled. The list is not in good shape, but these are issues which can be solved through normal editing and so that's not a reason for deletion: inclusion criteria and requirements can easily be formulated, and if trimmed of non-relevant entries (ideally after cross-checking for secondary sources first), there would still be enough for this to be helpful for browsin in the vein of WP:LISTPURP-NAV (:Category:Fictional prisons has nine stand-alone entries; we have more blue links here for fictional prisons which have a section elsewhere and one referenced entry). The listed sources can be used to reference existing entries and add new ones, as well as give the context beyond a pure listing. All that said, I would not have any objections to rearrange that to have a List of works set in prison(s), if there is a feeling that that scope would be supported by more sources. But we don't have such a list yet, and for deleting first and hoping someone might recreate that later, WP:BATHWATER would apply. Keep: I do not really see the difference between "fictional works about prisons" and "fictional prisons". If the article is renamed to "list of works depicting prisons", then nothing would change substantially. Regarding sourcing, it is present as shown by Daranios, even a whole book has been written about the subject. Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

00:00 Chief of the General Staff (Senegal). Nominated: Performing the second AfD step on behalf of as requested at . I have no opinion on the actual proposal and won't watch this discussion. Keep: I don't see the WP:SIGCOV problem. The article does have some citations, and there are lots of articles like this for other countries. See Template:Chief of military by country. Keep: The head of a country's armed forces is clearly notable. Keep: the sources already in the article are sufficient to support notability and more, likely in French, probably exist. Verdict: (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page. 00:00 True Crime Community. Nominated: This article only portrays its subject in a negative light and therefore violates WP:-WEIGHT and therefore WP:NPOV. The article has been violating this policy since its beginning, so there is no neutral version to revert to. I propose following solutions: Keep: Per WP:NOT-CLEANUP and WP:ITSNOTNEUTRAL. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:00 Abdullahi Kassim. Nominated: Previously deleted through AfD. The subject of this article does not appear to pass GNG. He's a businessman doing businessman things, we are not LinkedIn here. Also copying an admin's comment from the article talk page: Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources. The position of COO of a state energy company is not per se notable. If you want a redirect, Energy law#Nigeria would be a possibly good redirect target. Delete: appointment announcements, his employer's site and a State House press release are not independent coverage (WP:BASIC, WP:ORGIND). Delete: note that this was recently deleted. Coverage is rather routine. Fails WP:BIO. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Mamata All India Trinamool Congress. Nominated: I propose merging to 2026 Trinamool Congress split because the two party names and symbols are used only for interim bypolls in Nandigram and is not an complete party dissolution, by a rebellion like Shiv Sena. Creating new articles for these presenting as new parties after dissolution when the sources mentioned in the article itself says otherwise is nonsense. I cannot be bold since there are active editors. Oppose: No, this is not just for the bypoll.

It will apply to every upcoming election as well. The only difference is that one of these factions will eventually be given official party status, and we will merge it into the main article. THEZDRX | Oppose merge: of two parties with multiple legislators in state and national assemblies into the article on party split. Regarding nominators assertion that the split is with respect to only the by-polls, it is not supported by sources. The split is in general (for any election or activity) per ECI the symbol and party name are frozen and both parties have adopted new ones. Strong Oppose: Precedence: Shiv Sena (UBT) and Balasahebanchi Shiv Sena. (|) Oppose: Im gonna be honest, If the party name and symbol are used for those by elections, then why would the ECI restrict both party from using the AITC name, if both can't use it then its technically a dissolution anyway and they are obliged to use the name and symbol even after the bypoll. Strong OPPOSE: The entire confusion with @ seems to be that they are not aware of how SHIVSENA dispute was settled in the first place. The shivsena name as well as symbol were frozen too. 2 new parties name and symbol came out there too. Wikipedia had 2 separate pages for those 2 as well (Balasahebanchi Shiv Sena led by Eknath Shinde group, Shiv Sena (UBT)- Uddhav Thackeray bloc) what happened later was one of them got the original name and symbol and the page Balasahebanchi Shivsena got renamed to Shiv Sena (2022). The interim order for bye-polls is just the start of the same course of events, ECI will eventually either hand over the name and symbol or the courts may intervene, and the names of the factions may later alter, but the party as it existed before 2026, will never exist again, and thus the main party AITC will have a split into two parts any how. So it is not MISINFORMATION but it is the statistical REALITY rather. Oppose: Others have already made policy based arguments to oppose the proposal. I can only say it is time to move on. Oppose: per NPOV. This scenario is not really different from Shiv Sena split. Verdict: per community consensus. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:00 Dinasudar. Nominated: Performing the second AfD step on behalf of a temporary account as requested at . I have no opinion on the actual proposal and won't watch this discussion. Delete: the only links are the publication's own website, so nothing verifies its significance (WP:NMEDIA, WP:V). Redirect: to List of Tamil-language newspapers#India as an WP:ATD. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Nootropics Depot. Nominated: Disclosure: I work for Nootropics Depot and have said so at . I asked my mentor whether it was ok for me to nominate this given the COI and was told yes as long as I disclose . I'll leave the outcome to others. Delete: per nom. The two U.S. Attorney's Office releases are primary, the WHO report and Marraffa et al. list the company among many vendors, and the Nutrition Insight piece is part of an interview series with its CEO. Being a party to one enforcement action is not WP:NCORP notability, and a line at Tianeptine#Legal status would record it. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Sachal Afzal. Nominated: Promotional page for a non-notable Pakistani model, recreated following deletion in 2024. (It's sufficiently different that it doesn't qualify for G4.) Sources are: Delete: /agree with nom, Promo article, fails GNG, NACTOR. Delete: (and salt) to help prevent this from coming right back as it did after the last discussion closed. Lots of non-independent and non-bylined likely paid for and/or fancruft press but nothing in-depth. Verdict: Merged into another page.

18:52 Neo (Marvel Comics species). Nominated: I propose merging this page due to its lack of secondary sourcing. Potential targets could be List of X-Men enemies, Features of the Marvel Universe, or Mutant (Marvel Comics) where it has an entry in each. Another option is List of Marvel Comics teams and organizations. Support: List of Marvel Universe subterranean races redirects to Features of the Marvel Universe. Seems similar, conceptually. Note that there is no List of Marvel Comics species nor List of Marvel Comics races, nor List of Marvel Universe species nor List of Marvel Universe races. We may need to standardize Universe and Comics use, frankly. I also found Species of the Marvel Cinematic Universe; there is no Species of the Marvel Comics. It may be another good target for redirect, it should also become a proper list, and I doubt species of MCU are notable more than the species of MC in general, sigh. --| Merge to Features of the Marvel Universe: Consolidate into a target that primarily covers the scope this falls under, then try other avenues such as renaming List of alien races in Marvel Comics to List of Marvel Comics species and alien races. The entries at List of X-Men enemies and Mutant (Marvel Comics) should then point readers to the Features entry for the Neo. The other viable targets should be handled in a separate discussion, but should not hold up this one from being merged accordingly. — Merge: to Features of the Marvel Universe – of the twelve citations, nine are the comics themselves and three are Marvel Appendix pages, so there is no secondary sourcing to support a separate article (WP:GNG). Verdict: to Features of the Marvel Universe. Merged into another page.

18:49 Prince Paul Wossen-Seged Makonnen, Duke of Harar.

Nominated: The article does not meet any of Wikipedia's notability criteria. There are no online sources that wrote about him while he was alive. All I see is a brief surge of interest following his death. If he was not notable during his lifetime, why should he be considered notable after his death? Keep: per our usual outcomes; he was an imperial Prince and Duke of a reigning empire. Once notable, always notable. His advocacy contributes to his notability. Verdict: Undecided.

16:23 Lungskull. Nominated: No sign of notability SoundCloud is not WP:RS, nor is whatever RapReviews.com is. Keep: Meets WP:GNG. He has a New York Times article on him, which helps establish notability. I also found a Irish Times article on him. Also I agree that he meets WP:NMUSIC#7, and I've added the Irish Times source on his article. Merge/Redirect: to "Robloxcore". Only really a brief mention in NYT, I don't think there's enough here for a standalone page. Merge: to robloxcore per WP:PAGEDECIDE, the coverage is not enough for a standalone page. Keep: meets WP:GNG requirement, plus hes a major pioneer for a genre, there also is detailed coverage of him on a New York Times page.

, Delete: these pages feel more like fandom articles than an actual Wikipedia page. — Preceding unsigned comment added by (•) Keep: It seems that he meets WP:NSINGER criterion 2, having a single listed on a country's national music chart Delete: as not notable. All those citing WP:NMUSIC point #7, or those suggesting a merge to robloxcore are missing the point that the genre is niche and barely notable in itself and is only covered by a small paragraph in another article. Delete: Subject lacks significant coverage beyond his 15 minutes with some niche track from a video game. Everyone voting "keep" mentions the NY Times article, but it's from way back in 2021 (with no significant coverage of subject thereafter until his death) while he himself is only mentioned in passing therein. "Robloxcore" is barely mentioned in the digicore article. On the music front, no charting albums or singles, nothing released on a notable label, and sourcing overall in the article is poor: Soundcloud is primary, the Irish Times is a near-copy of the NY Times piece, and the lone review of his work is from a site without an article. Merge: to Digicore#Robloxcore. The NYT article is about the genre, not the person. Otherwise, we have 1 review and coverage of his death. Some editors above brought up charting, but I do not see mention of it in the article and my brief search did not uncover any evidence of it. Regarding him being a representative of a notable genre, Robloxcore is itself a redirect to Digicore, so WP:NMUSIC#7 is not satisfied. Verdict: Whether to merge or retain as a separate article and does not appear a further relist will help there. Deletion is not on the table. Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

18:08 Crossing - Summer Solstice Event. Nominated: Complete work of promotional original research on a non-notable art event in Kent. The only source in the article that even mentions this event is the webpage of the event sponsor. The rest of the sources are just links to the websites of artists and organisations that purportedly participated in the event. They do not mention the event at all, and only prove that those artists and organisations exist, I guess. My BEFORE search turns up nothing at all on this event. Delete: article created by a SPA, with no reliable sourcing, in fact a complete misunderstanding of what reliable sourcing is. Source assessment table below. Verdict: Merged into another page.

17:45 Tablature editor. Nominated: I propose merging Tablature editor into Scorewriter. The article has been unreferenced since April 2025, and searches of the web, news and book sources turned up no independent reliable coverage of tablature editors as a distinct topic, only vendor pages. Its History section rests solely on the program author's own GitHub page. Tablature support is already treated as a feature of scorewriters in Comparison of scorewriters, so a short sentence or section here would cover it. Verdict: to Scorewriter. Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft merge. Editors are free to remove the articles from the merge backlog or reverse the merge by splitting the articles back out. Merged into another page.

17:59 Subtropical Storm One (1974). Nominated: I propose merging to 1974 Atlantic hurricane season because the storm was removed from the Atlantic hurricane best track after the recent Atlantic hurricane reanalysis. It appears that the storm track was merged with Tropical Depression One. As such, much of the meteorological history is outdated. Also, the article is only 490 words, which puts the article in the bottom 10% of good articles. The 1974 Atlantic hurricane season is only 3,604 words long, and already includes 442 words about this system. Since the effects were relatively minor, and could easily be included in full in the season section, I propose merging. () Support: per nominator's rationale. Well argued. Merge: per nom. Verdict: to 1974 Atlantic hurricane season. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

17:30 AK 47 Mayanja. Nominated: WP:NOTMEMORIAL. Subject does not meet WP:MUSICBIO and WP:V. Considered stubifying to avoid WP:Systemic bias, but RS don't seem to exist. Page was speedied and prodded as AK 47 (Musician), but was recreated the following day with this title. In solidarity, Delete: Lacks coverage outside of reports of his death. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

15:54 Stu Duff. Nominated: Not notable. Advanced Google search didn't find almost anything, I could find virtually no secondary sources on him. In solidarity, Keep: I know FC cricketers are (now) not necessarily notable, but this is getting ridiculous. With 200 FC wickets there must be loads of (possibly offline) newspaper coverage, so we can presume notability. Verdict: I was wrong. Thanks StAnselm! I will include his golf career in the article, as at least something should come out of this discussion. (non-admin closure) In solidarity, Merged into another page.

15:49 Hazim Al-Sha'arawi. Nominated: A reverted BLAR from 2023. Doesn't meet WP:NBIO, with the sources provided being an interview and what appears to be an episode listing. A search also doesn't come up with much. I propose redirecting to Tomorrow's Pioneers, like it was from the BLAR. (|) redirect: per nom. No sigcov. News gives exactly one article: this. redirect/delete: the host doesn't meet wp:gng with only two sources. Verdict: to Tomorrow's Pioneers. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

15:41 Arkanun. Nominated: Previously PRODeD, doesn't seem to meet WP:GNG (which AFAIK is the appropriate guideline for RPGs like this), with only two sources provided. A search for more sources didn't really bring up any reliable sources. (|) Keep: I've expanded the two reviews listed in the article and added another from a Brazilian magazine. I've also removed unsourced material, replacing it with sourced material about the game and the book, and I removed the citation tag. As noted, this book was published by the same publisher as Coleção Dragão Brasil, but the reviewer does admit this but doesn't hold back critical comments, writing, (translated from Portuguese) "Mind you, don't think I'll hold back on pointing out the flaws just because it's a game from our own publishing house! The paper quality could be better — certainly a factor contributing to the book's low price point. The author's writing style makes grasping the system a bit challenging, making the game best suited for more experienced Game Masters. As for the illustrations, some of the artwork is weak.” Nonetheless, if this review is considered NPOV, it could be removed, but there are still two others. Keep: based on addition of second independent WP:RS review. Keep: a lot of good work on article and more sources, since the article has been nominated for deletion. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

15:24 Ali Masrahi. Nominated: Only played in 5 matches in his career. There doesn't appear to be any realistic chance of meeting WP:GNG or WP:SPORTBASIC. The best that I could find was Player Football, a database source. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: Fails in WP:GNG. Delete: poorly sourced; two citations are not enough for a BLP. Ping me if you add more. Verdict: Merged into another page.

15:07 Denis Biba. Nominated: Previous PROD was removed due to WP:NFOOTY, however, since then NFOOTY has been deprecated and there is now a greater emphasis on WP:GNG and WP:SPORTBASIC. I don't believe that the coverage of Biba is strong enough. Panorama 1 only mentions him once. Panorama 2 is just a long quote from him with no third party analysis. Sport Ekspres is just a basic transfer announcement. Delete: Fails in WP:GNG. Delete: poorly sourced; one citation is not enough for a BLP. Ping me if you add more. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:55 Goran Stojković. Nominated: A very short pro career and no evidence of WP:GNG or WP:SPORTBASIC from the external links. In my own searches, I found a trivial mention in Rec Naroda but that isn't enough. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Delete: Per lack of WP:SIGCOV. Delete: poorly sourced; two external links are not enough for a BLP. Ping me if you add more. Verdict: Merged into another page.

13:06 P.S. 35, the Clove Valley School. Nominated: Additional searches yielded nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability, furthermore, it seems to fail WP:NSCHOOL. Delete: The coverage is simply about how the school does well in tests and received a ribbon for excellence. Another is about a boy who attended the school but died of cancer. Then there is an article just telling us how much money lots of schools got for a cell phone ban. A couple of others are about more funding, and that's it. The rest of the coverage seems to be self-promotion, or promotion by the authorities. Not enough coverage for notability. Delete: it's been two weeks, and nothing but crickets. I'm not against a redirect or smerge to an appropriate target. Verdict: However, happy to provide the history if the target ends up created Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

14:28 SmashBrand. Nominated: Fairly sure this is LLM-written and I don't think it's really worth attempting to clean up. Also fairly promo but not sure if that's just the LLM or some undisclosed COI involved there. (•) Delete: I analyzed the media sources, and it is clear that an LLM was used to generate the article (many of the sources mention this in the link ?utm_source=chatgpt.com). I verified all the sources and identified several blogs, which I removed from the article, as well as a number of PR sources that cannot currently demonstrate notability. Delete: Having tried it, I think fixing LLM text of this kind is harder and riskier than rewriting from scratch. Delete: This is a company therefore GNG/ WP:NCORP requires at least two deep or significant sources with each source containing "Independent Content" showing in-depth information on the company. "Independent content", in order to count towards establishing notability, must include original and independent opinion, analysis, investigation, and fact checking that are clearly attributable to a source unaffiliated to the subject. I'm unable to identify any references that meet the criteria for establishing notability. Verdict: Merged into another page.

14:21 Johanna Cranitch. Nominated: Musician seemingly notable only for a few years' association with The Cranberries. Sources here are primary source Q&A interviews (https://joyofviolent-movement.com/tag/opera-australia/, a [https://cranberriesworld.com/2012/02/25/johanna-cranitch-backup-singer/ page on a Cranberries fan blog, brief trivial mentions ([https://loveispop.com/reviews/concert-review-nina-persson-at-brighton-music-hall-boston-41414/, [https://lbbonline.com/news/Little-Beast-Launches-Premier-Music-House, and [sources that don't mention her (https://www.sincerelysydney.net/blog-2/film-director-paula-goldstein, I found [https://www.theguardian.com/music/musicblog/2014/jan/10/white-prism-song-52 one review for an EP issued under the name White Prism and one review for a full length album issued under that name, but neither is [enough coverage for either or both to be notable under WP:NMUSIC, and thus I don't see a pass for Cranitch under WP:NMUSICIAN or, per the source analysis above, a WP:GNG pass. OK with a redirect to the Cranberries page, where she is mentioned and for which she seems best known. Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances, to The Cranberries. Keep: Found two more reviews from PopMatters. If it is not kept, then redirect, as a merge would be undue. From what I see, none of her non-Cranberries work is notable, but many received a single piece of coverage. Verdict: Undecided.

14:10 Marguerite Leduc. Nominated: I propose redirecting to France at the 1960 Winter Olympics#Alpine Skiing because of a lack of WP:SIGCOV to meet the WP:GNG. The only reference in the article is a database, and nothing elsewhere indicates any no-tability for this subject. Keep: or merge into (and create) an article on the Leduc sisters. Leduc was part of a famous family of French skiers, including sisters Thérèse and Anne-Marie (they are the first three sisters to compete in the same Olympic event), that received coverage. Marguerite has some SIGCOV on her own, e.g. Le Dauphine, but merging the three into an article on the sisters is also an option since all three are stubs and known for competing together. Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances, to Leduc sisters or the equivalent. Verdict: Undecided.

14:00 Raoul Barouch. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Tunisia at the 1960 Summer Olympics#Fencing because this subject lacks the needed WP:SIGCOV from secondary sources to meet the WP:GNG. The only references in this article and the corresponding wikis merely repeat or are databases of his Olympic results, and the best I could find was <https://olympstats.com/2026/06/05/latest-olympic-medal-mysteries-part-ii/> which also doesn't offer much on anything outside of the Olympic participation. A PROD was declined in 2024 so bringing this to AfD. Keep: meets WP:NBASIC and WP:SPORTCRIT. Jews in Sports is 100 words (WP:100WORDS) – WP:SIGCOV – and notes he was the champion fencer of all of North Africa for a decade straight (he also won a dozen national titles) and holds the extremely notable distinction as being the lone Jew in world history to be an Olympic flagbearer for an Arab country. That is way more notable than the average Olympian and an accomplishment that deserves to be covered in an encyclopedia. We also are extremely limited in access to Tunisian newspapers (no Arabic Tunisian newspapers have been searched – there also appeared to have been a Jewish newspaper in the country at the time that would warrant being checked as well), but Gallica has a few brief French-language stories about his career, e.g. 1 2 3 and other mentions. Not only that, but we know that there are about a dozen other (have to click on sidebar “Documents that can be consulted on site”) newspapers and magazines that covered him, but they can only be accessed at the Bibliothèque nationale de France in Paris. Notability is based on the existence of suitable sources, not on the state of sourcing in an article. We also already have enough to develop a quality article in accordance with NBASIC (). Keep: as meeting NBASIC by the sources indicated by that are articles on Barouch. Please also note that there is absolutely no BLP concern. Keep: per the references provided by BeanieFan, which establish notability. Keep: The references found by BeanieFan11 seem enough to meet GNG. Verdict: (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

19:02 Thought colonization. Nominated: Fails WP:NEO, not mentioned in the only source. ~ Delete: per WP:NOTMADEUP. I can't access the one relevant source, but even if it did mention the term, we would typically require more than that. Delete: Lack of sourcing. –  \lor Delete: as nominated, per wp:neo and WP:NOTMADEUP. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. Probably WP:TOOSOON. Delete: Fails WP:V. Verdict: ♠♠ Merged into another page.

12:59 Gummadi Anuradha. Nominated: Not seeing any indication that this unsuccessful political candidate is notable. Delete: as she does not pass general notability or has significant coverage. Fails WP:NPOL Delete: Clearly fails NPOL. Redirect: candidates for political office are not automatically notable, although a redirect might be appropriate to the election article, 2023 Telangana Legislative Assembly election. Verdict: to 2023 Telangana Legislative Assembly election. as a viable ATD Merged into another page.

12:44 John Duncan (California politician). Nominated: There's no evidence that this subject meets WP:GNG as it's clearly not presumed notable under NPOL, neither did a cursory search revealed anything better. Support: analyzed news sources cited: Keep: Meets WP:Basic. I think the coverage is sufficient. If it were entirely local then I could lean towards delete. But many of the sources are not local, and it is unwise to throw out the entire article because he has more local citations than not. There are also sources that are not news organizations, and those should not be ignored either in this discussion. Delete: I don't see any impact that his political career has had outside of the city of Coronado, California - which is listed as having a 2020 population of 20K. I don't know what these "not local" sources are, but if that is a reference to media based in San Diego that is local to Coronado because Coronado is a small suburb of San Diego and all of the major media (TV, radio) is based in San Diego. Inewsource is located in San Diego and the Environmental Health Coalition is in National City, which is an area of greater San Diego. Delete: I do not see any coverage of what the subject has accomplished in office. We want to see local officials substantially covered in the press, and ideally from sources that show their impact (beyond they were mayor/councilmember) and that is not present. The San Diego Union Tribune article is not about the subject but about one action the subject took. Delete:

The best sources I can find are Coronado Eagle and Journal and The Coronado News. The second has a biography that is WP:SIGCOV, but both look to be heavily interview-based. There are not enough sources here. ? Delete: per WP:MILL - mayor of a suburb of 20,000 people. Verdict: Merged into another page.

19:04 DJ Carcious. Nominated: Promotional page for a non-notable Ghanaian DJ. Sources are WP:ROUTINE and/or WP:TRIVIALMENTION coverage of minor industry awards for DJs ([https://musicinafrica.net/magazine/ghana-dj-awards-2023-all-winners/, [https://yfmghana.com/yfms-dj-carcious-bags-two-nominations-for-ghana-dj-awards-2023/, [https://www.ghanaweb.com/GhanaHomePage/entertainment/See-full-list-of-winners-at-the-2023-Guinness-Ghana-DJ-Awards-1887977, promo coverage (not reviews) of his work in unreliable sources ([https://beatznation.com/albums/dj-carcious-the-chronicles-1/, [https://www.nydjlive.com/dj-carcious-releases-new-single-esther-boasts-collaboration-with-medikal-bogo-blay/, primary source links to his music ([https://music.apple.com/ca/album/la-ti-do-feat-strongman-single/1677675262), and, randomly, a photo of the subject. No evidence that he passes WP:GNG or WP:NMUSIC. Delete: Per nom's rationale and also fails WP:PROMO. Verdict: Merged into another page.

11:45 Battle of Nioaque. Nominated: This skirmish appears not to have received significant coverage in multiple reliable sources, although the Maestri text does appear to give it coverage, albeit under a different name. It is part of a series of articles on Paraguayan military topics which are poorly sourced, moved to draft, and then moved back unchanged to mainspace. Delete: this is probably the same subject matter as the First Retreat, as I earlier had discussed with here. Either way, this battle does not meet WP:GNG. Delete: probably for lack of extensive coverage. Verdict: Merged into another page.

10:59 College stort. Nominated: Redirect with no links that is an obvious typo for College sport. Would be obvious why it is a red link and where it should point to in any old versions of articles that use this link. Verdict: Please go to the RfD (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

19:19 2020 Clemson vs. Notre Dame football game. Nominated: I propose merging into 2020 Notre Dame Fighting Irish football team and 2020 Clemson Tigers football team. I do not believe this passes WP:GNG; It seems the entire basis of notability for this article relies on the fact that this was Notre Dame's first win over a #1-ranked team since 1993. I don't think "X program earns their first win over a #1-ranked team in X years" is a good enough basis for making an article about a game unless it is something like when Vanderbilt beat #1 Alabama for their first win over a #1 team in program history in 2024. What further diminishes the significance of this article was the fact that the two teams met again in the 2020 ACC Championship Game, and Clemson won and made the playoff and everything, so Clemson losing this game ultimately didn't really matter. Delete: per nom. Individual games can and should be covered in the relevant team season articles, i.e., 2020 Notre Dame Fighting Irish football team. As a matter of editorial discretion, we should only allow single-game stand-alone articles for something truly extraordinary. This game does not rise to that level. (BTW, the COVID-shortened 2020 Notre Dame season already has two other stand-alone game articles: 2020 ACC Championship Game and 2021 Rose Bowl. Three individual game articles for Notre Dame's COVID season is just too much.) Delete: Top-ranked teams lose sometimes, that doesn't mean a standalone article beyond the teams' season articles is needed. Don't be scared of adding prose to the season pages. Delete: after merging into the season's article. I do not see any significant notability to the game. As mentioned above, special games such as major bowl appearances could meet GNG.. this does not. Delete: doing a Google search post-2022, I'm not seeing sustained SIGCOV; plenty of mentions, but none of it significant. Verdict: to 2020 Notre Dame Fighting Irish football team. Merged into another page.

09:46 Draft:Nasty (film). Nominated: I propose merging to Draft:Nasty (upcoming film) because they are one and the same movie by the same cast, crew and studio. This article is simply not up to the same standard as the Target page, so i belive it makes the most sense. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-05

07:46 Mahanayak (2007 film). Nominated: YouTube, Spotify, and Gaana links are not reliable source to support notability, fails WP:NFILM. Weak Keep: There seems to be just about enough information to keep this film. Although one is a passing mention, the other articles have the film mentioned twice and thrice, respectively. Verdict: Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

19:32 Shradha Sharma. Nominated: All the references are on her company Yourstory, and nothing has changed since previous afd. If anyone can find 3 in-depth SIRS then I would happy to withdraw this nomination. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. This is lacking good sources, and, Forbes is deprecated. As I have written before, "Forbes is a crust of a shell of a carcass of a formerly reliable source." Delete: Apart from Forbes, The Hindu contains two non-quote paragraphs on her, which is too brief. The other three sources are about a viral video of her, which I don't think should be a basis we rely on to determine the inclusion criteria of businesspeople. Other coverage includes various listicles that led to this page being kept in 2016, but are now not deemed in-depth enough. Verdict: Merged into another page.

03:33 Team Soho. Nominated: This article was redirected following an AFD 6 months ago. It was restored with some changes. According to Justiyaya: "PSM 2 Issue 07 seems to give sufficient coverage on its creative process as well as the IGN article with coverage of their mocap work". But going by WP:NCORP, creative coverage is generally not sufficient. Further, the crediting appears to be WP:Original research? Restore redirect: I believe what IgelRM meant is that notability is not inherited from coverage of a specific game they did, in this case, The Getaway. A company must pass WP:CORPDEPTH and it doesn't seem that this one does. Keep: Per the improved source as referenced in the nomination. Wikipedia:WikiProject Video games/Reference library/Edge also shows that it is featured in Issue 89, which has access to. As previously mentioned at Wikiproject Video Games, I find it ridiculous that companies behind notable creative works in video games are treated differently to WP:ARTISTS and WP:BANDs, where we have no problem in the creative inheriting notability from their works. The previous redirect as noted above was useless and made Wikipedia worse. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-11

07:10 Augustus Media. Nominated: Company article that does not meet WP:NCORP. The sourcing is mostly trade-press announcements of routine activity (registration, a franchise deal, a studio move, a $400K debt raise, city launches), which fall under WP:CORPDEPTH and WP:ORGTRUST. Other citations are non-independent (the company's own site and its Lovin Dubai outlet) or don't support the text. A WP:BEFORE search found no further in-depth independent coverage. Delete. Delete: Fails WP:NCORP. City launches, an acquisition and a $400,000 debt raise in regional trade press are the routine announcements WP:CORPTRIV excludes. Delete: Very confusing article. It raises questions about being that specific. Delete: This is a company therefore GNG/WP:NCORP requires at least two deep or significant sources with each source containing "Independent Content" showing in-depth information on the company. "Independent content", in order to count towards establishing notability, must include original and independent opinion, analysis, investigation, and fact checking that are clearly attributable to a source unaffiliated to the subject. I'm unable to identify any references that meet the criteria for establishing notability. Delete: we are not CrunchBase. Sources stink. Verdict: ♠♠ Merged into another page.

08:49 Aura Creations. Nominated: Does not demonstrate notability. The first creation was moved to draft for lack of sourcing and hours later it was recreated and deleted via A7, and just hours later, again it was recreated Delete: It's very short and has only four sources cited. Doesn't meet WP:NOTABILITY. Delete: This is a company therefore GNG/WP:NCORP requires at least two deep or significant sources with each source containing "Independent Content" showing in-depth information on the company. "Independent content", in order to count towards establishing notability, must include original and independent opinion, analysis, investigation, and fact checking that are clearly attributable to a source unaffiliated to the subject. I'm unable to identify any references that meet the criteria for establishing notability. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-12

02:54 SMA Negeri 1 Wringinanom. Nominated: Fails in GNG and WP:NSCHOOL. My BEORE in English and the native tongue yielded non-independent routine sports event coverage and social media handles....none of which constitute SIGCOV and hence don't warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: Fails NSCHOOL. Delete: Not notable enough to have an article of its own. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-03

19:41 Imaginando. Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP and WP:AD-MASQ. This article was erroneously moved from the draftspace by in 2024, mere days after an AfC reviewer had rejected it as non-notable, following previous similar rejections. The article lacks significant coverage of the company itself beyond an WP:INDISCRIMINATE recounting of its products and promotional history. — Weak keep: I think it scrapes past WP:NCORP. Keep: The company appears to have received coverage in third-party publications, including coverage of its products. The current article may need substantial cleanup, better sourcing, and removal of promotional material, but those are editorial issues. The absence of readily available English-language sources does not by itself establish that the company lacks notability, particularly for a Portuguese company where relevant coverage may be in Portuguese. Delete: Classic prosline spammy company article. It's very telling how all three of the keep !voters above have relatively little experience and how none of them have answered the call to do a source assessment. Verdict: Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

07:27 Montgomery Blencowe. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Lovi Poe again because the prior AfD suffered from poorly reasoned votes from accounts with little prior AfD participation, signs of COI editing, and LLM-generated comments. Delete: The subject doesn't qualify based on their science contributions and they do not qualify based (solely) off their film production credits. That leaves WP:GNG. The three articles below are what I can find that are WP:SIGCOV, however, I don't have high confidence in their use as reliable sources. Keep: The article now has substantially stronger sourcing and supports a standalone biography under WP:NCREATIVE and the broader notability criteria. Keep: based on the updated citations and facts added to the page. It would appear that the criteria are met to be a standalone page WP:NCREATIVE and WP:GNG. — (•) has made few or no other edits outside this topic. Strong delete: Fails GNG, can barely find any sources that aren't social media or IMDB. Verdict: Merged into another page.

07:20 Patriots of the Romanian People. Nominated: Lack of notability. Only sources are non-independent (party site or press releases taken by local press) Delete: microscopically small and fringe political party. Has only won only one mayoralty, in a small town of 1,500 people. Verdict: Undecided.

2026-09-12

02:38 Voting Rights Lab. Nominated: Same exact issues with the article as the last time. Over a quarter of the references were used in the last version of the article. The article doesn't qualify for WP:G4 because it's not substantially identical to the deleted version. (/) Verdict: Despite the nominator dominating discussion, the others have consensus. Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

06:00 Siege of Mukha. Nominated: I propose merging to Mansur ad-Din of Adal because this article does not satisfy WP:GNG or WP:NEVENT. It cites the works of Pankhurst 1997, Budge and Morié 1904, all short excerpts from larger surveys, which seem to rely on the same medieval source by al-Maqrizi. The Zewde work is only a review of Pankhurst's book, and the second Budge citation is a reprint of the same 1928 work. The Prelude gives an account of the claimed Battle of Yedaya, where according to this version Dawit I is killed, though he actually died on 6 October 1413 (Getatchew 1983, JES 16; Kaplan 2002, Aethiopica 5, pp. 73-74, 87). After searching Google Books, Scholar, JSTOR, no substantial discussion was found in independent reliable sources. "Verifiable" does not mean "notable"; see Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/2nd Battle of Yedaya (deletion decision). The information is duplicated in Mansur ad-Din of Adal, so this page can be merged into it. Merge: per nominator's rationale. Merge: per nom. Merge: per nom. Verdict: to Mansur ad-Din of Adal. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

05:42 Battle of Yedaya (1422). Nominated: Does not meet Wikipedia's notability guidelines or notability guidelines for events. Two sources cover the battle itself (Pankhurst 1997, p. 57; Budge, p. 302), though these are short passages in larger surveys, both based on one medieval source, Kitab al-Ilmam by al-Maqrizi. All other sources are cited for Dawit's date of death, not the battle. The infobox has Dawit I as commander, but he died on 6 October 1413 (Getatchew 1983, JES 16; Kaplan 2002, Aethiopica 5, pp. 73-74, 87), nine years before the alleged battle, so the Ethiopian commander cannot be identified. After searching Google Books, Scholar, JSTOR, no substantial discussion was found in independent reliable sources. "Verifiable" is not synonymous with "notable"; see Wikipedia:Articles for deletion/2nd Battle of Yedaya (deletion result). Delete, or redirect to Mansur ad-Din of Adal. Delete: for lack of extensive coverage about the battle itself. Verdict: Merged into another page.

05:31 Top Trumps Adventures. Nominated: Let's redirect Top Trumps Adventures and its subpages Top Trumps Adventures: Dogs and Dinosaurs and Top Trumps Adventures: Horror and Predators to Top Trumps. There is no secondary sourcing and I cannot find anything online about these games that could not be addressed in an 'Other media' subsection on the main page. Redirect all: clearly not notable; none of them pass GNG on their own. In solidarity, (?) Redirect: to Top Trumps per nom – the nominated article carries no citations at all (WP:V). Verdict: to Top Trumps. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

09:44 Brachystigma wrightii. Nominated: I propose merging to Brachystigma because WP:MONOTYPICFLORA Merge: As per POWO this is the only species in the genus, hence article should be under the genus name following WP:MONOTYPICFLORA. Verdict: to Brachystigma. Merged into another page.

13:00 Gian Galang. Nominated: Nigh-orphaned page about a fairly obscure illustrator. Definitely a working artist with a decent portfolio, but nowhere close to qualifying for WP:ARTIST, with basically no coverage in RSeS. Delete: Some brief mentions about the coin nothing to show notability. Not listed in the Getty ULAN [<https://www.getty.edu/vow/ULANServlet?english=Y&find=-Gian+Galang&role=&page=1&nation=>]. I don't see a pass at any artistic criteria. Keep: based on what's available. I added one source. Keep: Passes notability, also @ helped the article by adding a source. Verdict: Consensus is there are just enough sources. Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

04:44 Oblitus mortis. Nominated: Unfortunately fails WP:GNG. The only source cited is a El Diario listicle; the La Prensa source merely reports on that article without adding anything of value. I am unable to find anything other than a DualShockers listicle entry () which adds some description but is not very in depth nor considered reliable at WP:VG/S. This may be a WP:NONENG situation but I don't see any reviews or in-depth coverage. Keep:: Other sources include the following:. Weak Keep: NoonIcarus is a deletion editor after my own heart. I found this one . Delete: per nom, all coverage is from unreliable sources, is primary, or is trivial coverage. Verdict: Undecided.

2026-09-11

07:15 Tabnine/ Nominated: Company/product article of questionable notability under WP:NCORP. The bulk of the sourcing (TechCrunch, Calcalist, Globes, Tech.eu, NoCamels, Silicon Canals, IT Brief, StartupHub, Analytics Drift, MarTech Cube, SiliconANGLE) covers funding rounds, the Codota-TabNine acquisition, and the rebrand. That is standard routine coverage under WP:CORPDEPTH and is largely based on company announcements, so it fails WP:ORGIN. Other sources are self-published (the original developer's blog) or low-quality (Make Tech Easier, a personal-use review). The article itself is essentially a funding timeline with user-count claims and adds little encyclopedic content. Delete, or alternatively redirect to AI-assisted software development Weak keep: I think it meets WP:NCORP. The Verge wrote a full piece on it in 2019, The Economist opened its 2021 story on AI coding with it, and Geektime and TheMarker covered how it works in 2022 and 2023. Keep: (selectively) as suggested by above. Thank you for the expert input! Verdict: Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

03:11 Parle Tilak Vidyalaya Marathi Medium Secondary School. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Keep: per this and this. Just enough to save the page. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Keep: based on sources found by BhikhariInformer. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

03:08 Sir Cowasjee Jehangir High School. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Delete: I am really surprised to see that there is barely any significant coverage for a 150+ years old school....just some directorial listings out there. Ping me if useful sources are located. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

03:06 Sheth N L High School. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Redirect: to Malad#Educational institutes — Found nothing with SIGCOV in additional searches to warrant standalone notability. Still, ping me if useful sources are located. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Redirect: to Malad#Educational institutes per above. Verdict: to Malad#Educational institutes. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

03:05 Michael High School, Kurla. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Keep: as per the sources mentioned by . although some sources are not so significant, use caution while using them. Keep: per the 2nd Indian Express source and the pdf attached by Tiven2240. The remaining ones can be used to expand the article, but I won't count them as SIGCOV....they are either trivial mentions or interviews. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Keep: as per the multiple reliable newspaper sources coverage identified in this discussion which together shows a pass of WP:GNG so that deletion is unnecessary in my view, Keep: per sources presented above by . Satisfies notability of the school. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

03:02 NES High School. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Redirect: to Bhandup#Schools — Additional searches yielded some directories and lots of false positives....but nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. Still, ping me if useful sources are located. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete.: No reliable independent sources provide significant coverage of the school. The article relies mainly on primary sources and directories, so it does not meet WP:GNG or WP:NSCHOOL. A redirect could be considered, but there is no substantial sourced content to preserve. Verdict: to Bhandup#Schools. Merged into another page.

2026-09-12

01:16 Light Brick Studio. Nominated: I propose merging to Lego#Video games because I am not convinced WP:NOPAGE has been followed here. Light Brick Studio may have gone independent in 2020, but it has only ever made Lego games, and only a couple at that. Information about it could easily be merged into the video games section of the Lego article. If anything is split off, a full prose article about Lego (video game series) or Lego video games would likely be far more appropriate, encompassing all past and present Lego dev teams. Keep: I think there is enough for an article here, although your suggestion of a general Lego video games article aside from the list is a very good idea. Keep: Sufficient independent sigcov. Keep: Passes WP:SIGCOV, disagree with nom's rationale. Keep: I disagree, it would be an awkward merge and would harm WP:READABILITY. Delete: This is a company therefore GNG/WP:NCORP requires at least two deep or significant sources with each source containing "Independent Content" showing in-depth information on the company. "Independent content", in order to count towards establishing notability, must include original and independent opinion, analysis, investigation, and fact checking that are clearly attributable to a source unaffiliated to the subject. None of the sources in the article meet NCORP criteria and I'm unable to identify any references that meet the criteria for establishing notability. If any of the Keep !voters above disagree, please point to specific paragraphs/pages which contain in-depth independent content about the company (not one of their games) that isn't a press release or an article that relies entirely on interview or information from the company. Verdict: Undecided.

00:03 Christian Lundahl. Nominated: I cannot find any independent sources to support the claim that Mr. Lundahl passes one of the criteria in WP:NACADEMIC. Weak keep: His Google Scholar profile is at first sight unimpressive (h = 23). However, most of his well cited article are in Swedish, and must surely attract fewer readers than they might in English. 683 citations for an article in Swedish strikes me as pretty good. Keep: It is likely that he passes some other WP:NACADEMIC criteria too, but I think 7.a. of the specific criteria can be firmly demonstrated. () Verdict: Withdrawn. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

06:47 NOW Party. Nominated: Lack of notability. Minimal coverage, mostly based on party's own communication. Delete: There are no reliable sources establishing even the basic facts about this party. There is nothing verifiable to preserve or merge, so deletion is appropriate. Delete: per WP:TNT, regardless of notability. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-11

16:18 Xentral ERP Software. Nominated: Mildly promotional page for a non-notable German private software company. None of the coverage qualifies for WP:CORPDEPTH. It's all WP:CORPTRIV (capital raises and the like), press-release-based non-independent coverage, trivial mentions, database and user-generated sources and the like. Keep: refs in the article are weak, agreed, but once you look past the funding rounds there's quite a bit Keep: Meets WP. The Spiegel business magazine article is an independent, in-depth source focused entirely on the company and provides substantial coverage, including critical reporting on its customers and revenue. This is sufficient to establish notability. Keep: I've added the independent sources. That's independent, in-depth, critical coverage of the company itself over several years, so WP:CORPDEPTH and WP:SIRS are met. Verdict: The consensus below is that there is sufficient coverage in independent, reliable sources to support an article. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

20:27 Glossary of the study of the caste system in India. Nominated: Likely LLM-generated article that isn't a "glossary" at all; it's a list of books on caste and authors who have written on the subject (plus a few keywords like in an actual glossary). Essentially edited by a single user since creation last year. Fails WP:NOLLM, WP:N-

LIST and WP:SYNTH. Delete: This isn't a glossary, and it's not likely to be helpful to users. Delete: Not an actual glossary but a trivial collection of few words. Verdict: Merged into another page.

01:52 Laura Sirot. Nominated: Does not meet notability requirements. It seems as if this was made because of her current campaign, however, she does not meet WP:NPOL and her other career mentions do not lead her to meet WP:GNG. If she were to win the election and have WP:SIGCOV, then a page would make more sense at that time. Delete.: Unimpressive profile on Google Scholar, with citations -- never very high -- decreasing steadily since 2019. Redirect: to 2026 Ohio Senate election#District 31. Redirect: as above. Redirect: candidates for political office are not automatically notable, although a redirect might be appropriate to the election article. Because 2026 rhymes with 2006, it's possible that she could win. Verdict: to 2026 Ohio Senate election#District 31. (non-admin closure) (Ping me or else I won't see it) Merged into another page.

01:35 Marshall Rawson. Nominated: Does not meet WP:NPOL as a candidate. If the subject wins the election, and receives WP:SIGCOV, then a page would be more justified. Delete: The motivation of this article is from news coverage that started a week ago. (The current sources from The Independent and The New Republic draw from original reporting from Talking Points Memo). This falls into WP:BIO1E and WP:LASTING concerns. Unless/until there is more sustained coverage, this is too soon. ? Redirect: candidates for political office are not automatically notable, although a redirect might be appropriate to the election article. Verdict: Editors can redirect the page if they wish. Merged into another page.

2026-09-11

15:16 Ibuchi Chukwu. Nominated: Does not meet WP:SPORTSIGCOV: . The only non-database source which provides significant coverage is an article from his team, which is thus not independent. Delete: no evidence of notability. If sources are found which show significant coverage please ping me. Weak keep: Meets WP:SPORTSIGCOV per Gazeta Sporturilor. Weak keep: the source provided by Pollia plus sources like [https://www.gsp.ro/fotbal/liga-1/u-cluj-al-saselea-transfer-al-verii-goodnews-ibuchi-chukwu-jr-948373.html suggests there is probably just enough here for a GNG pass. Keep: Per new sources found. Keep: per WP:HEY and , whom I trust on football matters. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

20:40 Bibliography of tourism. Nominated: Really random list of books, why were “Using Computers in Hospitality” from 2005 and “Tourism Information Technology” from 1997 included here? No inclusion criteria or encyclopedic relevance to this selection of outdated publications. Lean keep: Interesting article, I haven’t stumbled across many like it. I lean keep, as this appears to function as a page split from Tourism, and mostly follows the recommendations at Wikipedia:WikiProject Bibliographies#Recommended structure. It would be nice to have clear inclusion criteria, but otherwise this seems encyclopedically useful. Cheers, Merge to Tourism#Bibliography: I’ve never really been a fan of separate bibliography articles like this. We are, after all, not a directory. But outright deletion here is overkill to me. Someone more in the know with this topic is likely needed to work out a selection criteria, and then determine which of these (mostly) decades-old books are actually relevant to Wikipedia. Keep: The current list definitely needs cleanup and much clearer inclusion criteria, but I don’t think that is a reason to delete it. Keep: part of our “top secret hidden agenda” is (in effect) to be a place where our users can find secondary sources. Our obvious and clear mission is to create an encyclopedia that is crowd sourced, unbiased, and verified by significant coverage. A secondary use for our website is to help everyone, but especially secondary education students, to find secondary sources that they can trust. I’ve created lesson plans for 8th grade through college that explicitly teach students how to research, which runs counter to the usual paradigm of “start with primary sources first”. Instead, start a research project with tertiary sources such as a dictionary or Wikipedia, then secondary sources such as college textbooks, and finally primary sources such as scholarship. It’s the same idea as writing an article here by starting with sources. Thus, we act as if we are a bibliography as well as an encyclopedia. AfD is not for clean up, and we folks in the in the Northeast have two full rain days to fix the worst of the issues identified. Keep: There are many articles like this, so we even have MOS:BIBLIO. Regarding WP:NLIST, this page serves an informational purpose, as NLIST says, . Also the topic has received coverage. Merge: to Tourism#Bibliography. The present article has no parameters. You could just keep adding books and journals without any rationale. I can't see how to write the parameters to narrow the article down to a manageable list of relevant books and journals. Verdict: The list has been edited and shortened by Bearian from September 26 onward. Earlier opinions may no longer fully apply. A new merger proposal remains possible if still desired. Merged into another page.

20:44 Douglas R. Docker. Nominated: Despite the sheer number of sources, I'm unable to find any 3rd party reliable sources with significant coverage. I see that some notable names have collaborated with him, but that's not sufficient for WP:MUSIC notability. Delete: No evidence of notability. When I searched this up, most of my results were unreliable sources or Wikipedia mirror sites. ?Stalking eagle Keep: There are coverages of him to pass WP:SIGCOV - . Delete: I couldn't find any reliable source coverage of the subject or his projects. I'm not convinced that the two sources above constitute significant coverage. Delete: Fails WP:NMUSIC per above. The sources raised by are not significant coverage. Delete: for lacking coverage and notability. Also apparent COI. Verdict: ♠♠ Merged into another page.

SATURDAY 19 SEPTEMBER

20:28 Tina Wamala. Nominated: Ugandan PR manager (BLP). Sources are routine bios or primary news sources of a routine or trivial kind. I don't see anything rising to the level of sustained coverage of her in reliable secondary sources independent of her, as required for WP:BASIC. Communications Officers of embassies are not normally notable. Delete: Seems to be a women doing her job as a communications and PR consultant and is anybody surprised when the refs are PR. Checked the first 6. Rest are routine announcements of employment. No indication of significance. Delete: worth noting how thin the list is: one entry is a ChimpReports tag page, another is a photo caption, and three of the Monitor items are about Chevening alumni projects rather than about her. The remainder covers her election and handover as PRAU president (WP:BASIC). Verdict: Merged into another page.

20:42 Aksum Group. Nominated: Non-notable defence contractor. The sourcing falls far short of WP:NCORP. We have paid placement/sponsored/promotional content ([<https://brightuz-bekistan.uz/en/new-military-industrial-company-aksum-in-uzbekistan/>, [<https://www.ibtimes.co.uk/international-business-man-ulugbekhon-maksumov-powers-aksum-group-1724342>) or press-release-based non-independent content in WP:TRADES ([<https://www.armyrecognition.com/news/defense-web-tv/aksum-marine-brings-chaser-980-and-1200-next-gen-armored-patrol-boats-to-idex-2025>, [<https://gulfnews.com/business/corporate-news/aksum-marine-inkas-vehicles-to-participate-at-world-police-summit-1.1643625288204>, [<https://web.archive.org/web/20230518061131/https://daryo.uz/en/2023/02/23/uzbek-lavs-blaze-trail-at-idex-2023-military-exhibition/>]). Promotional content about an Uzbek company in a Nigerian newspaper is an obvious sign of paid placement. There is basically nothing in this article (or elsewhere per my BEFORE search) that is anything close to WP:CORPDEPTH and thus this subject fails WP:NCORP. I also suspect LLM involvement in the prose given the presence of WP:AISIGNS and the inclusion of a non-existent, never-archived reference URL. Delete: per nom, and to add: four of the twelve citations are Army Recognition write-ups of the group's stands at IDEX 2023, IDEX 2025 and Eurosatory 2026, and the Gulf News item sits in that paper's corporate-news section. Exhibition and press-release coverage is not WP:NCORP depth. Delete: per WP:TNT. WP:LLM use is unacceptable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

20:51 Borg (cluster manager). Nominated: I propose merging to Kubernetes because this article is a dictionary entry at best and certainly doesn't demonstrate WP:GNG. Even if notability was established, this article is not enough, and wouldn't even be enough information for a lead. Keep: Seems fine to me, and a quick search suggests that sources likely exist to meet WP:GNG. Here's some example coverage: Verdict: Withdrawn. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:04 Beverly Randolph. Nominated: I propose draftifying because the article contains no reliable sources and does not currently show notability under WP:GNG. I previously tagged it under WP:A7, but the tag was removed. The article was also previously deleted via PROD in 2011 due to notability concerns (deletion log). In its current state, it is not ready for mainspace. Verdict: Not sure why this was even brought to AFD; situations like this should just result in draftification regardless. Merged into another page.

2026-09-13

08:27 Caitlin Spice. Nominated: Tenuous notability. Woeful refs. Book may be notable. Not an activist. Fails WP:SIGCOV, WP:BIO on a WP:BLP. Delete: Changed my vote to delete based on the very reasonable request from Caitlin Spice. Keep: various sources establishing notability here, and regarding the NPOV, deletion is not cleanup. Delete: Have put some thought into this and I don't think it's a straightforward question, but I don't think I can vote keep. To my mind, the Stuff/SST article does support WP:GNG. The problem is I don't think anything else contributes to GNG, nor does she meet other subject-specific notability guidelines such as WP:NAUTHOR. Reviewing the other sources in the article: Verdict: Courtesy to the subject per WP:BLPREQUEST overrules any finicking over GNG/SIGCOV. ♠♠ Merged into another page.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

23:33 Immigrant entrepreneurship. Nominated: Potentially LLM written article that's mostly just an essay about a vague and broad topic instead of an article about a well established concept. "Immigrant entrepreneurship" can be anything. Delete: per WP:NEWLLM. The topic is notable, but the article is AI-generated. Verdict: Undecided.

23:30 In Case of Emergency, Release Raptor. Nominated: Suggest a redirect to Arcen Games. This is a non-notable game that has no reviews on Metacritic/MobyGames as it was pulled from sale after three days on Steam. RPS, PC Gamer and TechRaptor have some announcement coverage and some coverage on the game being pulled but a game that was barely released and never evaluated fails WP:SUSTAINED and WP:ONEEVENT. The delisting is interesting but can easily be addressed in the context of the Arcen Games article as there's not much else to say. The article is a stub with nothing to merge. Delete: Unconvinced this passes WP:GNG, but also don't believe Arcen Games passes WP:NCORP, there is some major WP:REFBOMBing going on there. Delete: non-notable game. Plus, one of the two sources on the article is from TechRaptor, which prior to 2018 is unreliable per WP:VG/S. In solidarity, (?) Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:27 Child Care Management System. Nominated: Out of the 7 google news hits, only the 1st one refers to this Australian system. It seems the same term is used in the USA. Fails GNG. Delete: The article lacks sufficient independent, reliable sources providing significant coverage of the subject. Most of the available material is routine or primary-source information, so it does not meet WP:GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

23:27 Jay Roxxx. Nominated: This does not seem to meet WP:NSINGER. Jay Roxxx has only released one album (PRINCESA, an album whose songs were not charted), which convinces me that this singer and the album are both not notable. There doesn't seem to appear to be any more reliable sources for Jay Roxxx: the current sources as of now are unreliable. — ;/?/? Weak Delete: main article and delete PRINCESA album. Main article fails WP:NSINGER and WP:GNG. Compiling sources from the article and a WP:BEFORE search, most of them don't qualify for WP:RS being non-independent primary press releases or interviews composed mostly of quotes (see 1 for example). The Calexico Chronical source seems fine, and I'm on the fence for the Latinitas article. However, two sources aren't enough to establish notability. For the album, it cleanly fails WP:NALBUM, lacking secondary sources and reviews covering it (at least as far as I could find). Weak Delete: "Weak" votes may not help with consensus too much, and she may earn more notability in the not-too-distant future. I would not be opposed to keeping the article if anyone can dig up some more useful sources, but for now my conclusion is too soon. The two news items already used in the article (Calexico Chronicle, Latinitas magazine) are a good start showing that she has gained some local coverage, but I can find nothing else and her current coverage does not (yet) add up to what we need for notability here. --- (|) Verdict: by an Admin per WP:G5. --- (|) Merged into another page.

23:19 California-Nevada-Hawaii District Key Club International.

Nominated: This article does not meet WP:GNG. I cannot find any sources that are not primary or are reliable. Of the non-primary sources in the article, two of them are Google Docs, and the other one is an Instagram post. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

2026-09-13

03:46 Andro (Meitei dialect). Nominated: I propose merging to Meitei language because this is a redundant regional fork / also an Over-detailed dialect page. Keep: I cannot access sources in the article, but I see no good reason to question whether they are sufficient for GNG, one is titled, A comparative study of Imphal Andro Koutruk and Kakching dialects of Meiteiron. This means maybe it would be better to have a page on Meitei dialects, but it is absent. The rationale also doesn't make sense, if this page is over-detailed, then how does merging it into higher-level article make the situation better? This would just result in the deletion of the encyclopedic content. Keep: Fully valid SPINOFF article. Enough coverage to demonstrate notability, enough substance that a merger would cause length and due weight issues. Verdict: Merged into another page.

03:43 Ancestors of Meitei confederacy. Nominated: The article lacks a lead definition, relies heavily on primary, self-published regional sources, and predatory journals Not opposed to a merger into Meitei confederacy or Yek Salai Merge: to Meitei confederacy per nom. Purely based on the title and the content present right now, I do not see how this page is not a subtopic of the target page and why they cannot be covered together. This page covers 7 clans, and these same clans are discussed, but in lesser detail, on the target page. Merge: as per nom. The content belongs to the Meitei confederacy article. Verdict: to Meitei confederacy. Merged into another page.

03:40 Meiteism. Nominated: I propose merging to Sanamahism because it just appears to be another fork Redirect: to Sanamahism. This article tries to justify its existence in the following way, , but the lead of the target defines it as so the terms appear to be basically synonymous. I also do not see anything worthy of merge. Redirect: to Sanamahism. The article comes from the Simple English Wikipedia rather than being forked from Sanamahism. It still carries :Category:Pages with unreviewed translations, links to :simple:Sanamahi Kachin, and has “Other websites” instead of “External links” as the English Wikipedia does, which indicates it has been poorly translated. That is why six pieces of literature are listed under “Other websites” instead of being cited correctly. The article states that Meitei Laining is seen as another name for Sanamahism. However, the difference mentioned, that Sanamahism also includes beliefs of the hill tribes, is simply a matter of defining the meaning of one term, and there is no need for a separate article for this. As for merging, there is nothing to merge, as Sanamahism does cover the subject. However, it may be worth adding the point taken from Chaki-Sircar’s book about the use of the term during the Meitei revival movement to the Sanamahism article, in case it is absent there. Redirect: as per nom. Verdict: to Sanamahism. Merged into another page.

03:35 Modern Meitei. Nominated: I propose merging to Meitei language because this is clearly a very redundant fork. Merging or redirecting avoids unnecessary content fragmentation. could not find anything to suggest this is any different Merge: to Meitei language. The article consists of three parts; the first is a lead with history, the second is a distinction table, and the third is literature. The first and third can easily be incorporated into the target. The second is sourced from a book titled “Medieval Tibeto-Burman Languages” and probably should (and actually is) be included in the Ancient Meitei language. Verdict: to Meitei language. Merged into another page.

02:20 District Institute of Education and Training, Siwan. Nominated: A professional training centre (not a degree-granting institution) for teachers; all sources are primary sources and I don't see any evidence in my BEFORE search of WP:GNG or WP:NORG-qualifying WP:SIRS. Delete: Additional searches yielded some trivial mentions....but nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: has no notability to pass WP:NSCHOOL. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-05

19:58 Bagrat de Bagration y de Baviera. Nominated: The article lacks significance. It presents only genealogical information. The source also mentions his relationship with the Spanish royal family, which adds no significance. Being a Knight of the Order of Malta without other achievements also adds no significance. Keep: if more sources can be find; if not, redirect to father's page instead of deletion. Redirect: as suggested, and as reasonable in these circumstances. I'm not sure about what the target should be. Keep: or merge with House of Mukhrani. No one in this discussion has brought up the Spanish article, which contradicts the nomination's claim that the article is about family trees. El Confidencial Digital published an obituary in April 2017 referring to La Opinión de Málaga, which states that Bagrat's father expressed his will that Bagrat should become the head of the House of Georgia after his own death in 1977, and that this caused a family dispute which was never resolved. The publication also gave the date of Bagrat's admission to the Order of Malta, 31 January 1980, and outlined his Georgian honours held since 1964. A claim regarding the headship of a former royal family is not genealogy. However, I should say that an obituary published in a monarchist publication does not constitute sufficient proof for the article to comply with WP:GNG by itself. If consensus reaches the opposite conclusion, the article should be merged into House of Mukhrani, since he belonged to that branch, and the succession dispute should be outlined there as well. Redirecting to the article about his father would not work, since the dispute concerns Bagrat himself. And one more comment: one of the opinions regarding redirection above came from a blocked sockpuppet. Verdict: Undecided.

00:26 Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalaya, Dakshin Dinajpur. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NSCHOOL Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#West Bengal — Additional searches yielded nothing with SIGCOV to warrant standalone notability. (Ping me or else I won't see it) Delete: ROTM, one of the non notable JNV articles on the wikipedia. Fails WP:NSCHOOL. Delete: clearly fails NSCHOOL for lack of third party coverage. Redirect: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#West Bengal as an WP:ATD. There were some reports of abuse in the school, but this is not enough for notability. Verdict: to List of Jawahar Navodaya Vidyalayas#West Bengal. Merged into another page.

04:11 Mr. Khamba. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NEVENT. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

04:12 Meetei Chanu. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NEVENT. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

05:07 Moronihah. Nominated: I spent some time searching, all sources about this character are from church owned sources. Independent reliable sources are required to establish notability, and this subject has none. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. I would not oppose a redirect to his father's article. Or a redirect to List of people in the Book of Mormon? Redirect: to Book of Mormon. This is clearly a religious figure only found in that book. — or redirect to List of people in the Book of Mormon Verdict: to List of people in the Book of Mormon#M as a sensible ATD. Merged into another page.

08:07 Hinduism in New Caledonia. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG, WP:SIGCOV. The article doesn't have significant coverage of Hinduism in New Caledonia. Delete: Does not meet GNG. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

11:18 Unity Christian High School (Barrie). Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NORG. Article has one (broken) primary source, and can't find any other sources that aren't random bits of routine coverage. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

12:15 Actor model and process calculi history. Nominated: Pretty clear violation of WP:ESSAY and WP:SYNTH. Very sparsely-referenced article that attempts to link two distinct computing theories. Was found through the AI Cleanup Wikiproject, although personally I don't think the article is AI-generated. Rather, it's just an essay with lots of bullet points and boldcase for emphasis. Delete: as WP:SYNTH (and, since the original author in 2008 was Hewitt, a dose of WP:PROMO too). It appears to be a split off another article that was itself taken over to Wikibooks. LLM use is not a concern, since the page has hardly changed since January 2022. This is human-made inappropriate writing. Delete: everybody should know that we have never published original research. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Pink certificate. Nominated: I propose merging to LGBTQ rights in Turkey because Merge: per WP:OVERLAP. Oppose: This is a somewhat long article, as is the target page, so there's not actually that much overlap and it would be a pretty long section if merged. It seems similar to other pages on Template:Sexual orientation and gender identity in the military. Oppose: Hello Dears :) as the article has a broader scope than just the - Pink certificate, it seems to deal with Turkish military's treatment of homosexuality in general, i think it simply needs a better name. Merging it, would do this article wrong. Something along the line of - Turkish military discharge certificate or Homosexuality in Turkish military Keep: per WP:GNG, which is a good enough reason on its own to oppose a merge. Regarding the rationale, 1. Turkish Wikipedia is not relevant. 2/4 are addressed by retitling to Sexual orientation in the Turkish military or something similar. 3. The topic by its broad nature receives sustained coverage. Keep: and rename Sexual orientation in the Turkish military per . It's a notable subject with solid references; it just needs to be renamed to the slightly broader subject. Verdict: Undecided.

00:00 Chuck's Choice. Nominated: Proposed merge: Chuck's Choice → Merge: as suggested, the show has only one season with 20 episodes, hardly any coverage its mostly a fan's catalog. Verdict: to List of WildBrain programs#Animated series. Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft merge. Editors are free to remove the articles from the merge backlog or reverse the merge by splitting the articles back out. (/) Merged into another page.

00:00 Vladislav Lukanin. Nominated: No indication of significance. Fails WP:SPORTBASIC on a WP:BLP. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. Weak keep: 2011 European champion, covered by Sovetsky Sport. — Preceding undated comment added Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 One-at coin. Nominated: I previously nominated this article for speedy deletion on WP:G15 basis, which failed. Why I believe this article was written by an LLM: Delete: I don't find any sources that talk about this, the half-pai either. I only get hits on the phrase... Numismata and wiktionary are not RS. I don't see notability here. Keep: It seems the concerns raised are regarding the content added on 21 May. In that case, at worst it should suffice to revert to the prior version from January without need for deleting the article, which is part of a series, the rest of which don't appear to have been flagged. Delete: I decided to look into the sourcing since Oaktree b brought it up. The article's sources are a journal article (is reliable), Numista (a not reliable WP:USERGENERATED website), Wiktionary (certainly not reliable), and Dema Coins, which seems to be a WP:SELF PUBLISHED website or blog by someone named Dema Yurii whose numismatic expertise I cannot find in any independent publications (although it does seem to provide in-depth coverage). I will note that much numismatic research is done by amateurs. I have looked for coverage in reliable sources (in English, I imagine there might be more in Thai), and have found only these: Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

00:00 Software transactional memory. Nominated: Performing the second AfD step on behalf of a temporary account as requested at WT:AFD § Request for AfD nomination for merging for Software transactional memory. I have no opinion on the actual proposal and won't watch this discussion. Merge: per TA. I looked at the page briefly and it appears that the subject can be hardware or software. For the latter we have a separate page, which can fit into the parent article. Verdict: to Transactional memory. Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft merge. Editors are free to remove the articles from the merge backlog or reverse the merge by splitting the articles back out. Merged into another page.

00:00 Dominik Thor. Nominated: Promo page on a self-declared academic. The page was recently improved from one without any reliable references, the PROD removed, but it still does not have any reasonable claim to notability. The subject has an h-factor of 7 and 343 cites, which is very small for any medical related topic, not close to a pass of WP:NPROF#C1. The claim is made that they are the president of a College, but there is no evidence that this is a significant university for a pass of WP:NPROF#C6 Delete: Little sign of the kind of impact we're looking for in NPROF C1, and I don't think the Geneva College of Longevity Science, an institution founded in 2024 counts for much. No other notability apparent. Delete: for lack of significant coverage and lack of passing any criteria for WP:PROF. Verdict: Merged into another page.

00:00 Ludmila Christeseva. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG, WP:N-BIO, WP:NCREATIVE. I feel kind of bad nominating this because she seems like a prolific artist and activist, such that it seems implausible that there isn't sufficient independent coverage for an article. But a BLP without independent secondary sources is just self-promotion. Keep: Based on the coverage found by the nominator and two above sources I mentioned. Also found Broadway-world review of the short film Weaving about Christeseva's work. I know wiki doesn't particularly love WP:BROADWAYWORLD for republishing press releases, but in this case the coverage seems to be original and reasonably written. Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

00:00 2024–25 Punjab State Super League. Nominated: This article has sat in the New Articles Backlog for 2 years. It shows no WP:SIGCOV in WP:RS on the page and I can find none online. I can't see this as a pass of WP:GNG. Redirect all to Punjab State Super League: As WP:ATD. Redirect: as above. Keep: there appears to be extensive coverage in the highly firewalled Punjabi media. But even some national media coverage too, such as . Verdict: to Punjab State Super League. Merged into another page.

20:55 G0.238-0.071. Nominated: None of the sources seem to establish notability, and AFAIK only one source seems to back up the high luminosity it is supposedly notable for. Keep: per . "Brightest star in the Milky Way" quite frankly feels like something we should just have. Keep: we should never forget our raison d'être, and this is the touchstone: "Is this a question for which a curious kid would expect to find an answer in any good encyclopedia?" "What is the brightest star in our galaxy?" is absolutely the sort of question a bright kid should ask of their favourite encyclopedia, and if we can't tell them the answer, we have failed.

Verdict: Undecided.

20:48 Zuleika Robson. Nominated: May be notable, but does not currently meet WP:NACTOR. IMDb is not a reliable source Verdict: Withdrawn. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

20:30 Catherine Healy (lawyer). Nominated: Fails WP:NPOL.

Delete: There also does not seem to be reporting on her except the race she lost. It's further diminished by results pointing to Catherine Healy, the activist. Delete: Notability is not inherited.

Delete: I went through a number of newspaper articles where, as one expects, her name appears in articles about crimes when she was a county assistant prosecutor. I didn't find anything actually about her, not even during the time she ran for office. Delete: Fails notability guidelines and lacks significant WP:RS media coverage.

Seems like an easy call to delete. Redirect: to Hudson County, New Jersey#Government. Fails WP:NBASIC for now. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-12

02:59 Tornado outbreak of August 9, 1993. Nominated: This outbreak fails WP:LASTING and WP:NOTABILITY and there appears to almost no coverage of anything about this event besides the initial few days. It can easily be covered in a small section within the Tornadoes of 1993 article, which it already is. Draftify: to Draft: List of United States tornadoes from July to September 1993. Delete: I agree with the logic of, this can be included in the Tornadoes of 1993 article, however that section should be expanded to include more due information from this article. Merge: As noted by Timcigar12, this can be covered within Tornadoes of 1993. I am suggesting a merge given that some of the lines in the August 9 event sub-section could be moved to Tornadoes of 1993 to give more detail. (At a minimum, I think it would be reasonable to move the following lines and their sources over with some slightly rewriting: "A mobile home was swept off its concrete slab and tossed a quarter of a mile. A farm home was also damaged." + "Multiple farm buildings were destroyed. Two people were injured when their car was slammed with debris.” Merge: to Tornadoes of 1993 per nom. The article is too old to be draftified and it is quite likely that no one would work on it once moved to the draft, so we would get a deletion by backdoor. Verdict: to Tornadoes of 1993#August 9. Some of the delete !votes are effectively calling for a merge, which normally requires us to keep the original content under a redirect for attribution. Merged into another page.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

20:19 Joe Cobb (mayor). Nominated: Fails WP:NPOL. No significant coverage in published reliable independent secondary sources. Keep: Cobb is notably the city's first gay mayor, published a book Our Family Outing: A Memoir of Coming Out and Coming Through and was previously a pastor. Sources exist such as 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15. Plus quite a big mention in this book. Roanoke has a population of about 100,000 and every mayor of Roanoke, Virginia since 1968 has a Wikipedia page. I am aware of WP:OTHERSTUFFEXISTS, but for comparison purposes, the city has a similar population to South Bend, Indiana (mayor: James Mueller), Green Bay, Wisconsin (mayor: Eric Genrich), Albany, New York (mayor: Dorcey Applrys), Asheville, North Carolina (mayor: Esther Manheimer), Tuscaloosa, Alabama (mayor: Walt Maddox) and Sandy Springs, Georgia (mayor: Rusty Paul). Verdict: Nomination withdrawn (WP:SK1A) (non-admin closure) Warm Regards, Merged into another page.

20:14 Software industry. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG as it contains no citations whatsoever. Again this article is just an older synonym for a software development company and having a separate page just creates an unnecessary content fork (WP:REDUNDANT). Verdict: as withdrawn by the nominator (SK1A) as the rationale given did not apply to this article (SK3). (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

19:38 All India Minorities Front. Nominated: Does not have significant coverage or established notability for a political party. Fails WP:ORG Delete: it fails WP:NPOL having sponsored a few candidates in legislative elections and won no seat with its 0.0...

votes performances in all the elections it contested in its lifetime. Delete: Sponsored some candidates and is somewhat active in politics, but not close to meeting GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-13

03:37 Meitei language in Assam. Nominated: I propose merging to Meitei language because this is clearly a very redundant fork. Merging or redirecting avoids unnecessary content fragmentation. could not find anything to suggest this is any different Keep: It has official status in the state and was also covered in these two papers, [https://web.archive.org/web/20250429065537/https://dr.ntu.edu.sg/bitstream/10356/178126/2/06%20mishra1999manipuris.pdf The Manipuris in the Barak Valley: a case study of language maintenance, Phonological Processes in Barak Valley Meitei. Barak Valley is the region of the state where the language is the most prevalent. The sources cover the subjects separately, which means we can do the same. Verdict: Merged into another page.

01:42 Meghna Agarwal. Nominated: Does not meet the requirements of WP:GNG The coverages are mostly routine including interviews, press releases, sponsored contents. There is no significant in-depth coverage required meeting notability standards. Keep: I think Forbes and Fortune enough to be considered to assessing her notability under the WP:GNG. Delete: as per nom, also the sources provided are not enough because these two sources are often have promotional material in it and have to used in addition to other sources to establish notability. Delete: we are not LinkedIn. With the exception if Fortune Indios, this is lacking good sources, and, as I've written before, "Forbes is a crust of a shell of a carcass of a formerly reliable source." Keep: The sources which are not discussed. SIGCOV can be inherited through WP:ANYBIO. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5 and 6 The references which provides significant coverage about the subject and she meets GNG. Delete: Among the 6 sources listed above, 1. Future IPO of her company, coverage is not about her. 2. Interview. 3. Content is submitted by third parties. 4. Paywalled, may or may not contribute to GNG. 5, 6. Interviews. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-05

19:46 Gallery Players. Nominated: Previously draftified and moved back to main with only minor improvements. TDF is a listing from a trade org and does not contribute to notability, other sources are just listings or routine, except for the Brooklyn Paper which lacks proper WP:AUD and is thin for SIGCOV. A source in the Brooklyn Rail contains SIGCOV and may satisfy AUD, but WP:NORG requires more. Perhaps other sources exist, so I propose draftification. Verdict: Withdrawn. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

18:01 Ruben Figueres. Nominated: lack of independent sources and notability, with no importance Delete: Fails WP:GNG by a large margin and lacks WP:RS media coverage. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. People who worked on Obama's campaigns could be independently notable - see David Axelrod and Terrence Tolbert - but not this consultant. I'm also concerned that this is probably created by the subject himself, and autobiographies are disfavored because they almost always have original content. But it's much worse now, because our critics, including powerful men from Boca Chica to Palm Beach, want to use any excuse to take away our charitable status, which would cripple us financially. Verdict: Consensus was unanimous to delete a not notable enough due to a lack of coverage. Merged into another page.

17:55 Emani 22. Nominated: A stub page about a deceased musician that lacks WP:GNG, WP:MUSICBIO and WP:REFERENCE, which makes it vulnerable for an AFD. ? (/) Keep: Meets WP:GNG and WP:SIGCOV, as she received numerous obituaries written by notable news agencies. She received notable obituaries from the news agencies People, TheWrap and Billboard. Her article provides biographical information about her, and as well about her career, and I also found a VoyageLA article from 2018. I also see that her article focuses more on her life and career in text.

Redirect: to A Love Letter to You 3 as an WP:ATD. I cannot find anything substantial except obits. The VoyageLA article linked above is an interview. Keep: She received so much coverage after her death for a reason. A redirect to A Love Letter to You 3 would not make sense as she had her own body of work, as the write up in Respect (magazine) shows: . Verdict: Undecided.

00:20 2026–27 Bayer 04 Leverkusen season. Nominated: A better-sourced version of this article already exists at Draft:2026–27 Bayer 04 Leverkusen season. Delete: per RossEvans19. Delete: I created the article in my sandbox and stupidly forgot to check to see if there was a draft. Time wasted, lesson learnt. Merge: the two in mainspace. Keep: per WP:HEY, content from the draft has been moved to the mainspace article. Keep: not sure why these would ever be a delete, with this article existing for every season, and a better sourced version in draft. Delete generally assumes that it wouldn't be notable with improvement, which the nomination actually implies otherwise. Verdict: If a history merge is still needed, that can be handled directly. Merged into another page.

02:51 Chester Kieffer. Nominated: Same issues as the previous AfD. This was moved back to mainspace with very little change and the few new sources that have been added still don't establish notability. (/) Draftify: Clear-cut WP:TOOSOON, routine race coverage but definitely with potential. Should make it clear to the article creator, though, that it would be best to put it through the AfC process for approval, rather than moving it into mainspace unilaterally again. Keep: Several local sources already in the article to scrape WP:SIGCOV. Moreover, Kieffer has had a storming rookie season in Porsche Supercup so WP:POTENTIAL is undeniably high. Keep: I think at this stage even if SIGCOV seems to be slightly borderline about Kieffer, I'd say he scrapes WP:NMO-SPORTS by taking overall podiums and clinching the rookie title in Porsche Supercup (the highest level of Carrera Cup competition) and an outright win in its German counterpart (widely regarded as the strongest of the various national Carrera Cup series). Keep: As previously stated, there are local sources used that scrape WP:SIGCOV. Kieffer won the rookie championship in Porsche Supercup which is not easy in the slightest. On top of that, he has two overall podiums in Supercup which is significant in its own right. I would say that it clearly meets WP:POTENTIAL based on his results in top level series', so draftifying it once more is not needed. — Preceding unsigned comment added by (•)

Keep: WP:SIGCOV is met due to the number of quality motor-sport sources (e.g. Feeder Series, Formula Scout, Porsche Newsroom) and local Luxembourgish sources. Kieffer's success in Porsche Supercup, as well as a recent race win in Porsche Carrera Cup Germany, make him a notable racecar driver. Weak keep: It's probably not as clear cut as some argue above, but he does seem to cross the notability threshold. Keep: There's not really an aggregator to Porsche Newsroom for the Porsche Super Cup Coverage because they are a support series of Formula 1 which is under FOM management which highly regulates and restricts their media paddock due to the vast amount of attention. They are the pinnacle of the Global Marquee Seasonal Sportscar Championships anyway (so across all manufacturers) so a straight decline of the primary source is not feasible when it is basically closed source on venue and unapproachable from an independent reporter source trying to enter coverage (Sportscar365 is a valid source but they have Porsche Carrera Cup reports for National and Continental but they have no Supercup section because they aren't in the F1 Paddock and have to aggregate from other sources and rewording from Porsche Newsroom is both a bit pointless and may not even be financially sustainable as a copyright fee outweigh their exposition they can get back from newspaper sales and ad revenue). Interviews have been generally dismissed because they weren't considered independent regardless of content, to me that is overlooking of journalistic deterministic work - Some Interviewers give away their questions in a pre-arrangement so the answer can be a pre-fabricated phrase that is just taped later but that is generally not the case especially not on lower division formulae which journalists keep on a tight timeframe regardless so it is an in the moment response and no pre-made fabrication both parties agreed on, so just because one side is on the article topics response does not automatically disqualifies them, even when it's not directly quoting from it, there still may be information sourced from it's information frame. I view results as a criteria for notability in sports, so he has the accolades to be included. Is it the sole reason ? Not necessarily - But it is a ladder system and at some point the notability of results should be recognized as a weighing factor, some domestic partial state or minor federal title in a youth tournament is not enough to be notable beyond the little regional bubble, it can be added in as a entry point when there have been later more significant and broadly accepted results and coverage that is a professional national title (as an adult), continental or worldwide entries in the high to mid range ladder and adjacency if it's not a title win then a Podium on an end classification table, that is either very selected to be an entry on at all due to previous shown promise and fulfilling results in lower or bordering professional ladder system steps or very close top positions in at least semi-professionalism capacity over minimum a season or and event that requires prolonged pre-exercising like the Olympics in a professional environment. Very much all the race coverage have been viewed as routine and dismissed, when it is essentially in the same style as with more prominent and eligible figures - at a certain point you cannot emphasize that it is too broad when it is in the same style as for other people that were and still are allowed and have been recognized as a prominent figure with significant coverage. When this one is rejected regardless of shown results, and coverage deemed as insignificant then it is very unclear what sourcing is required going forward because what even is considerable when it almost has to withstand scrutiny that requires scientific methods. A sole result table isn't enough to stand on it's own and Wikipedia isn't a Database, a sole article might not meet top journalistic criterie but having all this information aggregated clearly shows it is significant coverage to create the article, which isn't a stub lacking information, only just closely related to the topic (primary sourcing is not an exclusion criteria

if it's supplemented with secondary and tertiary sources). This article isn't just a database, it's not just a biography and not just an essay. If one uses the dissected source table and apply it to the Jamaica national bobsleigh team it can be skewed in the same direction if it would not have been a global phenomenon, they don't have the results to warrant notability but they have had a movie made about them that have an estimated 200 Million viewers and the general story is probably known to around 500 million people worldwide for their unique and obstacle way to entry, yet if you try and dissect the wiki article with the attitude that it is just a database that provides the stats, many of the article sources are dead and you belittle the coverage there is as routine and not worth mentioning that misses the mark. For someone from a small state with no more than 10 people in the same profession at a time this amount of variable coverage is quite significant and with Luxembourg you have the luxury that it has 4 languages and bordering larger nation press all able to gain this much coverage of it isn't the norm either. Also you have to consider Churnalism is also a factor for more popular and broadly recognized people. There is more journalistic effort by media overall to get health information on Michael Schumacher despite no new information is to be revealed (yet they keep trying and churn out status articles of nothing) than very much 80 % of the lower ladder drivers get throughout their whole career, this is not the case here - it is just that the exposure for lower division is much less and what you try to get is impossible if you want a dedicated focus only on this person but at the same time sweep aside interviews (which have more information than just the exchange of questions), written result articles that confirm the stat tables (which you also invalidate as a source, when it's a legit source when used in conjunction with text based story related to the article topic) and overall performance. I personally cannot make out with made the first today.rtl.lu more significant compared to the two following ones, except that it had two sentences written from his perspective. For the outside viewer you watch a field and dispersion and over time the better performing participants and the contesting overtakes but you don't generally just tune in one's perspective without resulting in favoritism and fandom if you just have this one perspective - It is either a rotation of various other perspectives across at-least more than half the participants per field or temporary focus on an individual for a short time. Not sure why you would need an article to be structured to be majorly from that individuals perspective when the participation is confirmed, and the outcome determined - It is conclusive. It's like focusing on the horse race jockey that eventually wins and view it from their perspective, disregarding that it's result and coverage is random and viewed from the side for the most part. We don't know that perspective will be extensively covered, for the most part it is not and that the ethics is questioned on the reliable is a good point but not really applicable here. In Fairness news report coverage address podium finishers, seasonal achievers and top 5 or top 10 with due respect but it's not significant from one's individual perspective every time. It's significant from the whole series perspective or the outside viewer that has a general interest - but not favourism - not sure how much more in-depth it should be when the approach is generally the same in that field of journalism. Keep: At first glance I don't see this source mentioned yet in the above discussion; a nearly 4-minute TV portrait on the national tv in Luxemburg (RTL). In addition to all the other coverage, this seems to go beyond routine coverage and clearly become substantial coverage about the subject in general, not just a report of one race or similar. Keep: new sources showed, WP:HEY, the coverage is not more trivial or routine. At least, should be kept per WP BASIC. Verdict: Undecided.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

17:13 IBM Pollyanna Principle. Nominated: Nothing more than a dictionary definition at best. Fails WP:GNG. Lacks reliable sources - failing WP:SIGCOV. | Delete: per nom. ? (/) Soft redirect: to wikt:IBM Pollyanna Principle. The current page is a WP:DICDEF. And I don't think there's scope to write an ency-clopedic article here ... in terms of non-dictionary-like coverage, there's <https://quoteinvestigator.com/2025/09/01/people-think> (WP:EXPERTSPS) ... and that seems to be about it AFAICT. This is the page's second deletion discussion. Moreover, the redirect has had roughly 1000 pageviews over the last decade. So the preconditions required for soft redirection hold (WP:POINTWIKT). Deletion is contraindicated per WCQuidditch, and none of the other alternatives for deletion make much sense: redirecting back to Pollyanna principle will just confuse readers given the term isn't mentioned there, and given the lack of WP:SIGCOV, merging would raise concerns about undue weight of coverage in the merge target (WP:UNDUE). Merge: to IBM MT/ST. This axiom originates from "Paperwork Explosion", which was a short film advertisement by Jim Henson for the IBM MT/ST. Paperwork Explosion is already discussed in the body of the IBM MT/ST article. Editors seem to agree that although WP:SIGCOV is not met, it is still beneficial to have an explanation of the principle somewhere on the encyclopedia. Merging a brief explanation into the IBM MT/ST article, within the same subsection which mentions the short film, is a sensible merge which also will inform the reader of the axiom's origin and its links to Henson/IBM. and Verdict: Undecided.

21:04 Chowdareddy. Nominated: Fails WP:NPOL. No significant coverage in reliable sources (more than databases) Keep: per WP:NPOL as a member of Karnataka Legislative Assembly. Keep: per WP:NPOL. Keep: ministerial office at state level is enough for WP:NPOL on its own. Verdict: Nomination withdrawn (WP:S-K1A) (non-admin closure) Warm Regards, Merged into another page.

16:42 2026 Minor League Cricket season. Nominated: I propose redirecting because, not enough WP:SIGCOV on independent reliable sources other than the WP:ROUTINE coverage, fails WP:GNG for standalone season articles... Redirect: For now it seems to make more sense to point to the proper section at Minor League Cricket than it does having no link. Verdict: Undecided.

2026-09-06

09:05 92.7 Big FM. Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP. Delete: Not seeing much either in a search. ← Keep: An Indian national radio network is the type of WP:GNG-passing (note, this is a radio station and CORP is not the correct notability guideline) entity on coverage alone where I have to question if sourcing was sought. This article is in a terrible condition, and much of its prose is so promotional it should be excised, but that's not an excuse. The article lacks information on the operating history of Big FM, which was sold last year out of insolvency after a previous sale announcement in 2019. The insolvency proceeding drew competing radio networks to bid on the network. (she/her · ·) Delete: I can't even find what format this network plays, or about any of its nationwide frequencies or local breaks (presumably they cannot all be on 92.7 FM exclusively); this needs a major rescue or just plain WP:TNT, but we can't keep this version that definitely has LLM usage and lists all over it (and no, the playbaker singing the 'brand anthem' is of no note whatsoever). • Keep: 92.7 BIG FM is a well-known radio station in India. I have added several references to the article and will try to add more. The available references provide significant coverage of the subject and support its notability under WP:GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

15:50 Battle of Sovići and Doljani. Nominated: I propose merging to Sovići and Doljani killings because there's very little content about these either way. Created by a now-blocked user, recently it was blanked and redirected there, and then an anonymous user reinstated it. Merge: per nominator's rationale. Verdict: to Sovići and Doljani killings. 09:00 House of Dar. Nominated: WP:NOTGENEALOGY - can't see any notability as distinct from Virendra Mohan Dar (that article is up for G5 deletion per WP:BRV, I haven't looked into that here). Delete: as WP:TNT. The author of 60% of the article admitted using AI to edit. Another 30% of the article was written by a temporary account and two accounts with five or fewer main-space edits (socks?). Spot checking citations, there is considerable doubt as to whether some of the books cited actually exist (not in WorldCat or any major library in Calcutta or Dhaka, no hits on Google Scholar), there are citations of page numbers that do not exist, citations of sources published decades before the event they are cited for, and citations that simply fail verification. Of eight citations I checked, only one passed, verifying a single clause. Going through the article history, I could find no clean, non-LLM hallucinated version to revert to. ~~Delete~~: everybody should know that we have never published original research, which this is certainly, and we are not Grokpedia. It's not 100% AI, but it's in there. Verdict: Merged into another page.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

15:49 Roosevelt High School (Wyoming). Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NORG. Source 1 is a database, Sources 2-4, 6-8 and 10 are local WP:ROUTINE news coverage, Source 5 is a mention, Source 9 errors out but appears to be a database entry in a historic archiving website. A search for sources only turned up primary sources, routine coverage or unreliable sources such as databases etc. A lot of partial matches as well as other schools with the same name. WP:SOLIDARITY Keep: This school article was previously nominated in June 2023 with the vote 6-1 to Keep. The original building is on the National Register of Historic Places, as verified by this Wyoming state source, listed in the article. Enough said. Keep: Coverage sufficient to satisfy WP:GNG as established at previous AfD. Keep: I see plenty of coverage. Probably only one or two alternative high schools in all of Wyoming are notable. Verdict: Merged into another page.

21:49 Animal Hospital \(video game\). Nominated: I propose merging to List of Roblox games because this fails WP:GNG as an independent article for lack of critical reception. While reliable sources have published about this game, they only confirm that it exists, is popular, and describe its gameplay mechanics. ~ Delete: I'm not seeing even the smallest hint of notability for a WP:ATD. Delete, oppose merge: The coverage here is not even sufficient to create a section for it at the Roblox games list. It is entirely routine or guide coverage, which is frequently thrown out because it is not real coverage of the game. They are solely made to generate clicks and have no thoughtful commentary about the game. No game would be notable with these citations alone, not even for a list entry. λ Delete: per NegativeMP1. Delete: Not notable for a article and has not even enough sufficient coverage for a section on the List of Roblox games page let alone a standalone article ? Verdict: There is sufficient opposition to the ATD. Merged into another page.

2026-09-12

13:40 Karam Lehal. Nominated: I have agreed a fresh AFD for this page as the previous consensus was quite weak and with the indeffing of one of the participants I don't think it's sustainable. This has been rejected at AFC so a careful look at the sources will be significant to the final consensus. The author has noted on my talkpage that they are not arguing NPORTS is met so GNG is all that is in play. Keep: Would seem to pass with the various athletic wins at the national and international or Asian level. We have enough to show GNG. Delete: Non-notable. No sports SNGs are met as suggested by the first keep vote (although I am happy to be pointed towards a specific SNG that I might somehow have missed). Both other keep votes suggest WP:GNG is met, but all the sourcing I see is incredibly routine sports coverage. I would kindly ask that the two keep voters, @ and @ demonstrate which two or three sources that show notability via WP:GNG, because I'm not even seeing one. Lots of reliable articles covering results, but all of them stop short of actually showing WP:SIGCOV of the subject other than in relation to said results. There's also lots of articles that demonstrate WP:SIGCOV, but aren't reliable and/or independent Keep: Independent sources cover his national and international-level achievements and career, supporting GNG. Keep: DNA INDIA, THE TRIBUNE, TRUE SCOOP, JAGBANI are WP:SIGCOV In independent and reliable sources, making him clearly qualified for WP:GNG. Delete: After looking at the sources, I agree with Sulfurboy in that there is a lack of reliable and independent WP:SIGCOV here to meet the WP:GNG. What is here mainly consists of routine event recaps and previews which mention the subject. Delete: per Sulfurboy, and my own check of the sources. Lots of passing mentions and bits of routine coverage, but not anything that comes close to SIGCOV. Verdict: Undecided.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

21:29 Tangulbei. Nominated: No independent sources found, fails WP:GNG AND WP:SIGCOV. Delete: I'm in agreement with the reasons stated above Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. Merged into another page.

13:41 Department of Physics, Lund University. Nominated: Delete as department does not seem individually notable as referred to in WP:SCHOOLOUTCOMES. Neither of the faculties to which the department belongs have their own articles that this page could be merged to. The really notable people seem largely to be included on Lund University. I do not think merging to Lund University would benefit the target article. Delete: Much of the page appears to sourced to a book by an emeritus professor. That is one, good count towards notability, but more are needed. The other sections which describe notable faculty do not count towards the notability of the department. If someone finds/adds more sources on the department itself I would reconsider my vote. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. (/) Merged into another page.

13:34 Eskil Skjeldal. Nominated: The subject is a Norwegian writer and columnist, previously deleted under WP:A7 (log). The cited sources verify his publications but consist mainly of publisher profiles and routine coverage, lacking the significant, independent coverage required by WP:GNG and WP:AUTTHOR. The available sourcing appears not to establish notability, even for a stub. Keep: no WP:BEFORE in the database <https://nb.no/search> has been performed. Keep: per WP:HEY. Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-13

09:58 Second Republic of China (Taiwan). Nominated: I propose draftifying because single source doesn't provide legitimacy that the term is valid. Keep: Today, I translated the article on the Chinese Wikipedia and greatly expanded its content. Therefore, the article's "draftifying" is no longer necessary. Draftify: To me the article reads like OR. The sourcing is mostly primary. For example, the section on uses of the term relies on people who used it, and not on academics who analyzed the usage independently. The first sentence in the section reads, (this is uncited because it originated from the editor who wrote the Chinese page). Verdict: Merged into another page.

10:21 Lane Kasselmann. Nominated: News websites cite him, take interviews, mention his connection to the firms he works (or worked) at, but that's it. No combination of significant coverage + reliable + independent. Redirect: to blockchain.com - we are not LinkedIn. Keep: with consideration to publications sourced on the article including The Information, Bloomberg TV, and other local newspapers, including coverage about the subject not currently on the Wikipedia article from The Dallas Morning News, which appears to speak more towards Kasselmann's actions rather than those on behalf of a company. I am biased towards keeping the article considering I wrote it, although I agree that the coverage is not as significant as it could be. The publications themselves bare weight when including Kasselmann as part of their articles. A redirect to the Blockchain.com article makes sense here should this argument not satisfy the significant coverage piece. Delete: Article reads like a CV/résumé, and I'm not seeing significant coverage of him in his own right in RS. Verdict: to Blockchain.com as an ATD. (/) Merged into another page.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

21:34 Curse of Bloody Mary. Nominated: No evidence of this British film meeting WP:NFILM. The only review I found was this. Delete: Neither WP:NFILM nor WP:GNG are met. Delete: Fails WP:GNG and WP:NFILM. The nerdlly review linked above was also the only one I was able to find (non-blog). Verdict: Merged into another page.

2026-09-13

10:46 Osgoode Constitutional Law Society. Nominated: This is a student debating club at a Canadian law school. The sources which support the article are from the school, the society or people involved in its debates. As such there is no secondary independent coverage evident, and I can find none online. The society does nto appear to pass WP:GNG, which is unsurprising, as only the most prestigious student debating societies with the longest and most illustrious histories are likely to be notable. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. I think that a law student organization, founded 14 years ago, is probably not automatically notable. I cofounded a law journal in 1990, 36 years ago, which is notable. Redirect to Osgoode Hall Law School: No independent coverage of this institution, only directories from the school and other non-RS. Could also perhaps merge a line or two into the main article about the school. Verdict: to Osgoode Hall Law School as an ATD. (/) Merged into another page.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

13:11 Paola Nogales-Ascarrunz. Nominated: Newly created page on a junior scientist who was part of the team that recently discovered the Tilcayo cat. The page on the cat credits her with playing an important role. As such there is not enough to support her notability, plus it is WP:BLP1E and WP:NOT INHERITED, but a redirect to the cat page is reasonable. Based upon her publication record to date she has made a good start, but it is WP:TOOSOON. Keep: I disagree. Keep: She and Jonas Lescroart are broadly identified as the coauthors of the paper responsible for describing the species, with Nogales-Ascarrunz recognized as the person responsible for recognizing that there was something unique about the tilcayo population (Reuters, NBC News, BBC). The exceptionally broad coverage of this discovery universally describes it as significant for being the first instance of a living species of cat being described for over a century. This alone is enough to fulfill the standards of WP:NACADEMIC's criteria 1b for people who have "made a significant discovery". This is the scientific equivalent of someone winning a medal at the Olympics—perhaps not the equivalent of a gold in a popular sport (that would be a Nobel Prize), but a medal nevertheless. Best, ~ Delete: TOOSOON and is the junior author on the discovery paper. This is very recent and could turn out to be dis-proven as a theory. Has not had enough critical review of the work to show notability. Redirect: to Tilcayo per Oaktree b and nom. (/) Weak delete: or Redirect. Seconding voorts and Pbritti above. -Wiki Draftify: since the article is new. Keep: as seen in WP:NACADEMIC: "The person's research has had a significant impact in their scholarly discipline, broadly construed, as demonstrated by independent reliable sources." This is confirmed by the high amount of independent sources that still are writing about her work and contribution to identifying the first new species of feline in over 100 years. Keep: This is one of the two lead co-authors of a significant peer-reviewed article in a major science journal, Current Biology. This is the article which generated the wide level of interest in the general press (her name search shows up with "About 107,000 results" in Wikipedia Reference Search) due to the discovery of first new species in the cat family confirmed in over one hundred years. Besides being co-lead-author of the paper, she is the person who recognized the distinctness of the only known individual of the newly-recognized species and followed up by substantiating that distinctiveness with a wide study using modern DNA techniques of a large sample of the known members of the family. Her notability is clear even though the article was only recently published. Of all the new articles that are created each month, I am aghast this is one that is immediately pulled into AfD. Keep: as article is new and may develop if given the chance Keep: the article already mentions more than one activity she took part on, if that's a concern to anybody, and she is certainly gaining notability. (Although, if it were up to me, the way the AfD is worded mentioning her being a "junior" scientist should really be grounds to dismiss the AfD overall... it's a level of nonsense that shouldn't be used for a good-faith discussion on notability... what's seniority got to do with doing something notable or outstanding?) Delete: The cat discovery is WP:BIO1E and she is not close to passing WP:PROF. Keep: per above discussion, and especially per . She has been recognized in reliable sources as discoverer of a species. Unlike a few others, she is the face, along with the cat itself, of this major discovery. Verdict: Several editors proposed deletion, redirection, or draftification, especially early in the discussion. Consensus was to keep a standalone biography based on recent in-depth news coverage and WP:NACADEMIC. Merged into another page.

22:05 Michał Hir. Nominated: I see no evidence of this young MMA fighter meeting WP:GNG or WP:SPORTBASIC. All sources are routine fight results/pre-fight promo. Delete: Fails WP:NMA as he is currently ranked #499 in his division by fightmatrix having just lost to the fighter then ranked #827. That's a long way from the top 10. Coverage of individual bouts is insufficient to meet WP:GNG. So far there's nothing to show he's anything WP notable. Delete: Fails NMMA and GNG. Verdict: Merged into another page.

12:52 Ruth Colvin Clark. Nominated: Bad sourced. Note tag, coi tag and no secondary coverage on a WP:BLP. Fails WP:SIGCOV, WP:BIO. Potentially notable. Keep: In addition to the review that is already in the article, a cursory search found . That's looking like a weak pass of WP:NAUTHOR. The relatively solid looking citation record leads me to a keep !vote without the "weak". Keep: The dilemma here is that this person would pass NACADEMIC except that they do not appear to have been in an academic institution. However, their works are cited in G-scholar, published by a reputable publisher, with reviews in scholarly journals. This meets NAUTHOR. Verdict: withdrawn. Merged into another page.

12:31 Conrad Barnard. Nominated: Non-notable player, doesn't appear to have made it past the professional/domestic leagues. Search results are only showing just stats and brief mentions from match reports. Keep: If you restrict the search results to French-language sources there does appear to be enough to satisfy the GNG in my opinion, with the caveat that these sites are largely paywalled. It's apparent however from what is visible that the coverage of Barnard's career in French professional rugby (two of which Ive added) goes beyond passing mentions & match reports. Keep: Per Jevansen, just enough for a GNG pass in my opinion. I think more could be found in a more detailed search of South African sourcing also given his career. Verdict: / withdrawn per WP:HEY. Merged into another page.

12:21 Fairest of Them All (film). Nominated: No evidence that this low-budget video on demand movie passes WP:NFILM. The sources are all links to where the movie can be streamed or to movie database/WP:USERGENERATED review sites. The only review cited in the article was published on a self-published blog (). Draftification was reverted by the page creator without improvement, so bringing it to AfD for consensus. Delete: per the lack of significant coverage in reliable sources. I did not find reliable sources in my searches for sources. I found a review from Girls with Guns but it is not a reliable source. This article from Bloody Disgusting largely contains quotes from people affiliated with the film so is insufficiently independent. The subject does not pass Wikipedia:Notability#General notability guideline. The director (Kunahan Thampi) does not have a Wikipedia article, but three of the actresses (Danielle Ronald, Kelly Rian Sanson, and Natasha Tosini) have Wikipedia articles and one of the editors (Scott Chambers) has a Wikipedia article. I did not see a clear redirect target, so I support deletion. If a good redirect target is found, I support a redirect with the history preserved under the redirect per Wikipedia:Deletion policy#Alternatives to deletion. Verdict:

Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. (/) Merged into another page.

12:04 Enzo Aliaga-Rossel. Nominated: Newly created page on a junior scientist who was part of the team that recently discovered the Tilcayo cat. The page on the cat does not describe him in any detail, just as one of the authors. As such there is not enough to support his notability, plus it is WP:BLP1E and WP:NOT INHERITED. Based upon his publication record to date he has made a good start, but it is WP:TOOSOON. Delete: Unlike Paola Nogales-Ascarrunz, who media reports consistently credit with substantially contributing to the significant discovery that the tilcayo is a novel species, Aliaga-Rossel has received almost no coverage. According to NACADEMIC's criteria 1b, major discoveries have to be attributed to an individual in order for it to contribute towards their notability. Thus far, he has only been cursorily mentioned in a few RSs that list all the authors on the paper that described the species. A redirect to the species is inappropriate, as his work is not uniquely associated with any specific subject. Best, ~ Delete: Not seeing evidence of a pass of WP:NPROF or WP:GNG due to lack of coverage. WP:TOOSOON at best as things stand. Delete: per @ and @. Since there is no deadline, we will be able to add him eventually should he become truly WP:NOTABLE. Weak delete: per WP:TOOSOON. , please don't be embarrassed to have created this, or any article. I've created a couple of articles about pop musicians whose careers went nowhere, including one about that infamous young woman who jumped into a fountain because she got a "golden ticket" on American Idol; her career flopped, although at the time many people thought she was up and coming. Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

11:30 Mugaputhagam. Nominated: Subject is a short film released in 2011 that does not have enough sources with significant coverage to meet WP:NFSOURCES. The reception section does not contain two or more full-length reviews and the film was not widely distributed. Many of the other sources merely mention the film in passing as part of the director's debut work. The only potentially usable source I could identify is this Indian Express article, which provides brief coverage of the film and could potentially be considered a capsule review. The other reviews are by non-notable individuals and were published on blogs, making them unsuitable for establishing notability. This should either be redirected to Atlee_(director)#Career as an WP:ATD-R or deleted.

Fails WP:NFLIM Redirect: to Atlee (director)#Career per nom. As the article creator, I had not realized that CDTV in was in fact a blog and that the other reviews were capsule reviews. Firstpost is unreliable per the Indian cinema taskforce. Merge:: Every single information sans the unreliable CDTV should be shifted to Atlee's article. Verdict: to Atlee (director)#Career. History is there if there is material to be merged Merged into another page.

11:17 Heartburn in pregnancy. Nominated: I propose merging to Heartburn because of the duplication with the existing "In Pregnancy" section. There's no doubt that the topic is important, but both pages are sufficiently short that there is no need to split the content. Regardless of the merge outcome, the overlap or duplication should be resolved. Keep: Major topics in pregnancy would be best to be separated out. Lots of literature to support having a stand alone article and this could simply be expanded further. We should also often have separate articles for pediatrics. (· · email) Verdict: Merged into another page.

10:59 ChiTownBio. Nominated: I'm not seeing evidence that this meets WP:GNG. The only sources I see are either not reliable, not independent, or WP:CORPTRIV level discussion that does not constitute significant coverage? (|) Delete: per nom. ? (/) Verdict: Counting the author's comments as a !vote for retention, I still see consensus to delete based on the strength of sourcing. Merged into another page.

09:26 Islam in Lesotho. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG. The article also has 2 sources and the first one doesn't mention anything about religion, it says about South Asian migrants in the country. Also I have covered information on Islam in Lesotho in Religion in Lesotho#Minority Religions Redirect: to Religion in Lesotho#Minority Religions per nom. I also haven't found GNG-worthy coverage in Google Scholar. Verdict: to Religion in Lesotho#Minority Religions. Merged into another page.

08:55 Space Station 14. Nominated: Propose a WP:MERGE with Space Station 13 on the basis of WP:OVERLAP and WP:MERGECON. This is a remake of SS13 that is visually and mechanically very close; differences only lie in points of comparison to the original. This is a very complex game, and the context and sourcing necessary to understand what the game is, and how one plays it, is substantially based in the SS13 article. PC Gamer is the only clear RS here, so I'm not sure it meets WP:GNG either. In terms of the elements specific to SS14, namely its development and differentiation from SS13, the article is heavily sourced from WP:PRIMARY development logs and I don't believe that level of detail is necessary to migrate. Whether more sourcing is found or not, my view is a reader ultimately can only understand the subject matter of SS14 by reading the SS13 article, or functionally duplicating its gameplay section. Merge: Got some reliable coverage but not enough to indicate it passes WP:GNG. Merge: not enough coverage. Verdict: to Space Station 13. Merged into another page.

08:36 Alex Breingan. Nominated: The notability of this person relies almost entirely on his involvement in an ongoing fraud case, and bearing in mind WP:BIO1E the event does not seem rare or unusual enough for a participant to warrant a separate article. This is a major role in what is a relatively minor incident. Information on Breingan would be better off in another article regarding the news story. I don't think Breingan would meet WP:GNG absent the fraud case. Keep: the subject has some notability as a TV producer/writer, the article is well sourced from multiple, independent, reputable sources. See the 2024 delection discussion. Delete:

the crime isn't notable and hasn't been found guilty, so that's not notable. I don't see much coverage from before the fraud items to show he was a notable TV executive. Limited coverage, mostly confirming involvement on various Tv projects. Could perhaps be notable if he's found guilty, but the trial is a long way from conclusion, so it's too early. Delete: yes he was an Emmy Awards Judge for some iemmys according to a directory source but they are only trivial mentions. I have cleaned up the article who only had trivial mentions of Breingan. Nothing really notable as a producer. Maybe will be notable yes if he's found guilty. Welcome to see the revisions on the article but being a channel founder too was only trivial mentions as well as other articles. Keep: the sources show notability, and as far as I can see, nothing has changed since the 2024 delection discussion. The fraud case does appear to be notable in the sense that multiple reputable sources have written about it. Keep: I don't see anything particularly wrong with this; it says repeatedly that he's fighting the charges. He's otherwise notable. I tend to be much pickier about producers, but the outcomes here have kept about 1/3. The allegations are not minor: they involve millions of dollars. Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

07:24 2024–25 PJHL season. Nominated: The local news sources on this page give routine coverage to what appears to be a children's ice hockey league in the Ottawa area. Therefore does not pass WP:GNG. The sourcing does not support the name, using a slightly different combination of letters. This has sat in the NPP backlog since early 2025, and no reviewer has accepted it as having sufficient sourcing up until now. A ruling from AfD would be useful here. Delete: Per WP:NSEASONS. As Flibirigit pointed out, junior ice hockey is not the same as youth ice hockey, and the league itself is certainly independently notable. However, there's no inherent notability to individual season coverage of a fourth-tier amateur league. Verdict: Merged into another page.

08:17 Islam in Samoa. Nominated: I propose merging to Religion in Samoa because. The article is very small and its contents are already mentioned in the Religion in Samoa page. WP:MERGE. Merge: No UNDUE issues. Verdict: to Religion in Samoa. Merged into another page.

10:51 Fortified gateway. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Gatehouse because that term is more natural in English, also covering unfortified structures like Layer Marney Tower. The simplest fortified entrances, merely an arch or gap in the defensive circuit, can probably be covered in city gate, medieval fortification and castle inasmuch as they need discussion at all. Redirect: I think the title may be too vague to redirect simply to gatehouse. Rather, it should probably be redirected to Gate but no opposition on merging the content elsewhere if necessary. Merge: to Gate. After reviewing the related articles I think the general overview at gate is best for redirecting, as gatehouse is, IMO, a more specific thing that not all fortified gateways qualify as. There do appear to be at least some sourced elements that could profitably be selectively merged. Support: Gatehouse is the better article and the common term. Merge: (so, more than direct) to Gatehouse. Some items listed should be incorporated. The coat of arms section should be carried over, too. Verdict: to Gatehouse. Merged into another page.

17:24 Egg fried rice protests. Nominated: I propose merging to Wang Gang (chef) because this meme ultimately has very dubious long-term notability except the incident with Wang Gang. This meme is infinitely smaller than the much popular Kirkification and Charlie Kirk memes. Considering those don't have dedicated articles, it feels very undue to have a specific article on this. Keep: Article creator; I'm not sure a merge is appropriate, the "event" has taken place over several years with coverage from 2021 onwards in multiple countries, showing independent notability. Few mention the chef, if at all. Keep: per GNG. The merge is undesirable as not all coverage of it is related to Wang Gang (chef), for similar reasons we shouldn't merge to Mao Anying. It is not hard to figure out why, for example, Radio Free Asia decided to cover this, but from a Wikipedia standpoint, biased sources are acceptable. Keep: per GNG. The sources already in the article are sufficient to establish notability, and additional Chinese-language sources could further support it. Whether other memes have articles is beside the point, and we should only judge this topic on its own sources. That comparison is an OTHERSTUFF argument. Only a few of the sources mention the chef, which also makes a merge undesirable. Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

18:22 Mia Silverman. Nominated: American content creator (BLP). This article was much longer, but it was so poorly sourced that almost all the content has been removed by other editors as unacceptable sourcing. The remaining stub is entirely sourced from social media. I am unsure whether the subject is really notable (the news coverage all seems trivial and primary, rather than reliable source coverage), but I would like to propose that we delete this regardless of notability, since no version in this page's history has ever been acceptable. It would probably be the best thing to apply WP:TNT, while leaving open the possibility that someone might in future create an article based on genuinely reliable sources that establish her notability. Keep: per WP:HEY - fixed the sourcing to make it exclusively to reliable sources, except for one primary source TikTok. Meets notability through People, News24, and The Independent. Delete: per modified nom and ensuing discussion. This subject is heavily involved in interview-derived human-interest stories where she exercises substantial contribution and control to the point that the sources lack true independence. To be fair, it's hard for even reputable sources to critically report about a subject's health claims and events around them, but the hand of the subject is nonetheless clear in those sources. Meanwhile, the non-policy, non-guideline WP:ESSAY at WP:INTERVIEW is not dispositive and the legalistic technical formatting argument that these interviews are not somehow interviews is not persuasive. Few if any sources have covered this subject without her own participation, providing a direct platform for WP:SPS/WP:BLPSPS claims. They're essentially WP:PRIMARY in substance if not form, and the difference matters not a jot. Keep: per WP:HEY. Cutting out poor sources is as important as adding reliable sources. Delete: The People article is the only one in a RS, perhaps the Independent, but those are really only two sources. Student media isn't used to show notability. I can only bring up the People source in my searches, the rest are in non-RS like Newsweek.. We don't have enough to write an article. Delete: I don't see extensive coverage from news sources about her and the social media statistics above are also revealing. Could also be a case of too soon as the "50 food" allergy aspect might be a catalyst for future exposure and growth as an internet personality. Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

13:54 John G. Burnett. Nominated: This whole article is a massive violation of WP:NOR. There's zero evidence John Burnett is notable; every single source on Burnett as a person is a primary source. Based on the claims made in this article, it seems possible that the letter attributed to Burnett is notable as a fabrication, but those claims don't hold up either. Of the four sources the article offers, two do not mention it ([https://www.jstor.org/stable/40189170?seq=3]. A volume published by the OK Historical Society does discuss it in depth, as does Larry Vogt's self-published paper on the topic. (In his bio attached to this source, Vogt identifies himself as being affiliated with "Vogt-Dautzenlein Historical Research"; he does not appear to have any scholarly credentials or affiliations.) The rest of the sources here are primary sources or the page creator's own assessments and conclusions, and certainly unsuitable for Wikipedia per WP:NOT. If there were additional reliable sources beyond the OK Hist Society on the Burnett letter, I could see keeping a standalone page on that topic, or I could see a very limited discussion being added on the Trail of Tears page (where this page's creator has added Vogt's self-published work as a source), but solely using reliable sources. However, nothing using this material should be retained given its status as original research and its reliance on self-published material. Delete: everybody should know that we have never published original research. We have never, ever adjudicated the truth: we are not peer reviewed. We have a very specific mission, and if we stray too far from that, our critics, including powerful men in Palm Beach and Boca Chica want to use that flimsy excuse to yank our charitable status, which would cripple us financially. If you don't know any of that, then you need to read a current newspaper, not grandpa's letters. Delete: original research wholly from primary sources; while a praiseworthy endeavour, this is not something that belongs on Wikipedia. Keep: I'm finding pieces about him in the "literature" of the event. This book has at least 3 pages about him. Some books and articles are promising but I don't have access, e.g. Cherokee women and the trail of tears, No settled law, Coerced migration. A G-Scholar search turns up some promising items (that I can't get to). There are also all of the books listed in the article, with page numbers, and those should surely arrive at GNG. The citations in the article are not correctly formatted and the primary sources are emphasized, but that seems to be a misunderstanding of Wikipedia style. If keep isn't acceptable to most I would suggest to draftify, and suggest that the editor ask for help at the WP:TEAHOUSE. I can help with formatting but don't have enough access to the materials to work on the content. Draftify: Based on the article content, he is likely notable. The paper brought up by the nom discusses why the letter is questionable, this indicates that there should be some prior coverage that takes the letter at face value, which would make the article notable. But the only coverage I can find just quotes the letter or even fully reproduces it without providing any critical commentary. For example, I can access only the first of three pages in the book mentioned above, but I see mostly a partial reproduction of the letter. An additional piece of coverage that relies on the creator's paper is from World History Encyclopedia, but its reliability is questionable. Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

18:28 The Daily Standard (Ohio). Nominated: No indication that this meets WP:GNG. Delete: Per nom; the coverage I could find is too brief/routine to establish WP:GNG. Do not delete: I thought the purpose of a stub is to initially establish the existence of an article. I'm not very knowledgeable about creating stubs, but I've added several references as well as details about its age, continued existence and significance. I think choosing deletion is a hasty decision. It's a small town newspaper, well established, so no one seems to have much interest in working on this newly created article yet. Keep: One of the oldest newspapers in Ohio. Celina was historically an important community. Verdict: The keep rationales are based on arguments to avoid and not grounded in guidelines. (/) Merged into another page.

21:09 Freedom of the press in China. Nominated: I propose merging to Censorship in China because the contents of this page are duplicative and covered there already. Any novel tidbits from this page can be merged into Censorship in China (and Mass media in China where appropriate). Merge: per nom. Yes, there was a prior discussion, but back then no one properly explained how the two subjects differ substantively. One Keep voter even proposed to discuss a merge at the talk page. This was also an interesting perspective, . Keep: There is sufficient coverage for the subject to stand by itself, ex. . Keep: Freedom of the press is notable on its own. I would worry about info being lost in a merge. Duplicative information can be pointed out and adjusted accordingly. The article should if anything be expanded. Keep:: I think this better supports a case for expansion and cleanup rather than a merge. There are many Freedom of the press in xyz articles already; I think China particularly should be kept because, given its scale/influence and track record on this, I am sure that there is enough material to make for a substantial standalone article. If we were to merge it, it probably wouldn't take long for any expansion efforts to result in another such article. . / Verdict: Merged into another page.

SUNDAY 20 SEPTEMBER

07:31 Britain–Australia Society. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Australia–United Kingdom relations because huge portions of the article are unsourced. Their website implies that they were founded in 1976, but the article says 1971 (). I can't find enough relevant information to rewrite the article. Verdict: Merged into another page.

22:17 Ramadame Raphaël. Nominated: An article about a living person based entirely on a single primary source. Even based on that source, there's nothing to suggest she would be notable under any subject-specific notability guidelines (e.g. the most significant claim is probably about the publication of her poem in a literary journal). I've conducted a WP:BEFORE search and been unable to find any significant coverage about her or her work that would contribute to WP:GNG. Delete: poorly sourced; one citation is not enough for a BLP. Verdict: Merged into another page.

06:50 Hårn (campaign set). Nominated: I propose merging to Hårn because these two articles cover the same subject. Hårn (campaign set) is a description of the role-playing game, Hårn seems to have started as description of the island from the role-playing game, but currently describes the role-playing game itself, too. I propose merging to the article without disambiguator parentheses. Merge: per nominator's rationale. I think this article could have probably been merged boldly. It never hurts to get consensus, but if it isn't a controversial topic you can just go ahead and merge it. If there is any disagreement, which rarely happens, you could bring it here to resolve that and get outside input.

Oppose; this merge as suggested, with alternative options. I have been debating this one to myself for a few days. Oppose: I agree with , these are two different animals, one being the campaign world overall (a concept), and one being a specific product. A bit of editing to both articles should make it clear. I would also support a name change to Harn Regional Module, since that is actually the name of the product. keep: and do not merge. There may be a good editorial reason to merge, but the arguments for doing so (duplicate) are just wrong. Keep: per BOZ. There is also HårnMaster, another game set in the same world. Verdict: Undecided.

06:27 Almería Public Library. Nominated: Fails WP:N. Not to mention it's a very short article page and there's only one reference. Verdict: - Spanish-language sources found to qualify article for GNG. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

06:10 Charles Knyvett of Hamerton. Nominated: I propose redirecting to :Henry VIII (play) on the basis of :WP:NOPAGE: - the target article already mentions Knyvett as the original of a minor character. Some of the content + sources in the CK article are worth adding to the target article, to clarify further his relationship to the Duke of Buckingham. The rest of the content is purely genealogical. Oppose: This content is pretty tangential to the play, and adding it there would be far deeper background than anything else there.. Oppose: This is an independent subject that could only be inserted into the Henry VIII (play) article with great awkwardness. Oppose: This person appears to be of considerable historical interest. Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

04:57 Media Scape. Nominated: Stub about an art project(?), no footnotes. BEFORE shows some mentions in passing. If this is notable, which is not clear (nothing in the text suggests it is), a WP:TNT approach is needed. | Verdict: 's argument for retention carries no P&G weight, but there's no quorum for deletion. Merged into another page.

04:18 Miss Manipur. Nominated: Fails WP:GNG and relies heavily on WP:ROUTINE coverage. Verdict: Based on minimal participation, this uncontroversial nomination is treated as a soft deletion. Editors can request the article's undeletion for any reason. (/) Merged into another page.

04:08 Alex Draper. Nominated: No evidence of notability under WP:NACTOR; he appears to have had only one major role that qualifies there. And I'm not seeing any independent, reliable source WP:SIGCOV of him in the article or in my BEFORE search, so I don't see a WP:GNG pass here either. Keep: Passes

WP:NACTOR as he has had a significant role in a notable film (Kaalapani) and in notable TV programmes (Phoenix Rise, East-enders). Also nominated for an RTS award. Redirect: to Phoenix Rise (TV series) as an WP:ATD. That series so far has been his only major role. Kaalapani had another Alex Draper as an actor. Verdict: to Phoenix Rise (TV series). Merged into another page.

02:35 Astromech (company). Nominated: Fails WP:NCORP: all available sources appear to amount to inherited notability WP:CORPTRIV. I think merging this article into either Ben Lamm or George Church (geneticist) would be appropriate, with a preference for the former as a redirect target (though this company warrants mention on both articles). ? (|) Weak keep: it is kind of topic that will continue to receive coverage and is already a unicorn. I think this article is helpful. Keep: I don't think the coverage is limited to Ben Lamm or George Church. There are multiple independent sources that cover Astromech directly, including D Magazine, Axios, GamesBeat, and Dallas Business Journal. These reports discuss the company itself, its creation as a Colossal Biosciences spin-off, its research, funding and valuation. Delete: This is a company therefore GNG/WP:NCORP requires at least two deep or significant sources with each source containing "Independent Content" showing in-depth information on the company. "Independent content", in order to count towards establishing notability, must include original and independent opinion, analysis, investigation, and fact checking that are clearly attributable to a source unaffiliated to the subject. I'm unable to identify any references that meet the criteria for establishing notability. Merge: to Ben Lamm and George Church (geneticist). There is a lot of coverage, but most of it is inherited as per the nominator. However, given the depth of coverage, I think the underlying subject matter still passes WP:GNG and should be covered somewhere. The contents of the article should be folded in to Lamm and Church's bios. and Delete: There isn't coverage. What is there is routine coverage. Its fails WP:SIRS, WP:ORGIND, WP:CORPTRIV and WP:NCORP. Verdict: to Ben Lamm#Career. I see consensus against standalone retention, and no valid argument against the proposed ATD. Editors are of course welcome to merge portions into any other article. Merged into another page.

15:35 Marc Cenedella. Nominated: Several-time possible candidate for office (but who never actually ran) and businessman who has run a not very well-known company. He does not appear to have received significant coverage in either his possible political campaigns or business career. The article reads far more like a promotional CV than anything else. If deletion is not an agreeable outcome, it's possible that this article could be merged to TheLadders.com. Weak merge to TheLadders.com:: I think the article could pass WP:BASIC, given the coverage in Politico, NYTimes, and The Atlantic. However, his run was abortive and coverage was not enduring (WP:10YT), his later political work got zero substantial coverage, and virtually all other coverage is related to TheLadders.com. Keep:: First, WP:BIO says that If the depth of coverage in any given source is not substantial, then multiple independent sources may be combined to demonstrate notability. As the user above mentioned, this article meets WP:BASIC and WP:GNG criteria. Politico, The New York Times, and The Atlantic are all reliable sources that mention the subject. Cenedella is also quoted in The Washington Post . In addition, TheLadders.com is a notable company, and Marc Cenedella is similarly notable. Merge: selectively as suggested and as reasonable in these circumstances. Keep: Meets WP:GNG through significant coverage specifically about him in Politico, the New York Times, The Atlantic, the Washington Post. Merge: per above. (/) Merge: The subject probably just meets the threshold for notability, but both articles are very sparse and better context can be offered by merging. No objection to a standalone article if coverage of the subject unrelated to TheLadders.com is published down the line. Verdict: to TheLadders.com. Notability of the subject is a good argument against deletion, but not a valid one against merger, where editorial considerations such as WP:MERGEREASON and WP:PAGE-DECIDE dominate. Merged into another page.

13:52 2026 Sangareddy Municipal Council election. Nominated: I propose merging to 2026 Telangana local elections because, not enough WP:SIGCOV specific to this council, other than the general Telangana elections coverage.. No need for a separate standalone article. Merge: per nom. On other examples shown above, it is my opinion that these would not meet WP:CONTINUEDCOVERAGE, WP:LASTING, WP:SUSTAINED to constitute their own stand-alone articles either (on OTHERSTUFFGENERAL, that would more likely be a case of, but that is a larger problem of UK local election coverage in the en.wiki (as these articles seem to be created almost automatically by users without actual considerations on SIGCOV) that cannot be properly addressed individually. Merge: to 2026 Telangana local elections. Ultimately, the municipality is too small, with only 60,000 voters. Regarding coverage, there are these pieces, but they are mostly about Jagga Reddy and can be incorporated into the article on him. Other than that, we have a list of candidates, which doesn't feel encyclopedic. Verdict: to 2026 Telangana local elections. Merged into another page.

18:07 Bogdan Nesvit. Nominated: Ukrainian entrepreneur (BLP). This is a case of WP:REFBOMB and I haven't checked everything, but the sources all seem to be puff pieces, brief mentions, or coverage of his company. I can't see anything here amounting to sustained coverage in reliable sources independent of the subject, as required for WP:BASIC. Redirect: to Holywater Tech, a company he founded. I did not find anything substantial about him. Redirect: as suggested, to Holywater Tech, and as reasonable in these circumstances. Keep: WP BASIC. Sources exist and not puff pieces only. I found him pretty good covered in local and international media separately, not only as a name in company news. I am not counting interviews. Refbombs should be removed and better sources added like The Guardian, Deutsche Welle and so on. Keep: three independent publications have written about Nesvit in an independent manner and on various occasions between

2022 and 2026, which meets WP:BASIC. Keep: per CatoNeugroni
Redirect: Pretty tenuous sourcing described above for a WP:BLP.
Most of it is about the company and the Guardian article is mostly about Ukraine industry as well as other companies. Even the redirect target looks like a brochure for the company. Verdict: to Holywater Tech. Despite two detailed keep participants, I see the policy argument slightly in favor of redirect; Because two sources are business publications, which typically highlight entrepreneurs as suboptimal for WP:BLP. 00:06 Giorgio Lenzi. Nominated: Italian priest (BLP). Sources are a routine bio and a passing mention: there isn't anything that would amount to sustained coverage of the kind needed to satisfy WP:BASIC. He also does not seem to rise to the level indicated by WP:RELPEOPLE. Delete: too soon as per , with a re-visit later if and when he gets promoted further. The title of Procurator (Catholic canon law) sounds prestigious, and is confusing, because it's used in civil law as a prosecutor or other jurist, but this title is more like a treasurer, bursar, or purser. Thank you for clarifying for the record. Delete: fails WP:GNG and WP:NBISHOP. He is a Procurator, basically an ambassador to the Vatican. Verdict: Merged into another page.

03:13 Winnie-the-Pooh: Blood and Honey 3. Nominated: I propose draftifying because the film has no set release date, there are no reviews, all citations are about casting, "first looks", self published articles, and poster art. I previously moved it to DRAFT, but creator moved it back. I think it should be in DRAFT until release (or closer to release) when it can pass WP:NFILM Merge: into – the existing section could just be updated, and wait until it meets NFILM to create a standalone article. — (she/her · · email)

Keep: The film has been shoot in full and is almost certainly (barring some disaster) going to be released eventually. It's Wikipedia standard to have articles on films once they've began production (filming). Delete: I also agree with deleting the page, as the draft is superior (even though I think it requires a cleanup). Delete: Not a notable standalone subject at this time and there is a superior draft for the subject. Verdict: Undecided.

02:52 Syed Iqbal. Nominated: I do not see a pass of WP:GNG for this local Indian mayor. The only coverage that exists about him is WP:ROUTINE and WP:MILL coverage of his election as mayor, the same coverage any mayor would get. Per WP:NPOL, local political officials are not inherently notable. Beyond that, this article deserves WP:TNT for vague LLM-generated language (, ,) Delete: Fails WP:NPOL and WP:GNG. Delete: for lack of significant coverage, and failing our standards for politicians. Thousands of politicians are not notable, myself included. Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

Does not appear to meet WP:NCORP - sources are blogs, promo, interviews, etc. In solidarity, Delete: Cannot locate any sources that meet WP:CORPDEPTH. Delete: for lack of significant coverage. Also, we are not CrunchBase. Verdict: (/) Merged into another page.

01:29 Walid Mohamed Hussain. Nominated: I propose redirecting or straight deletion because this subject lacks the needed WP:SIGCOV to adequately meet the WP:GNG. Delete: No redirect target from what I saw. Delete: Maybe redirect to 1984

Summer Olympics or 1988 Summer Olympics. However just appearing there is not notable on its own. I couldn't find sources on him. Redirect: to Egypt at the 1984 Summer Olympics#Judo. Subject fails GNG due to a lack of SIGCOV. A hatnote can be added at this target to point to Mr. Hussain's participation in the 1988 games. I oppose deletion. Redirect: He is now listed in both the Egypt at the 1984 Summer Olympics and Egypt at the 1988 Summer Olympics articles. Nothing to show he merits an individual article, but certainly shouldn't be completely deleted. Redirect: as suggested, by to Egypt at the 1984 Summer Olympics#Judo, and as reasonable in these circumstances. Verdict: to Egypt at the 1984 Summer Olympics#Judo. (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

01:26 Dororonpa!. Nominated: I do not think this series is notable. I attempted to look for sources that were independent, reliable, secondary, and significant in Japanese and English, and I found one source on Natalie that discussed it in detail. Everything else I find on the subject is primary, unreliable, or lacks significant coverage; therefore, I believe the subject fails WP:GNG. Keep: TV shows broadcast by major networks are generally kept per WP:B-CASTOUTCOMES. Article has also been greatly improved since the nomination. ~~~~~ Verdict: (non-admin closure) Merged into another page.

01:22 Henry Earl. Nominated: Not notable and exploitative. Previously deleted as a BLP violation this article was recreated after the subject's death. Delete: After reading the article I can't see anything remotely notable about this person. Keep: GNG is met, coverage is sustained, BLP or derivatives do not apply. I'll note that this article had previously been the subject of an off-wiki discussion, but that was 13 years ago, well before Earl's death. Delete: Without doubting 's good faith, I find myself in the rare position of arguing for the deletion of a subject that technically meets GNG. This is, in my opinion, an instance of what used to be called yellow journalism: singling out someone for having been arrested an unusual number of times. The additional details about him busking and being popular do not amount to coverage of the man as a person; we know almost nothing about his biography. Not everything reporters choose to write about is encyclopedic, and alive or dead, this topic skirts close to pointing and laughing, in my opinion. Keep: exploitative? Yes. Significant coverage? Yes, even pre-deprecated Newsweek. Delete: I don't see a pass at criminal notability. The numerous arrests could be notable, but I don't see enough coverage outside of the area to show this was more than a local "celebrity" for lack of a better term. "Man gets arrested, again" are about what the articles talk about. There isn't much for coverage outside of this fact, and nothing since his passing. Verdict: Undecided.

01:19 Jules Randrianarivelo. Nominated: I propose 'either redirecting or outright deletion because this subject lacks the WP:SIGCOV to meet the WP:GNG. The only reference in the article is a database, and I'm not finding anything better elsewhere to show notability. Redirect: to Madagascar at the 1984 Summer Olympics (ranked #72), as he did not advance in the 1980 edition. Redirect: to Madagascar at the 1984 Summer Olympics#Marathon. Subject fails GNG due to a lack of SIGCOV. A hatnote can be added to the target to point to Mr. Randrianarivelo's participation in the 1980 Summer Olympics. Keep: It is a main athlete in the history of Madagascar. He is still the National record holder in both the 10,000 metres and marathon since 1979. His achievement at the 1980 Summer Olympics with the 25th place, was the best Olympic achievement for the nation ever. I added the content to the article. Keep: per WP:HEY. Redirect: to Madagascar at the 1984 Summer Olympics#Marathon. Keep: notable person in Mafagascar, with coverage. Verdict: Undecided.

01:10 Mohamed Anwar Kharot. Nominated: I propose redirecting to Afghanistan at the 1948 Summer Olympics#Football because of a lack of WP:SIGCOV. Article was mass created at a time when all Olympians were presumed to be notable, but this is no longer the case and the WP:GNG isn't met here. Redirect: to Afghanistan at the 1948 Summer Olympics#Football as requested. Redirect: as above. Redirect: as proposed, and as reasonable in these circumstances. Verdict: to Afghanistan at the 1948 Summer

17:07 Garl Harrold. Nominated: American guide in the Florida Everglades (BLP). This has been tagged for notability for the last six months. The sources are mainly about the Everglades, just mentioning the subject briefly. Only one source concentrates on the subject at all, and that appears to be a somewhat promotional feature (note the link to the subject's website at the bottom).
